REDS 74 MILES FROM AUSTRIA IN BIG DRIVE

German Line Ripped on 110 Mile Front.

LONDON, Dec. 3 [Sunday]—(AP).—Russian motorized troops, in a great break-thru on a 110 mile front in western Hungary, yesterday raced to within 74 miles of the ore rich Austrian province of Styria. Other Russian troops sped 30 miles up the right bank of the Danube to within 43 miles south of imperiled Budapest.

Overrunning 300 localities south and southwest of Budapest, Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3d Ukraine army in its double drive also cut the Budapest-Zagreb-Trieste trunk railway and hurled the enemy back onto the flat plains 28 miles from strategic Lake Balaton guarding the southeastern approaches to Austria.

Lake Balaton is a 48 mile long water barrier which the Russians are threatening to reach in another day or two. The lake's northeastern tip is 50 miles southwest of Budapest and the southwestern end is only 38 miles from the Austrian frontier.

Break Called Tragic.

Berlin, describing the break-thru as "tragic," said soviet spearheads moving up the Danube's west bank already were attacking Dunafoidvar, 43 miles from the Hungarian capital.

Among the important strongholds and communication centers taken in the swift Russian advances were Paks and Szekszard, 54 and 77 miles south of Budapest, and Kaposvar 95 miles southwest of Budapest and 74 miles from the Austrian frontier.

Advance in Slovakia.

In Czechoslovakia Col. Gen. Ivan Petrov's 4th Ukraine army stabbed to within two miles of the big northeastern Hungarian rail city of Satoraljauphely, cut that city's railway link with Kassa [Kosice] in eastern Slovakia, and also severed a main highway as it moved westward six miles on a 30 mile front beyond the Ondava river.

The Russians in Slovakia were only 15 miles from Kassa, major axis stronghold controling traffic in the eastern part of the axis puppet state.

BOMBER-AN-HOUR RATE RETURNING TO WILLOW RUN

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 2 [Special].—The Ford Motor company announced today that, under a new army schedule, production of four engined Liberator bombers at the Willow Run plant will be restored to almost the bomber-an-hour rate of last spring and summer.

The company also said that the 7,000th Liberator produced at Willow Run would come from the final assembly line next Thursday, third anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, raising output there this year to more than 4,500 bombers. More than 1,000 design changes have been made since the first ship was assembled.

Receipt of a 28 million dollar tank engine contract was announced, calling for an increase in Ford output of standard engines which it has made for two years for medium tanks and including the company's first large order for a new tank engine.

Honor 4 Chaplains; 8 Sea Heroes' Story

Die for Others

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2 (AP).—The army's distinguished service cross has been conferred posthumously on four men of God, who gave courage and their own life jackets to others aboard a sinking troop transport.

Lt. J. P. Washington

The war department today said the chaplains died when the transport Dorchester was torpedoed in the icy seas off Greenland in the black hours of the morning of Feb. 3, 1943. The chaplains, all with the army rank of first lieutenant, were:

Clark V. Poling, Schenectady, N. Y., son of Dr. Daniel Poling, editor of the Christian Herald.

John P. Washington, son of Mrs. Mary Washington of Newark, N. J.

Alexander D. Goode, husband of Mrs. Theresa F. Goode of Washington.

George L. Fox, husband of Mrs. George Fox of Chicopee Falls, Mass.

Chance of Rescue.

The army said that survivors reported that fear of the sea made many aboard the Dorchester almost helpless because they were convinced that death awaited them if they went overside. The chaplains, the army said, "calmed their fears and are given credit for saving men by persuading them to go overboard, where there was a chance of rescue."

Those who escaped the sinking said they saw the four standing together, handing out life belts from a chest—and then when the chest was empty, each removed his own life belt and passed it out too.

When the ship poised for the final plunge, the four men, representing three faiths, linked their arms and prayed together.

The army's chief of chaplains, Brig. Gen. William R. Arnold pays this tribute:

"The extraordinary heroism and devotion of these men of God has been an unwavering beacon for the thousands of chaplains of the armed forces. Their example has inspired and strengthened men everywhere. The manner of their dying was one of the most noble deeds of the war.

Churches Can be Proud.

"Two of the chaplains—Chaplains Poling and Fox—were Protestants. Chaplain Washington was a Catholic. Chaplain Goode was Jewish. The churches of America can be proud that such men carried their banners into this war, and men of all faiths can be proud that these men of different faiths died together."

The decorations will be presented to the next of kin by Lt. Gen. Somervell, commander of army service forces, at the Fort Myer, Va., chapel on Dec. 19.

2 Weeks; 2 Coconuts

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2 (AP).—The story of eight survivors of the American submarine Flier who swam 18 hours in Japanese controled waters to a barren island and lived for days on a pair of coconuts was related today.

Lt. James W. Liddell.

The two weeks' fight for survival and the rescue by Philippine guerrillas were recounted by the skipper, Comdr. John D. Crowley, Concordia, Kas.

Crowley said the little band, thrown into the sea by an explosion, made its way on a flimsy raft to one of the Philippine Islands after days of vainly hunting food.

Raw sugar cane that they found after reaching the Philippines was "the most delicious thing I ever tasted," Crowley said.

Loss of the Flier in action against the enemy was announced by the Navy on Sept. 19.

Skipper Tells His Story.

"We were cruising on the surface at night when there was a terrific explosion," Crowley said. "I was on the bridge. In 20 to 30 seconds the ship went down. The night was so dark we couldn't orient ourselves. The survivors were gathered together, and, tho you couldn't see beyond 3 feet, we counted 15 men in the water."

The men had no life jackets and they swam, part of the time in circles, until they reached an island 12 miles away. Only eight of the 15 original survivors made it. They abandoned all clothing and gear except underclothes.

Find Little Food.

The island yielded little food and no water. The men were sunburned and their feet had been severely cut by a jagged coral reef. Nights were cold and they slept covered with sand and hugging each other for warmth.

The men built the raft from bamboo and grass, and two could ride and paddle while the six others swam alongside. In that fashion they traveled from island to island, all uninhabited and yielding no food or water.

Several days later they reached a large island and sighted a group of buildings surrounded by an excellent coconut grove.

The next morning two native guerrilla fighters, one of whom could speak a little English, appeared and agreed to lead them to food and water.

They were taken overland in carabao [water buffalo] carts to a point where they boarded small native boats for a trip to a guerrilla headquarters. Then they were able to return to the United States.

Among the survivors were Lt. James W. Liddell Jr., Evanston, Ill.; Ensign Alvin E. Jacobson Jr., Grand Haven, Mich., and Earl R. Baumgart, motor machinist's mate, third class, Milwaukee, Wis.

LIDDELL AN N. U. ATHLETE.

Lt. Liddell, 26, guard on Northwestern university's football team from 1937 thru 1940, was graduated from the School of Engineering, and won a Tribune medal in his senior year for military excellence as a member of the naval R. O. T. C.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Liddell of 653 Hinman av., Evanston. His wife, Marion, lives at 961 Western av., Joliet.

85 in Orchestra Trudge 3 Miles in Snow to Play

Hanover, N. H., Dec. 2 (AP).—The 85 members of the Indianapolis Symphony orchestra, including a number of women, trudged three miles over snow covered railroad ties tonight to play a concert at Dartmouth college after a baggage car became derailed and held up their train near White River Junction, Vt. The decision to walk to Hanover was made after Manager Howard Harrington called for a vote.

Soldier Daddy's First Letter to Daughter, 2, Also His Last

Parsons, Kas., Dec. 2 (AP).—"This is the first time your daddy has ever written to you. . . ."

Out in Palau, Capt. Gerald Marnell, 27, penned those words to "an important little lady," his daughter, Geraldine, 2.

Some day when she's old enough to understand, it will be a precious letter to the child. She'll know then that on the same day it was postmarked her father was reported killed in action while serving with an infantry battalion.

She's Important to Him.

Capt. Marnell wrote his daughter that she had been so much on his mind "that he just had to set down a few lines to let you know how important a little lady you are.

"I know that you can't read this letter now, but your mother will read it to you and she will save it for you until you are old enough to read it yourself.

"Your daddy held you in his arms when you were only a few minutes old. Your daddy saw you grow. He would beam with pride and joy when he would watch your mother rock you to sleep in her arms. Daddy saw you start to crawl and how you did get around. He remembers you standing alone and taking your first step and cutting your first teeth and saying your first word.

Daddy Shed Tear.

"Then came a day when your daddy had to say goodbye. . . . You cried so hard when daddy was driving away that daddy shed a tear himself. Your daddy didn't want to leave you, but he had to go to help make your country a safe and free place to live in.

"Daddy won't write much more to you. He will be back home some day and you and he will play together again. Daddy asks God every night to guide and watch over you and your mother."

The letter reached the officer's wife, Mrs. Florence Marnell, several days before the message from the war department reporting his death.

AGAIN AND AGAIN . . . ELLIOTT IS SLATED TO WED 3D TIME TODAY

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 2 (AP).—Col. Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, and Actress Faye Emerson left this afternoon by private plane and it was reported they were en route to Grand Canyon, Ariz., to be married there tomorrow. The ceremony, it was reported, is to be performed in the El Tovar hotel between noon and 2 p. m.

Jack Frye, president of Transcontinental & Western Airlines, is to be best man, a previous announcement said, and Mrs. Joseph Livengood, granddaughter of the late Ernestine Schumann-Heink, is to be matron of honor.

Roosevelt, on leave from the army air forces, was divorced from Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, by whom he had a son, and from Ruth Googins Roosevelt, mother of their three children. Miss Emerson was divorced from William Wallace Crawford Jr., by whom she had a son.

NATION SPENDS NEARLY BILLION A YEAR IN JEWELS

New York, Dec. 2 [Special].—The public is spending its inflated income for jewelery at a rate approaching one billion dollars a year, according to data on the collection of federal luxury taxes made public today by the tax institute, a research agency. The luxury tax rate on jewelry was doubled from 10 to 20 per cent only three months before the close of the fiscal year.

In 1942 the tax yielded 42 million dollars; in 1943, 88 million, and in 1944, 113 million dollars. The 20 per cent luxury tax on furs brought in 20 million, 44 million, and 59 million dollars in the corresponding periods, and the same tax on cosmetics collected 23 million, 33 million, and 45 million dollars.

The luxury taxes on jewelry, furs, liquor, tobacco, cosmetics, and admissions, together with a few regulatory taxes, now are bringing in 4 billion or 5 billion dollars a year, Dr. Mabel L. Walker, executive secretary of the institute, estimates.

The tax on alcoholic beverages in 1944 yielded $1,618,000,000.

Student in Army Shock Class Gets One: 'Twins'

Fort Lewis, Wash., Dec. 2 (AP).—Pvt. Joseph Turkowski of Chicago, medical corps man, was in class studying treatments for shock yesterday when he received a telegram. It read: "You are the proud father of twin girls and your wife is doing well."

Attacks U. S. Diplomacy by 'Millionaires'

BY WILLIAM MOORE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—Rep. Miller [R., Neb.] recommended tonight that American millionaire diplomats be shelved in favor of men who will report the true attitude of foreign nations toward the United States.

Miller, a physician and world traveler who recently returned from a tour of England and France, told his views in an interview that followed his house speech of yesterday, in which he warned that American representatives abroad, unfamiliar with the feelings of the people either in their own or foreign countries, are submitting misleading reports that will be costly in American lives and money.

Nationalistic in Thinking.

Miller said American fighting men overseas understand the problems which baffle the diplomats, and predicted that the soldiers will be nationalistic in their thinking when they return and determined that the abuses of lend-lease be ended.

"In China, our relations were going from bad to worse, while the American people thought they were getting better," Miller said. "It took the recall of Gen. Stilwell and the disclosure of trouble with Chiang Kai-shek to wake us up to the true state of affairs.

"Our diplomats tell us we are in a good position with the countries to which we are giving our money. But the people in those countries don't like us. That is true in England and all the countries we have helped.

Try to Buy Friendship.

"Our representatives in those countries do not mingle with the rank and file either abroad or at home. They think we gain good will by pouring in money, whereas we lose the confidence of such countries by trying to buy their friendship.

"On my trips to South America I have found that few of our diplomats could even speak the language of the country in which they were representing us.

"The situation is the same with Russia. The Teheran conference of President Roosevelt, Churchill, and Stalin was held while we in the United States thought we were still recognizing the boundaries of Poland and the Balkan countries."

Hopes for Improvement.

Miller branded America's present representation in foreign lands as "terrible," and expressed the hope that it will be improved in the new regime of Secretary of State Stettinius.

"Secretary Hull," Miller said, was a fine old gentleman who wanted to leave things as they were. What we need is two fisted diplomacy. Our diplomats have been walking the wrong side of the street. They are from the millionaire class and don't associate with the fellow on the other side of the street."

Miller's latest blast at American diplomacy came as congress was studying the speech he made in the house yesterday, when he said:

"This country needs better representation abroad. We need men like Churchill, who said he did not become prime minister of England to preside over the liquidation of the empire.

"We need men of the hard fisted, direct diplomacy of Stalin, who apparently, when he was at the Teheran conference, did not ask Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt what he could have, but told them.

"Our foreign affairs are directed too frequently by individuals or a select few who try to mold public opinion. They lack the real contact and understanding of the great mass of people which make up this and other countries."

NUBBINS IMPROVES, SHARES CHRISTMAS TOYS WITH ORPHANS

Denver, Colo., Dec. 2 (AP).—It seemed like a lot of toys for one little boy, so Forest [Nubbins] Hoffman, who celebrated Christmas two week ago, told his parents he would like to give some of his 200 presents to other children. Five boxes of his toys were taken to a home for orphan boys.

The gifts were sent from all over the United States to the 3 year old Cheyenne, Wyo., lad, after a doctor told his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Hoffman, that Nubbins, suffering a bladder ailment, might not live until Christmas.

There is a chance that Nubbins will be able to enjoy another Christmas. A specialist who took over the case when Nubbins was brought here said the boy has improved so much that an operation may be performed early next week.

CHICAGO YANK IN METZ DRIVE FINDS MOTHER

BY ROBERT CROMIE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH AMERICAN 3D ARMY NEAR THE SAAR RIVER, Dec. 2.—Sgt. Robert Schwartz, 1746 N. Luna av., Chicago, an engineer attached to the 95th infantry division, recently returned to his native Lorraine for the first time since 1925.

Passing thru Metz on a truck, he spotted his sister, Katherine, on the street and stopped long enough for a brief chat. She told him she would tell the remainder of the family he was in the area.

In another town Schwartz saw his brother, William, coming from church. William told him their mother was walking the street in front of their house from dawn to dusk, hoping Robert would show up. He found her the next day.

YANKS DRIVE INTO JULICH; PUSH THRU SAARLAUTERN

ROOM TO ROOM FIGHT IN 7-STORY FLAT BUILDING!

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

STRASBOURG, Alsace, Dec. 2.—The three Strasbourg bridges hung uselessly today, partly submerged by the rushing Rhine. The Germans blew them up and yielded their crescent shaped bridgehead after a sharp American attack eight days after the American troops entered the city.

When we first entered Strasbourg the night of Nov. 23 the Germans left 2,000 to hold their west bank bridgehead. They gradually depleted this number until two days ago less than 200 remained in the pocket to hold the canal and railroad line. Evacuation had been by boat.

Late Thursday the enemy tried further evacuations, using boats again and a smoke screen.

Apartment House Battle.

Thursday night and early Friday our infantry struck to clear out the pocket. Furious fighting ensued. The Germans defended with mortar and machine guns at the canal and railroad tracks. They fought also from a seven story apartment building near the main bridge.

Meanwhile from Siegfried line emplacements at Kehl enemy batteries hurled into Strasbourg the biggest shells yet used against the 7th army—some of 410 mm. caliber [recalling the barrages at Verdun in the first World war] as well as 240 and 280 mm. The muzzle blast from some of these big guns was enough to knock down Yanks on the Strasbourg side, infantry commanders reported.

All yesterday and last night our artillery replied to the Siegfried fortifications. Our shells were not as big as the Germans' but we were giving the enemy two shells for every one of his. And we are shelling reciprocal targets—if the Germans open up on an Alsatian town we hit a reich town.

Fight from Room to Room.

To capture the apartment building, where Germans were shooting from every floor, American bazooka and tank fire was directed against the walls. After big holes had been punched in the building and the German fire slackened Yank foot soldiers charged in.

Thru late Friday afternoon and all night, from floor to floor and room to room, battles went on until every apartment was rid of live Germans.

It will be a long time before that apartment house will be habitable again—with windows smashed, walls ripped, floors torn up, and everywhere debris formed of stone and household furnishings smashed to bits. American and German dead are among the ruins.

37 Germans Captured.

One by one enemy machine gun and mortar positions on the railroad and canal front were knocked out. There were still a few Nazi snipers at large on the river's edge this morning, but they were being hunted down.

Thirty seven Germans were taken prisoner and 25 enemy dead had been counted amid the wreckage. Some Germans did get back across the river. Our casualties were not "too heavy," as the commanders described it, but about half of our losses were in men killed.

The mist had been so heavy yesterday and the visibility so much reduced by smoke that it was not apparent until today that the Germans had destroyed the three bridges leading into the reich. It was not surprising, however, for it was known the Germans had those bridges mined and prepared for demolition. Our artillery had been cracking at the bridges for several days and they were infirm before the enemy delivered the coup de grace.

Patton Widens Hold on Saar River to 14 Miles.

PARIS, Dec. 2 (AP).—American troops entered two anchor points of the main defenses of Germany today—Saarlautern, important Saar basin industrial city into which they penetrated deeply, and Julich, where they drove into the outlying part of the town on the western side of the River Roer.

At both Saarlautern and Julich, the Americans face river barriers. Julich, key point to the Cologne plain, lies mainly on the eastern side of the Roer. Across the Saar from Saarlautern, burning from aerial assaults, Siegfried line positions were dented by air bombardments.

In the terrific battle on the edge of the Cologne plain, the 1st army at Inden and the 9th army at Julich were encountering the heaviest opposition of the winter offensive.

Following attacks by nearly 250 9th air force bombers which left Saarlautern in flames and tore open nearby Siegfried line defenses, doughboys entered Saarlautern at two points. The Americans then fanned out over most of that part of the city which lies west of the Saar river.

Hold 14 Mile Stretch.

The 90th and 95th divisions, with elements of the 10th armored division screening them to the north, now hold a 14 mile stretch along the Saar between Merzig and Saarlautern. The vital Saar basin has been gouged deeply by 3d army advances, but the river still is a barrier. The Germans apparently hope to make a strong stand along this natural line.

The penetration into Saarlautern was made by the 95th division in a three mile drive. Other divisional elements pushed beyond Altferweiller, three miles to the southwest, and entered the town of Bisten in the same area.

Germans Counter-Attack.

Troops of the 26th infantry division teamed up with 4th armored division tanks and were fighting inside of Sarre Union, 12 miles south of the Saar border, where the Yanks are moving up the east bank of the Saar river in a potential outflanking threat to Saarbrucken.

In this area, the Germans launched two of the fiercest counter-attacks yet made in the current offensive, using 40 to 50 tanks. Fighter bombers came to the aid of the doughboys, knocking out at least six tanks, and the attacks were repulsed.

These attacks, however, did permit the Germans to reënter Mackwiller, according to field dispatches.

9th Army in Linnich.

To the north, at the edge of the Cologne plain, gains of yards were bought at a high cost of American blood in the giant battle of attrition that was entering its 16th day. The 9th army occupied Linnich up to the River Roer tonight and captured Liefarth, between Beeck and Lindern, a late field dispatch said.

Thus, virtually the entire 9th army stood on the west bank of the Roer after recapturing two towns lost yesterday. Fighting continued in Beeck, to the west, and before Lindern, now in American hands.

The entry into Linnich came last night in sporadic fighting. There were indications the Germans were fighting just long enough on the west bank of the river to get out their tanks and artillery.

The 1st army tried to break across the Inde river after subjugating all but one pocket in that part of Inden lying on the west bank, but was fought to a standstill in terrific artillery fire that saw shells bursting on American positions at the rate of one a second.

Tanks Travel Trenches.

In that vital sector six miles northwest of the Roer stronghold of Duren, the Germans were reported to have trenches so wide and deep that enemy tanks moved thru them without being observed—something new in trench warfare.

Both sides were pouring on the heaviest artillery fire since the onset of Gen. Eisenhower's winter offensive.

Ten miles southwest of Duren 1st army troops battled to wipe out a strong pocket in the south part of Inden and were dealing with entrenched forces south of the town. Four miles west of Duren they were clearing more of the woods in an advance from Jungersdorf toward Merode. Stubborn resistance made progress slow for units closing in on Gey and Brandenberg, four and seven miles south of Duren.

In the Gey sector the Germans threw in two counter-blows, summoning crack parachute troops for the attack, and one made a deep penetration before it was contained.

Smash Resistance.

The 7th army wiped out the stubborn German pocket in Strasbourg on the Rhine's west bank. Other units racing 26 miles northwest thru broken enemy defenses struck within 10 miles of Germany's Palatinate, just east of the Saar basin.

Armored units spearing southward down the Rhine valley in gains of up to four miles reached Boofzheim and Kogenheim, 16 and 19 miles south of Strasbourg.

The 7th's tanks there were no more than 30 miles from the 1st French army moving up from the south around Colmar.

British Front Quiet.

American troops fought their way into Selestat, an important communications town in the Alsace plain 12 miles north of Colmar. House to house fighting was in progress on the western edges of Selestat. Tank-supported German counter-attacks were repulsed.

French 1st army troops moving up from the south established a bridgehead on the northern bank of the Doller river at Mulhouse and held it against strong enemy counter-attacks.

Only patrol action was reported on the British 2d army front. A German broadcast said the Canadian 1st army had relieved the British in the Nijmegen section of Holland, releasing elements of the 2d for other duty farther south. Another enemy broadcast asserted the Canadians had launched a large scale attack on the besieged French channel port of Dunkerque after "several hours of drumfire."

[A Berlin broadcast asserted the Germans had recaptured the town of Lindern, 4½ miles northeast of Geilenkirchen. The allied bulletin, however, said a German counter-attack at Lindern had been repulsed. The broadcast described the battle before Cologne as a death mill, and said "in most sections of the Aachen front 30,000 to 60,000 soldiers are facing each other on every kilometer [⅝ of a mile] of the front."]

GERMAN BULLETIN.

The German Saturday bulletin, as broadcast from Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press:

"In the Aachen area, focal points of hot fighting again were northeast of Geilenkirchen and in the forest districts at Hurtgen. Our brave formations, inflicting severe losses in dead and prisoners on the enemy, repulsed the mass of the enemy attacks.

"The enemy entered Linnich.

"On the Lorraine border strong enemy forces in the northwest attempted to break thru in the direction of Saarlautern. They were stopped before our fortifications after having achieved insignificant initial successes. In the area of Saar Union our panzer formations threw back the enemy, who again attacked to their initial positions.

"New enemy attacks in the Alsace area collapsed at our barrier fronts on either side of Ingweiler as well as between Ste. Marie and Rheinau. Numerous prisoners were taken in heavy defense fighting for Selestat.

"The garrison at Dunkerque wiped out enemy forces which, after strong artillery preparation, had temporarily entered the eastern forefield of the fortress.

"Harassing fire by our long range weapons on London continues. The district of Antwerp was further subjected to intensified shelling."

Report Suicide of Nazi Mass Murder Overseer

LONDON, Dec. 3 [Sunday]—(AP).—Edmund Polmann, Nazi overseer in the Majdanek mass murder camp, who was accused personally of killing thousands, hanged himself in his cell, a soviet news agency dispatch from Lublin said today. Trial of Polmann and five others accused of the torture killings had reached its third day. It had been testified 18 ditches yielded 1,500,000 bodies of persons tortured to death.

many across the Rhine, is built of stone and steel. It stretched 600 feet over the river with another 150 feet of length in the abutments.

Now the center section was wrecked and is low in the water, while the end sections slanted downward from the shattered approaches. One girder still connected the end portions, but no one considered trying to cross this catwalk.

Only Two Bridges Left.

The railroad steel bridge just north of the highway span also is partly submerged, and twisted rails of double track jut from the water. The third bridge was several hundred yards south of the main one and was regarded as an emergency route. It is built of concrete, and today some of it had sunk out of sight.

From Strasbourg south to the Swiss border there remain now only two permanent bridges over the Rhine, one at Breisbach, east of Colmar, and the other at Chelempe, northeast of Mulhouse. Both are railroad bridges and both have been damaged.

Paris Christmas Candle Sales Ruled Illegal

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 2.—Candles will be illegal for Paris Christmas trees this year, the ministry of industrial production announced today. Merchants removed the meager pre-war stocks of candles from sales windows where they had been placed a few days ago, together with what knicknacks could be mustered. Black market sidewalk vendors immediately added the Christmas candles to their other illegal wares and multiplied the former prices by 10.

DE GAULLE ARRIVES IN MOSCOW; BEGINS TALKS WITH STALIN

MOSCOW, Dec. 2 (AP).—Gen. De Gaulle, who arrived in Moscow by train today, was received by Premier Stalin tonight in his quarters at the Kremlin. The French leader was accompanied on his first visit to Stalin by Roger Garreau, chief of the French diplomatic mission to Moscow.

French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault conferred today for 50 minutes with Foreign Commissar Molotov before De Gaulle's first visit to the Kremlin. French sources here said that De Gaulle's exchange of letters with President Benes, restoring pre-Munich relations between France and Czechoslovakia, was evidence of his determination to build French foreign policy toward Russia on lines which would wipe out memories of the Munich agreement.

BELIEVE HITLER LEAVES BATTLE TO RUNDSTEDT

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE AMERICAN 1ST ARMY, Germany, Dec. 2.—Skillful employment of German troops defending the Cologne plain against the assault by the American 1st and 9th armies indicates to competent observers here that Hitler and Himmler have turned control of the German armies back to Field Marshal Von Rundstedt and his generals.

This view was expressed today by a high 1st army staff officer. The Americans under Lt. Gen. Hodges virtually have destroyed four German divisions and mauled two others since the start of the offensive Nov. 16.

In this period, the 1st army has captured, he said, 7,606 Germans. Figured on the usual conservative military ratio of three dead or wounded to one prisoner, this would indicate the Germans have lost nearly 23,000 in killed or wounded while fighting the 1st army, or total casualties of more than 30,000.

Total Losses 128,000.

Compiled on the same basis for all three armies of Lt. Gen. Bradley's 12th army group—the 1st, 3d, and 9th—German losses since Nov. 16 can be considered about 128,000.

These break down, in addition to the 1st army totals, as 7,693 prisoners and 23,000 dead and wounded for the 9th army; 17,000 prisoners and 51,000 dead and wounded for the 3d army.

A German division is an extremely flexible organization, particularly during this six months' campaign, when its strength often has ranged between five and 15 thousand. But taking a conservative estimate of 7,000 soldiers to a Nazi division, the announced prisoner and casualty figures for the 12th army group indicate more than 18 German divisions or their equivalent have been wiped out.

1st Army Suffers.

This, of course, has not been without a steady drain on American troops. Fighting along the entire front, and in particular that against the 1st and 9th, has been severe and as costly as any battles of the campaign. The Germans, being on the defense and on their own soil, are fighting with a grim determination to stop all of Gen. Eisenhower's allied armies west of the Rhine.

This is nowhere more evident than among the forests and fortified towns against which Hodges' tired men have been hammering for weeks. Today, for example, the 1st army's gains were described by a staff officer as "very slight, in fact, nil." Instead of making a gain, one veteran division spent the day repelling a counter-attack in the Jungersdorf area.

The belief that Hitler no longer is master minding the campaign by direct control, said a staff officer, now seems almost obvious. The campaign, in its severity and ferocity and in the tactical employment of enemy troops, has changed greatly from the earlier days of the Normandy campaign, before the reported bomb injury to Hitler during the assassination attempt.

Cling to Hurtgen Forest.

Instead of any withdrawal along the 1st army front, the Germans have been reenforcing their artillery positions, altho movement by rail thruout all of western Germany is becoming increasingly difficult.

The Germans are showing great tenacity in fighting in the Hurtgen forest. They seem determined to prevent the Americans from emerging from the gloom of these cavernous woods and attacking strategic Duren from the south.

Along the quiet areas of the battle line, too, said staff officers, there is reason to believe the Germans are seasoning green troops and those battered divisions which have been pasted together again with replacements. After a few weeks' fighting there, these German divisions then often are shifted to other section of the line.

U. S. FIGHTERS DOWN 28 NAZIS NEAR COBLENZ

LONDON, Dec. 2 (AP).—American fighter pilots escorting bombers raiding Goblenz shot down 28 Nazi planes today while a force of more than 500 R. A. F. Lancaster heavy bombers hit a benzol plant at Dortmund. The German planes were knocked from the air by a force of almost 550 Thunderbolts and Mustangs of the United States 8th air force which encountered enemy aircraft over the Bingen area, 25 miles southeast of Coblenz.

Six fighter pilots shot down two Nazi planes apiece today. Among them were Capt. Jerome R. Mau, 6315 N. Claremont st., Chicago, and Lt. Russell Frederickson, Kenosha, Wis.

Eight American fighters and 11 bombers were reported missing, but six of the fighters were believed to have landed in friendly territory. The Nazis lost 636 aircraft in November. American losses for the month were 184 bombers and 108 fighters.

Target for the 250 American bombers was equipment massed in the Coblenz railroad yard.

RED EMERGENCE IN EUROPE PUTS CLOUD OVER U.S.

Many Nations Expected to Go Communist.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—The biggest cloud on America's economic horizon, in the opinion of conservative officials and economists, is the advance of communism in Europe, aided and abetted by Russian military and political power.

Already Russia is setting up communist dominated governments in the countries of eastern Europe liberated from Nazi rule by Russian arms. Already strong communist parties instigated by Moscow have arisen in Italy, France, and Belgium and are maneuvering formidably for control of their governments.

Control by Government.

The prospect is that with the end of the war in Europe the United States will find that a large part of that continent, economically considered, merely will have exchanged Hitler's Nazi brand for Stalin's communist brand of totalitarianism and that private enterprise will be replaced by public ownership and operation of the means of production and exports and imports will be government controled.

One of the arguments pressed for American intervention in the European war was that "we could not do business with Hitler." The Nazi government subsidized exports and undersold American manufacturers and merchants in foreign markets. There was no profit in selling to Germans, for the Nazis controled imports and bought on their own terms.

The same controls obtain under communist totalitarianism. The same impediments to American foreign trade may be expected in the communist dominated Russian sphere of influence stretching from central, if not western Europe to the Pacific ocean, a vast area that will be self-sufficient in time in almost all raw materials and manufactured products.

Effect on Britain.

Indications are not wanting that even Great Britain may be tinged economically and politically with communism in the not distant future. The predilection evinced by British industrialists for cartels and government control of business is pronounced by disciples of free enterprise a straw showing that the wind in Britain is blowing in the direction of totalitarianism.

In the United States also, totalitarianism has made great advances under President Roosevelt's New Deal, which is a combination of fascism and communism. Government controls of agriculture and business under more than a decade of New Deal legislation and administration have provided the foundation on which the Communists of America, following the Moscow party line, are steadily moving to erect a political and economic structure on the Russian model.

The spread of communism in Europe is due not entirely to the strong arming of defenseless populations by Russian armies. In some countries, like France and Italy, in which Russian troops have not set foot, communism is flourishing as never before.

The misery of the people in both these countries and in Belgium and eastern Europe under the fascist governments of Hitler and Mussolini has created a state of mind receptive to communism.

In France, where the Communists constitute the strongest bloc in the forces of resistance, the property of collaborationists is being confiscated and mines and gas companies are being taken over for public operation. The Communists have a program of nationalization of heavy industry, finance, and utilities.

Detect Hand of Stalin.

The hand of Stalin has been detected in the maneuvering of the Communists into a commanding position in France. It was as a result of pressure exerted by the Russian dictators that Gen. De Gaulle, chief of the provisional government, permitted Maurice Thorez, No. 1 French Communist, to return to France immune from prosecution.

Thorez was called to the colors shortly after France went to war in 1939. He ignored the call, disappeared, and was sentenced to prison for desertion. From his place of refuge he directed the communist sabotaging of French war production, for at that time Stalin had a nonaggression pact with Hitler and the French Communists were inciting strikes in arms factories just as the American Communists were instigating strikes in American factories, denouncing the war as imperialistic, picketing the White House, and branding Mr. Roosevelt a war-monger.

After June 22, 1941, when Hitler scrapped his pact with Stalin and invaded Russia, the French Communists, like their American comrades, became hot for war, tho at that time France had been knocked out and America was not yet in. Now that the Nazis have been chased out of France and Thorez again can lead the Communists, Stalin engineered his return. Moreover, De Gaulle has gone to Moscow at the invitation of Stalin to discuss political and economic arrangements.

Resting in Belgium.

Belgium has been the scene of rioting fomented by the Communists, who number about 40,000, against the regime of Premier Pierlot. Pierlot threatened to suppress the communist press unless it ceased its agitation, which he said was aimed at seizure of power by the Reds.

In Italy the Communists have achieved formidable power, again with the help of Stalin. They came to the fore when Stalin stole a march on Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt by extending recognition to the Badoglio government. When the allies took Rome, Badoglio resigned and King Victor Emmanuel retired, in accord with agreement, and Ivan Bonomi formed a government.

Falls Under Attack.

Recently the Bonomi ministry fell under attack by the Communists and other leftist parties.

In eastern Europe the Communists under Stalin's statecraft have carved out a broad zone stretching from Finland to the Adriatic. Stalin's right to this sphere of influence was tacitly confirmed by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill at the Teheran conference a year ago.

Poland was the first victim. Tho he had subscribed to the pledges of national self-determination in the Atlantic Charter and the Moscow agreement, Stalin proceeded to annex the eastern half of Poland in the wake of his conquering armies. He was ready with a Polish government, formed in Russia of Polish Communists, and set it up at Lublin.

This Russian dominated government of eastern Poland proceeded at once to confiscate estates and establish state socialism. According to Polish officials in exile, the price of opposition to the new regime in eastern Poland was deportation or "liquidation."

Stalin has been taking his time in freeing western Poland of the Germans while seeking to maneuver the Polish government in exile into acceptance of the East Polish boundary he has decreed and a Russian dominated government of western Poland and the German territory he purposes to hand over to the Poles. With the help of Churchill, Stalin has crowded the Poles close to acceptance of his terms. Under the Russian program, communism is to be the economic system of Poland.

Domination of Finland.

In like manner Stalin has achieved domination of Finland, which is in process of receiving the communist gospel. In the Baltic states communism has followed the Russian flag as they have been annexed in the wake of the retreating Germans.

With Bessarabia annexed by Russia, communism is already established in Romania, now occupied by Russian forces, and is to be the portion of Czecho-Slovakia and Hungary when soviet conquest shall be completed. Bulgaria already is being organized along totalitarian lines under Russian control.

The same process is going forward in Yugo-Slavia where the Communist, Marshal Tito, with Russian aid, is liberating that region from Nazi rule. Tito is planning a Communist federation of Serbia, Croatia, Slovenia, Bosnia, Montenegro, and Herzogovina together with Macedonia, which he would take from Greece. With a Russian dominated Yugo-Slavia, including Macedonia, Moscow would realize its age old dream of a warm water port—Salonika.

Britain May Intervene.

Great Britain may have something forcible to say about that, for the British for a century or more have frustrated that Russian ambition and fought Russia once over this question. In fact the British became so alarmed by Russian penetration on the north coast of the Mediterranean, Britain's special preserve, that Churchill rushed to Moscow and got an agreement with Stalin to respect each other's rights and perquisites in that region. By virtue of this agreement Italy and Greece are to be included in Britain's sphere of influence.

Whether this will save the Greeks from communism remains to be seen for the Greek partisans, with covert Russian support, are maneuvering to get control of the Greek government, avowing that Britains favorite, King George, will not be allowed to regain his throne.

Nazism is to be rooted out of Germany which is slated to accept Communism in exchange, at least in its eastern part, which will be occupied by Russia during the transition period after the end of the war in Europe.

In the southwestern portion of Germany, to be occupied by American forces, that mingling of Fascism and Communism called the New Deal is to be established with Leon Henderson as its administrator.

In China communism is a formidable force. The Communists occupy a third of China. They claim they have an army of half a million men with more than 400,000 rifles.

U. S. GUNS FIRE CAPTURED NAZI SHELLS AT FOE

Ammunition that the Germans piled up in dumps thruout France and Belgium was captured and is being fired at them by Yank gunners from American cannon.

An interesting chain of circumstances by which this was made possible was disclosed in the December issue of the Field Artillery Journal. The captured ammunition is for 155 mm. guns and it fits the United States M-12 weapon.

In World War I. the United States received from France, its ally, permission to manufacture 155 mm. weapons identical to the French GPF. GPF is an abbreviation of "grand puissant, Filloux" [great power, Filloux]. Col. Filloux of the French army had designed the weapon.

Many Guns Made in U. S.

Many of the guns were manufactured in the United States, especially at the Watervliet, N. Y., arsenal.

The 155 mm. M1A1, the so-called Long Tom, later supplanted the GPF in the United States artillery and in 1942 the old GPF tube was mounted on a modified Sherman tank chassis, one with the turret ripped off, and designated the M-12, 155 mm. gun, motor carriage.

The M-12 went into action for the first time in Normandy and was a tremendous success in conjunction with armored forces.

For the story of how the Germans piled up ammunition that fits this gun one goes further back than the fighting in Normandy. When the Germans overran France in June, 1940, they took over a huge stock of French material, including French 155 mm. guns and ammunition for them. They liked the GPF so well that they distributed it thruout their forces and made a lot of ammunition to supplement the supply they had seized. When the allies chased the Germans back thru France the Germans were too hard pressed to take the shells with them and the allies seized the dumps.

First Test in October.

Captured 155 mm. ammunition was fired for the first time from American guns last Oct. 16 in a test by a 1st army artillery battalion attached to the 3d [spearhead] armored division. This was the 991st field artillery battalion, once the 2d battalion of the 258th field artillery, the Washington Grays. This is the outfit that on Sept. 10 fired the first American shells onto German soil.

The 991st, which went into action on July 13, has not been out of action a single day and at last reports was still dishing out German ammunition to the Germans in the Aachen Area while backing up the 1st division. Other M-12 outfits grabbed similar supplies of ammunition all along the line and they, too, were hurling it over.

LABORITE WARNS AGAINST BRITISH COMMUNISTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—A warning to Britain against the peril of its Communist party was sounded today by Home Security Minister Herbert Morrison, who admitted that "we don't know quite what to make of these paratroopers dropped behind the lines in camouflaged uniforms."

Addressing the Socialist party conference at Huddersfield, the Laborite cabinet minister saw a danger that "our own British party, if it is our own and British, might at any time go back to bloody revolution; in fact, for all I know, it may be there already underground."

Morrison, however, admitted that probably neither the membership of the Communist party in Britain nor its direct numerical influence is as great as is sometimes supposed, nor did he see any reason to be "particularly afraid of its subversive tendencies in its present phase."

SHIP WILL RUSH GIFTS TO YANKS HELD IN GERMANY

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 2 (AP).—The Swedish ship Salvo is ready to leave on a race with Santa Claus, bearing Red Cross bundles for 49,000 American prisoners of war in Germany.

The neutral mercy vessel, assured safe passage by both the allies and the Germans, will pull into the Swedish port of Gothenburg just before Christmas if she keeps on schedule. Three Red Cross boats then will take the cargo to Lubeck, Germany, for distribution.

When the ship nears dangerous Atlantic waters, a British escort will join her, but at a designated point the British will leave her and she will proceed alone thru a stretch of no man's sea to a rendezvous with a waiting German escort.

AMERICANS KEEP WATCH ON RHINE IN MAGINOT FORT

German Rows Across the River to Surrender.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AT A MAGINOT FORT ON THE RHINE, Dec. 2.—The French had kept their frontier watch in this and similar strongholds below Strasbourg during the "sitskrieg" early in 1940. They had traded pleasantries with German troops in the Siegfried fortifications across the Rhine. When the collapse came, the French pulled back and the Maginot line was a virtual walkover for the Nazis.

Americans now on guard here trade shell and machine gun fire with the Germans. G. I. Joe and Fritz don't shout at each other across the Rhine for the time of day. In fact, a heavy fog today over Alsace and the Rhine valley prevented accurate observation across the stream which is 800 feet wide at this point.

German Rows Across Stream.

The water on the Rhine was moving at least 10 miles an hour. Yet during the night one enemy soldier crossed the stream in a rowboat. It took him 20 minutes to reach Alsace and surrender to the Americans. He said he was a citizen of Strasbourg who had been forced into the German army, adding that he wanted to see his wife and children in the big city. He was permitted to visit them for a few minutes, and then was taken to the prisoner of war enclosure.

From this fort it is less than 200 yards to the Rhine. A group of us went down to the river. Soldiers said that on a clear day none would have gotten that far without drawing fire from the east bank.

Thru the fog were visible vague shapes on the east bank. They were concrete pillboxes. Occasionally there was a flash of fire amid the mist. American heavy bombers were flying over, pounding German targets.

This Maginot fort is of dark brick exterior with a cement interior, the whole structure well camouflaged in the woods, as are other forts in the line. It has only one level, and the long, dark corridor tunnel has many openings into large chambers.

Americans Find Stoves.

These have small barred windows. They are cheerless rooms, but the American infantrymen now quartered there have done their best to make themselves comfortable.

They occupy rows of bunks which the Germans and the French before them had used. The enemy had taken away most of the stoves. The Yanks scouted around until they found enough, and their quarters are warm.

So is their food. Today's menu featured roast beef, potatoes, and peaches.

There are no big gun emplacements in this fort, for French artillery positions are farther west of the river. There are, however, many machine gun and mortar sites, and Americans are using them. They have full 360 degree perimeter of posts for defensive fire, with their heaviest array of weapons pointed to the east.

A Machine Gun Post.

Nearer the river's west bank is a big circular machine gun position. It is made of concrete and has iron doors. On top is a cupola with slits for observation. A smaller circular concrete structure nearby is being used as a Browning automatic rifle post.

On the walls of these forts there were scrawled names of French soldiers and their sweethearts. German writings on the walls were of sterner tone—"Heil Hitler" and such.

OBSERVE RULES FOR HOSTAGES, OFFICERS TOLD

SUPREME HDQ. ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Dec. 2 (AP). — Maj. Gen. Jacques Le Clerc's anti-sniping proclamation threatening to execute five German hostages for every French soldier shot in Strasbourg never was carried out, supreme headquarters announced officially today, and in fact hostages never were taken.

Despite protests from the German radio which chose to place its own interpretation on the proclamation, the issue was regarded here as closed.

Supreme headquarters announced commanders had been told that any proclamation they make on the basis of front line military necessity must conform with the Geneva convention, which prohibits reprisal execution of prisoners of war, tho rules of land warfare provide for the execution of hostages.

CANADIAN HOME TROOPS ASSAIL BRITISH EMPIRE

Always Ready to Fight for Native Land.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 2.—A group of Canadian army "zombies"—home defense troops to whom that term of derision has been applied because they would not volunteer for foreign service—sought today to explain their opposition to fighting abroad.

The uniformed young men sitting around a tavern table sipping their beer, were suspicious until they learned it was an American newspaper man who wanted their viewpoint.

All were obviously aware that the current uproar over conscription for overseas service was calculated to arouse the ire of Americans, who have sent troops all over the world.

"It is hard for you to understand," said a French-Canadian boy, blonde, pink-cheeked, blue-eyed. "But you have not been pushed around as we in Quebec have been for many years. Frankly, we have no love for Britain. When they play 'God Save the King,' why should French-Canadians cheer? But when they play 'O, Canada' we are thrilled with patriotism.

They'll Fight for Canada.

"We will fight to defend our country, Canada, but we do not see why we should be sent to Europe to fight in a war for the British empire. We are the true Canadians; we were here many years before the British but they conquered the country and we have learned in the history books that the British Canadians have never considered the interests of the French-Canadians."

Many in the group were well versed in Canadian history.

"From 1812 to 1898 there was no war in which Canada was asked to join," said an older soldier. "In all that time, French Canadians were not encouraged to join the army. They were not wanted by the British. If one did join, he was practically barred from ever attaining an officer's rank.

"There was no sympathy among French Canadians when the South African war broke out in 1898 and many British now agree it was a war of conquest and an unjust war. It is not our fault that Canada has remained a country of two races. French Canadians have made many concessions to attain unity but British Canadians have made none."

Probem of Replacements.

Several of the soldiers said Canada had sent more troops abroad than its scanty population justified. Now that reënforcements are needed to fill gaps, the Canadian armies abroad should be made smaller instead of sending unwilling men overseas, they asserted.

Practical reasons for not going abroad were offered by others in the group. One spoke of his aged father and mother being left alone on a farm when he, the youngest son, was drafted. Two older brothers had volunteered and were now in Italy. There was in this French-Canadian youth a love for the soil, it was evident, and he had no enthusiasm for army life.

There was no sympathy, however, expressed for those soldiers who have marched with rifles in demonstrations against conscription.

"They are the soreheads who are against everything," remarked one soldier, contemptuously. "We do not want to go abroad to fight for Britain, but if they send us, we will not mutiny."

NAZI BRUTALITY ON CRETE TOPS GREECE HORROR

AT GUERRILLA HDQ. OUTSIDE CANEA, Crete, Nov. 30 [Delayed]—(AP).—This island has suffered from the German occupation to an even greater degree than the Greek mainland, figures available at this headquarters indicate.

Since the British evacuation of Crete in May, 1941, it is estimated that the Germans have slain 10,000 Cretans, deported 5,000, and destroyed more than 40 villages, leaving several thousand persons homeless.

Crete has gone thru her reign of terror under five German commanders. A sixth, Gen. Heinrich Kreipe, is the only one who cannot be charged with brutality. He was kidnaped and captured by the British last April, three weeks after he was appointed.

The island has suffered a heavier load of occupation troops per capita than perhaps any other occupied territory. The pre-war population of 350,000 had to support as many as 60,000 Nazi garrison troops at a time.

Feared Attack on Crete.

The record number descended on Crete just before the allied invasion of Sicily, when an underground deception scheme, implemented by less than a dozen allied liaison officers, led the Germans to expect that Crete was the allied objective. This scheme was led by Col. Thomas Dunbabbin, former archeologist fellow of All Souls college, Cambridge.

First of the brutal Nazi commanders of Crete was the parachute expert, Col. Gen. Kurt Student, now on the western front. His reign lasted six weeks following the battle of Crete. Every village in the areas where the British made their last stand was forced to yield hostages—men, women and children, who were slaughtered by the hundreds. In a single day, 1,200 fell before firing squads.

An air force general, Waldemar Andrae, succeeded Student and continued the oppression. After one British Commando raid he executed 50 hostages, including Titus Georgiades, former governor general of Crete.

Kills 2,000 Villagers.

The next commandant, named Brauer, wiped out an entire county, killing more than 2,000 villagers, aged 2 to 80. At one village 155 out of 160 inhabitants were killed for the "crime" that their village bore the same name as the Cretan patriot leader, Bandouvas.

Gen. Friedrich Wilhelm Muller followed Brauer and celebrated his appointment by killing 1,000, razing seven villages and dynamiting churches and springs.

The present commander, a Col. Bentak, is marooned on the northwest tip of Crete with 15,000 German and Fascist Italian troops.

Seine's Worst Flood in 20 Years Nears Its Crest

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 2.—If there is no more rain in the next 24 hours, the worst Seine floods in 20 years are expected to reach their crest Monday with the swollen river stopping at the level of 19 feet, 9½ inches. In 10 days the river has mounted 7¼ feet on an average of 9 inches daily, but the rate of rise has been falling off in the last 48 hours.

SURVIVORS BARE JAP TORTURE OF 55 U. S. CAPTIVES

Die Running 'Murderous Gantlet' on Sub.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2 (AP).—A Japanese submarine crew devised a "terrible and murderous gantlet" for the torture killing of captured Americans from a sunken Liberty ship, a west coast maritime union reported tonight.

The Japanese sailors lined up in double row, heavy steel stanchions in hand, and forced 55 Americans to run between them, said the account compiled from reports of survivors. "Man after man was killed" by blows from the steel clubs.

As some of the men attempted to jump overboard, the Japs would slash them, the document said.

23 of 100 Survive.

The report was the most complete so far made on the fate of a torpedoed steamer from which only 23 survived of 100 crewmen, gun crew, and passengers. It corroborated previous reports that the Japanese submarine submerged leaving Americans on deck with their hands tied.

The ship was torpedoed in the Indian ocean July 2. The personnel—41 merchant seamen, a navy gun crew of 28, 12 army enlisted men, and various other army and navy men—abandoned ship.

The submarine came to the surface and picked up those in lifeboats, but five men on a raft refused to swim to the submarine.

Fire on Men, but Miss.

"The Japanese, enraged, cut loose with machine guns, but, strangely enough, failed to hit any of the five," the account said.

"There were 95 men on the deck of the submarine, every man with his hands tied behind his back, so the Japs turned their attention to this large group."

First, one was shot and a second bayoneted, and their bodies thrown overboard. Then came the gantlet treatment for 55.

This torture was interrupted when Japanese detection devices picked up the approach of an allied bomber. The submarine submerged, leaving the bound men on deck to their fate.

A navy man who had concealed a knife cut his own bonds and those of others near-by. Some reached rafts and others swam until a patrol plane dropped rubber boats. On the morning of July 4 a rescue craft picked up 23 survivors.

A Thunderbolt for the Family

Republic Thunderbolt Amphibian, a family plane designed for post-war production by makers of P-47 Thunderbolt fighter planes.

Seats Four Persons

Moving into the almost undeveloped field of amphibian planes for personal and family use, Republic Aviation corporation, makers of the P-47 Thunderbolt fighting plane, have designed a Thunderbolt amphibian for post-war family use. Altho details still are tentative, the plane will be an all-metal, high wing amphibian monoplane, powered by a single 175 horsepower engine, which will accommodate four passengers and have a cruising speed of 105 and a maximum speed of 120 miles an hour. The price is expected to be under $4,000.

The plane will feature a big, comfortable cabin, with interior details and fittings following the latest ideas in automobile design. Other dimensions are: Wing spread, 36 feet; length, 26 feet 6 inches; heighth, 8 feet 7 inches; gross weight, 2,600 pounds. Both Republic plants at Farmingdale, N. Y., and Evansville, Ind., however, still are on full war production.

LIBERATORS HIT IWO ISLAND 5TH TIME IN 4 DAYS

PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Pearl Harbor, Dec. 2 (AP).—Seventh army air force Liberators Thursday made their fifth raid in four days on Iwo Island in the Volcano Islands, launching point of Japanese raids on the United States Super Fort base at Saipan.

The Liberators dropped 57½ tons of bombs on the Iwo air strip and other installations, which have been subjected to a steady pounding ever since Jap fighter planes began to sweep over Saipan on Nov. 26, a fleet bulletin said.

Five enemy fighters attempted unsuccessfully to break up the Liberator attack Thursday. Ack-ack damaged some of the American planes.

Adm. Nimitz' bulletin also listed air strikes ranging from Paramushiro in Japan's Kurile Islands to Wake and Palau.

1,000 JAPS FACE ANNIHILATION IN BESIEGED BHAMO

SOUTHEAST ASIA HDQ., Kandy, Ceylon, Dec. 2 (AP).—Chinese troops tightened their hold today on the north Burma stronghold of Bhamo, where 1,000 encircled Japanese troops face annihilation.

Except for a small frontage on the Irrawaddy river, all entrances to the town are blocked and the entire area is covered by Chinese artillery fire.

West of Bhamo British 36th division troops completed their occupation of Pinwe, which the Japanese abandoned without firing a shot. The enemy retreated southward along the railroad toward Mandalay and Rangoon. Pinwe is seven miles north of Naba and 167 miles north of Mandalay.

RAINS KEEP WAR IN PHILIPPINES CONFINED TO AIR

GEN. MacARTHUR'S HDQ., Philippines, Dec. 3 [Sunday]—(AP).—Aircraft traded vicious blows thruout the central Philippines, headquarters reported today, as blinding rains again halted the ground battle for Leyte Island's Ormoc corridor.

Japanese planes in force attacked American positions along Carigara bay, on Leyte's northwest coast. Other Nipponese bombers raided American held Morotai Island, in the Moluccas, a springboard for the Philippines.

American bombers meanwhile heavily attacked Japanese air bases thruout the central Philippines in new assaults to minimize the Nipponese aerial flank threat to Leyte.

JAPS CLAIM TO HAVE 2 SPEEDY NEW FIGHTERS

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The Japanese radio boasted yesterday that new Jap planes are being used "with brilliant success" in the Philippine theater. The Ginga [milky way], said Domei news agency, is "indeed the pride of the Japanese navy," and "even the Gruman fighter planes cannot match the Ginga in speed."

A second navy-type plane, the Suisei [comet], added the broadcast, "is stirring up a fearful whirlwind in the enemy camp in the Philippines."

CHINESE TAKE CHEFANG IN PUSH ON BURMA ROAD

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 2 (AP).—The Chinese high command announced today the capture of Chefang, last Japanese held town on the Burma road in Yunnan province short of the Burmese border town of Wanting. Chinese forces and American units took the town, 24 miles from Wanting against scant resistance yesterday.

Capture of Chefang kept up the pressure on the Japanese, who are falling back south burning villages as they go, and climaxed a 12 day drive from Mangshih, more than 30 miles up the Burma road. Its fall opened up the road for 575 miles from Kunming, capital of Yunnan province.

Brig. Gen. Frank Dorn, commanding the American force that trained the Chinese forces in that area, was quoted in a Kunming interview as expressing the hope the Ledo-Burma road would be opened by Christmas, but it was uncertain when the first trucks would enter China.

5,547 FAT STOCK HERE FOR THIRD WAR TIME SHOW

Entry List Is Biggest of Curtailed Exhibits.

BY GAIL COMPTON.

The Chicago Market Fat Stock show, the war time version of the famous International Livestock exposition, opened yesterday with 5,547 head of cattle, sheep, and hogs entered from 15 states and Canada on exhibit in tents and barns at the Union stockyards. The amphitheater at 43d and Halsted sts. is being utilized by war agencies, and for the third year the show is being held in unheated quarters.

The coveted title of grand champion steer, biggest honor that can go to an entry of an adult or junior stockman, will be awarded Wednesday. The show closes Thursday. Like all other animals shown individually or in carlots, the grand champion beef animal then will go directly to slaughter. Only fat animals, ready for market, are eligible, and immediate butchering saves transportation back home.

$4 a Pound Last Year.

T. Richard Lacy, 18, of Kansas, Ill., who won the grand championship the last two years, has three Herefords entered in an effort to continue his triumphs. Last year his winning steer was auctioned at $4 a pound, the third highest price ever paid for beef on the hoof. Price ceilings do not apply at the show's auctions of junior exhibits on Thursday.

In all, 520 youngsters, members of 4-H clubs, or the Future Farmers of America, have entered 792 head of cattle, 91 hogs, and 51 sheep in the junior feeding contest. Adults also have entered open classes, with the result that the entry list was the biggest of the war curtailed shows.

Junior Judging Monday.

Experts from packing houses will pick the carlot prize winners today, and John Burns of Fort Worth, Tex., will judge the junior class beef animals Monday. Some only 10 years old, 71 exhibitors in the junior class are girls. Yesterday they spent in the showmen's preliminaries of currying cattle, trimming sheep to increase blocky appearances, and rubbing talcum on white hogs, all designed to make the animals more attractive to the judges.

The weather was mild compared with the bitter cold that numbed fingers in the 1942 and 1943 shows.

Bothered by Weather.

Bothered most by the weather were William Morgan Jr., 16, and Big Boy, his 1,250 pound Hereford steer, who are the only entries from Mississippi. Other cattle from northern states had heavy, warm coats, but young Morgan brought his steer here a week early so that the animal would be acclimated for the show ring.

Bernard H. Heide, manager of the show, and the cattle at the show include exhibits from state colleges in Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Kentucky, and Indiana.

Canada Fines Publishing Firm Total of $10,000

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 2 (AP).—Fines totaling $10,000 and costs were levied against the Magazine Digest Publishing Co., Ltd., today on five charges under prices board paper control regulations. It was the first case of its kind in Canada. The company pleaded guilty to using a type of paper for which it had no permit and of falsely reporting the amount of its consumption of paper.

WOMAN, 70, DIES OF BURNS.

Torpedo Sinks Steamer Off Sweden; 16 of Crew Saved

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Dec. 2 (AP).—The steamer Kong Hafdan, sailing from Trondheim to Hamburg, was sunk by a torpedo off the Swedish port of Gotenburg today. Twelve Norwegians and four German members of the crew of 26 were rescued by Swedish ships which put out from Gotenburg.

900 FARM BOYS AND GIRLS MAKE GOOD IN BIG CITY

The rural spotlight of America this week is on Chicago, where 900 top ranking farm boys and girls are attending the 23d National 4-H Club congress. In addition to competing for live stock honors at the third war time Chicago Market Fat Stock show, the club members will compete in 19 other events, including health and achievement, for national 4-H club recognition.

Live stock competition leads the rest, with 520 of the club members entering 790 prime steers, 91 barrows and 51 lambs in the show. Seventy-one of these exhibitors are girls. Junior entries in the stock show, which is a substitute for the International Live Stock exposition, are double those of previous years.

A One Way Ride.

Yesterday these young stockmen and women spent the day getting their animals ready for the judge's eye. It's a one way ride for all stock, for each will be sold at auction Wednesday and Thursday, and OPA ceiling prices will not be enforced.

Twenty-two of the 4-H club members competing for national honors are from Indiana, where there are 3,000 clubs with more than 55,000 members.

Robert Orebaugh, 17, of Delaware county, Ind., is a typical midwestern club member. His father works in a war plant, and Robert carries on the farm program at home. In 1943 he raised enough food to supply 81 men in service. This year he is raising hogs.

2 States Do Well.

Indiana club members last year put in 2,595,604 extra hours of work on farms and at home for the war effort.

Down in North Carolina the 4-H club members are war conscious, too. Hilton Carlton, 17, Edgecombe county, took over the dairy route in his home town of Pinetop. In addition he made $600 an acre on his tobacco crop, and averaged $83 an acre in peanuts.

Three years ago the 4-H clubs of America took for their slogan "Feed a Fighter," and yesterday leaders estimated they had increased food production 25 per cent. Forty-eight girls, each a state winner in the clothing revue, will exhibit their winning wardrobes Tuesday morning.

BLOOM HITS BRITISH ATTACK ON COOPER'S FREE PRESS DRIVE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2 (AP).—An attack by a British magazine, the Economist, on the campaign of Kent Cooper and others for world news freedom was called "a pity" today by Chairman Bloom [D., N. Y.] of the house foreign affairs committee.

Bloom was among those instrumental in having congress pass, recently, a resolution endorsing the ideals espoused by Cooper, executive director and general manager of the Associated Press.

Apparently, the New Yorker commented, the Economist lacked "the facts."

Bloom said: "We ask for nothing at all other than what the different news agencies controled by foreign governments now have. We want the same privileges. We ask for an independent and free press everywhere in the world, not only for ourselves but for others, because we believe that if the press is able to print the truth freely that will do more to bring about a lasting peace than any other force in the world.

GANDHI, TIRED, TO REST UNTIL END OF YEAR

WARDHA, India, Dec. 2 [Reuters].—Mohandas Gandhi has decided, owing to feeling of mental fatigue, to abstain entirely from public activities until the end of the year, subject to exceptional circumstances of a "grave nature." Gandhi, now 75, said today he believed he had sufficiently recovered to go thru with routine work, but that "nature's warning has been sounding in his ears" during the last 10 days.

"My brain seems tired," he said. "There is a complete disinclination to speak and write."

PRESS FREEDOM FOR INDIA ASKED BY HINDU PAPER

NEW DELHI, India, Dec. 2 (AP).—The proposal of the American Society of Newspaper Editors in favor of a news charter for the world brought an editorial suggestion today from the nationalist Hindustan Times that the plan should be enlarged so that places such as India would not be overlooked.

Commenting on the society's proposal that no technical, legal, or other governmental barriers be placed in the way of free interchange of news, the newspaper said:

"Information and radio services in colonies and dependencies, and also in countries governed autocratically, should be entirely free from government ownership and control or direct or indirect subsidies."

WOMAN ROBBED OF PURSE.

Mrs. Bertha Markow, 558 Wellington av., was robbed of her purse containing $5 and her glasses by a man in front of 348 N. Bell av., she reported to police yesterday.

5 OF DOOLITTLE TOKYO RAIDERS 'ESCAPE' RUSSIA

Pampered as 'Captives'; Now Back in U. S.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2 (AP).—The latest of Lt. Gen. Doolittle's Tokyo raiders to be heard from, the five who landed in Russia, "escaped" across one of the world's best guarded borders and have returned safely to the United States.

The inside story of their adventure was learned today from an authoritative source. The tale was one of pampered "captives," of prolonged boredom, and finally of easy escape.

The five formed the crew of one of the 16 B-25 bombers which hit Tokyo April 18, 1942. This one made a forced landing in the Russian maritime province while the others flew on to China. This crew was interned in the soviet union, and left a year later.

Fast Talking Nearly Works.

By a bit of fast talking, the flyers almost escaped internment when they first came down without gasoline at an airport near Vladivostok.

They told the Russians their plane should be accorded the privilege of belligerent ships in distress to put into a neutral port, refuel, and proceed. The Russians seemed willing and put the Americans up for the night.

The next morning, however, the flyers found they had been interned.

The United States embassy, then headed by Adm. Standley, was notified and undertook to make contact with the men. They turned up in the central Russian town of Penza, between Moscow and Kuibyshev, where they were given a "dacha," or country house.

Given a Large House.

When the German advance to Stalingrad that summer threatened central Russia, the flyers were moved east to Ohansk, on the Kama river near Molotov, where they were given a large house.

Adm. Standley visited them Sept. 12, 1942, inspected their quarters and took them for a boat excursion on the Kama, complete with caterers, musicians and an English speaking hostess.

The flyers had comfortable rooms, plenty of food, servants, and an interpreter-guard who taught them Russian. They had the freedom of the river town, went swimming and were promised hunting in the fall.

But they were chafing at their inactivity. They could talk freely, because all Russians left the room while Adm. Standley listened to them, and they said they wanted to get back into action.

Become "Usefully Employed."

That winter they were transferred to Ashkhabad where, as the Russians put it, they would be warmer and could be "usefully employed." Ashkhabad is on the soviet-Iranian border, just east of the Caspian sea.

One day they drove across the border in a truck to the Iranian city of Meshed, and never returned.

Soviet officials never drew the attention of the United States embassy to the "escape," and the Americans never mentioned it to the Russians.

Governor at Show

Gov. Green looking thru sight of 20 mm. anti-aircraft gun at navy's 6th war loan exhibit yesterday as Adm. Clark H. Woodward watches.

Gov. Green, guest of the navy yesterday at its sixth war loan exhibit at Navy pier, arranged for the purchase by the Illinois state treasury of 5 million dollars in war bonds to bring the state's total for such subscriptions in 1944 to 35 millions. The governor also dug into his own pocket and bought a $1,000 bond on "Illinois day" at the exhibit, mate 3 million.

The show will close its record-breaking run of 16 days at 10:30 tonight when the aggregate attendance is expected to approximate 3 million.

Final demonstrations of a jet-assisted takeoff [JATO] in a Grumman Hellcat fighter plane are scheduled for 12:15 and 3:15 p. m. today at the airport. The final "invasion" of Foster av. beach will be staged by marines from 2 to 3 p. m. and the last coast guard helicopter demonstration of an air-sea rescue will be held from 3:45 to 4 p. m. at the pier.

Mrs. Laurence Pfaelzer, president of the Chicago Women's Aid, yesterday christened three aircraft rescue ships during a treasury department special program at the pier. Members of the Woman's Aid bought $240,000 in war bonds.

Sixth war loan sales to individuals reached $53,444,000 up to Dec. 1 against a quota of $235,596,000, and an over-all quota, including corporations, of $836,160,000 for Chicago and Cook county. Individual sales for the state totaled 90½ millions against a quota of 351 millions.

CHINESE ADMIT JAP WEDGE INTO KWEICHOW AREA

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 2 (AP).—The Chinese tonight admitted Japanese skirmishers had thrust into Liming pass, 110 miles southeast of the Kweichow capital, Kweiyang, which was being evacuated ahead of the gathering menace.

This was the first official Chinese word that the Japanese had broken into Kweichow province, but the high command said the attackers were thrown back. The pass begins in Kweichow just north of the Kwangsi border town of Liuchai.

The Tokyo radio said the Japanese advance had seized the only two highways and the railroad leading into Kweichow from Kwangsi province "along the shortest route to Chungking."

The Kweichow provincial government ordered the evacuation of all its nonessential employes from Kweiyang.

Reveal Nazis Use Two New Super-Speed Fighters

LONDON, Dec. 2 (AP).—Germany has two super-speed fighter planes operating over the western front, one of them the rocket-propelled interceptor ME-163 capable of flying up to 600 miles an hour, allied air sources disclosed today. The other is the jet-propelled, twin-engined ME-262, capable of flying from 450 to 500 miles an hour.

Soldier Freed in Killing of 6 Vichy Militiamen

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 2.—Baptiste Mertz, 24, French soldier who admitted killing four members of the Vichy militia, today was acquitted by a court of justice in Limoges, southern stronghold of the French Forces of the Interior. Mertz learned Jean Berger, notorious militiaman, was to be released from a concentration camp. Armed with a tommy gun, Mertz went to the camp and shot Berger and three other prisoners.

SHOT IN TAVERN; DIES.

James Thurman, 25, Negro, of 4340 South Park way, died yesterday en route to the Provident hospital after he had been shot in a tavern at 5012 South Park way. Leland O'Neill, 35, who lives above the tavern, was held for questioning by police.

FOUND DEAD WITH GAS ON.

Frederick Brash, 77, of 3619 Ravenswood av., was found dead on the floor of his apartment yesterday, apparently overcome by gas from a small heating stove. Police surmised he had fainted as he started to light the gas.

SHORE LEAVE AT NIGHT ENDED FOR BERMUDA YANKS

Hamilton, Bermuda, Dec. 2 (AP).—Rear Adm. Frank A. Braisted today canceled shore leave after 6 p. m. for all enlisted men of the United States navy in Bermuda. His order was published after Morris A. Gibbons had criticized the "behavior and lawlessness of certain men of the United States navy" in a speech in the Bermuda house of assembly.

Gibbons said navy men had been responsible for a series of recent crimes in which women had been attacked, men dragged from bicycles and an elderly couple driven from their home.

The order issued by Adm. Braisted also prohibits drinking on public streets and provides stringent punishment for violation.

WAR MOVES ON; JUNGLE INVADES SITE OF U. S. BASE

8 Months Make a Great Change in New Guinea.

BY WALTER SIMMONS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AT AN ADVANCED NEW GUINEA BASE, Dec. 2.—War moves on. Eight months ago the Japs held this area. In two years of occupation they did little except build a few air fields and antagonize the natives; they contributed nothing to the country.

Then the Americans came.

Great Base Rises.

In six months they made this one of the greatest bases in the Pacific. Engineers did amazing feats in building permanent roads. The jungle was pushed back to make room for tents and mess halls. Thousands of temporary buildings were erected. Gen. MacArthur established his advanced headquarters atop a great hill.

When two divisions left to invade the Philippines the base had its greatest period of activity. Its harbor was loaded with shipping and its roads were heavy with the dust of vehicles and men on the move.

Jungle Does a Comeback.

Since then the withdrawal of units has been continuous. The jungle grew up quickly around the deserted camp sites. Tents and buildings have disappeared, leaving only a few oil barrels and tin cans behind. Gen. MacArthur and his staff have been in the Philippines for six weeks. The base now contains, besides garrison and service troops, only a few miscellaneous outfits and a busy air field. It is suffering the fate of deserted Port Moresby on the other side of the island.

Pvt. Bryce Engle, CHICAGO TRIBUNE city hall reporter on military leave of absence, expressed the average G. I.'s view of this situation:

"I hope we leave a lot more bases like this behind us—and fast."

LEFTISTS QUIT GREEK CABINET; HIT BRITISH EDICT

ATHENS, Dec. 2 (AP).—A Greek cabinet crisis over a British army proclamation disbanding guerrillas came to a head today with the resignation of all six ministers belonging to the left wing EAM party.

Premier George Papandreou, expressing regret at the resignations, reiterated his determination to stick to his task and called the cabinet into another session.

John Zavgos, Communist minister of agriculture, stepped down, protesting what he styled "unilateral decisions" of Maj. Gen. Ronald Mackenzie Scobie, British commander of allied troops in Greece.

Churchill O. Ks Regime.

LONDON, Dec. 2 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill announced tonight that Britain was giving her full support to the Papandreou government in Greece. The announcement from the prime minister's office indorsed the policy of Maj. Gen. Ronald M. Scobie, allied commander in chief in Greece.

LONDON TO SEE FINAL PARADE OF HOME GUARDS

LONDON, Dec. 2 (AP).—Britain's home guard, organized to meet the 1940 threat of a German invasion, will "stand down" tomorrow when a parade thru the heart of London completes the ceremonies marking the end of its active career.

Picked contingents arrived by train today from all parts of the united kingdom and attended a dinner given tonight by the lord mayor of London.

More than 5,000 men will march in the parade. Among the units will be the 1st American squadron, home guard, organized in July, 1940, by Americans living in London, and the only unit of foreigners in history to be incorporated in the British army. Its officers hold the king's commission without an oath of allegiance.

Shoplifter to Take Infant with Her to British Jail

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—A 6 week old British baby went to prison today. When the infant's young mother was sentenced for shoplifting, she was told she might take the infant with her. Another child, 2, is to be sent to a detention home. The mother has been convicted seven times previously.

TERESA WRIGHT.

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 2 (AP).—Actress Teresa Wright, academy award winner for her work in "Mrs. Miniver," became a mother today for the first time. A baby boy, weighing 7 pounds, 4 ounces, was born to her and her husband, Niven Busch, screen writer and novelist.

ALBANIA REGIME DEFIES GREEKS ON BOUNDARIES

TIRANA, Albania, Dec. 2 (AP).—To the accompaniment of a 21 gun salute and dancing and singing in the streets, the new Albanian government entered the capital of Tirana today and promised defiantly it was ready to fight to preserve the nation's southern boundaries fronting Greece. Col. Gen. Enver Hoxha, who heads both the Partisan army and the government as prime minister, said any attempts to alter the boundaries would be resisted with force. Hoxha referred to statements he said were made by Premier Papandreou of Greece to the effect that Greece wants territory to the north and west.

Among Americans in the capital during the festivities was Corp. Milton Tassi, 1609 Delaware st., Gary, Ind.

Pick Romanian General to Head New Cabinet

BARE HEROISM OF 750 SAVED IN SEA OF SHARKS

Survivors of Philippine Navy Battle Return.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 2 (AP).—Sharks grabbed two men as they leaped from the doomed escort carrier Gambier Bay. Other men were so thirsty as they bobbed in the Philippines sea that they swallowed sea water, sickened and died.

Some injured in the fight with a numerically superior group of Japanese warships off Samar, in the Philippines, Oct. 25 breathed their last on rubber rafts and were buried at sea.

But 750 lived to tell of stirring experiences. Many of these were among 1,200 survivors of the famed sea battle off the Philippines who arrived in San Francisco yesterday.

The Gambier Bay, among a group of American escort carriers and destroyers which were confronted by enemy battleships and cruisers off Samar, was hit by shells at 8:10 a. m., was ordered abandoned at 8:50, and went down at 9.

Men in Water 40 Hours.

Some survivors were in the water more than 40 hours before being picked up 40 miles from the Philippines.

Capt. Walter V. R. Vieweg of Elmira, N. Y., Gambier Bay commanding officer who corroborated accounts of sharks killing two men, said:

"I acted as doctor and chaplain for my group [of rubber rafts]. We buried some of the men at sea, men who died of injuries received in the fight. We recited the Lord's Prayer in unison."

Capt. Vieweg, whose wife and two sons are in Berkeley, Cal., told of the beginning of the battle.

"At 4:30 a. m. we were at battle stations," he said. "At 6:30 everything seemed quiet, but at 6:45 strangers appeared to be around—a force of four Jap battleships and eight cruisers, approaching us at 30 knots which was faster than the Gambier Bay's speed."

"In our force were three destroyers and four destroyer escorts," Capt. Vieweg said.

Hit in Engine Room.

"We took a hit in the engine room and then a Jap cruiser, 2,000 yards away, started firing point blank at us.

"I gave the order to abandon ship and after a while tried to get down from the bridge for a final check but smoke overcame me and, loaded down with a heavy pistol and wearing my helmet, I stumbled off the side, falling 40 feet into the water.

"I paddled around until I was clear of the ship. She was rolling over. In a few minutes I reached a life raft and started immediately to collect rafts and organize the men. I stopped when I saw an enemy ship nearby.

"Finally we did collect some of the rafts into one group. Others did the same."

The morale, heroism, and spirit of their men were praised highly by Capt. Vieweg and Comdr. Richard R. Ballinger, executive officer of the Gambier Bay.

"After nearly two days in the water, we were picked up by LCIs 40 miles from the Philippines," Capt. Vieweg continued.

An Inspiring Seaman.

"Let me cite one example of spirit as typical. That is Earl Fetkenhier, 18, seaman 2d class, of Adian, Mich., who had his heel shot off in battle. He didn't lose his cheerfulness once and didn't whimper, either. He served as our head morale raiser."

Manning the last plane but unable to take off from the deck of the carrier was Lt. (j. g.) Henry Pyzdrowski, Pittsburgh, Pa., who told of leaping from the flight deck into the water.

Short in his description of having his ship shot from under him was Ensign Lawrence Epping, Salem, Ore.

"It was hell," he said.

Agreeing with him, heartily, were Lt. (j. g.) William Lynch, 1515 N. Linder av., Chicago, and Lt. Robert Young, Sellersville, Pa.

The other survivors arriving at San Francisco were from the destroyers Hoel and Johnston and the destroyer escort Samuel B. Roberts, which also were lost.

Loving Cat

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Margaret Hussbauer, 6208 Justine st., is hugged by "Mannie, the Loving Cat" at annual meeting yesterday of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Mannie, an 11 year old performing cat whose tricks have helped to sell 3 million dollars worth of war bonds, according to his owner, Mrs. Loretto Chrisman, was a special attraction yesterday at the annual meeting of the Anti-Cruelty society, 157 W. Grand av.

During the society's last fiscal year, it has rehabilitated, returned to owners, or painlessly disposed of more than 19,000 dogs and 16,000 cats, W. A. Young, managing director, reported.

'PAT WING 10' IS BACK AND LIVING UP TO ITS RECORD

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LEYTE, P. I., Dec. 2.—Patrol wing 10, whose 45 waddling Catalina flying boats made up the naval air force in the Philippines at the start of the war, is back. It has a new name—fleet air wing 10—and its original commander, Capt. Frank D. Wagner, has been promoted to rear admiral and made air commander for the 7th fleet, but already it is living up to the enviable record set in the first months of the war.

Two officers from Pat wing 10, as it was known up and down the islands, command it now. The skipper is Comdr. Jack C. Renard, a Chicagoan, who went to Annapolis Naval academy and then became a navy flyer. He was executive officer under Wagner. Renard's executive officer is Comdr. Charles R. Eisenbach of Trenton, N. J.

Five Attack Battleship.

The two men dread recalling those first months. They would patch up some crate, send her along hundreds of miles thru Jap controled areas to seek new Jap convoys. And when they found the ships, they attacked. Nothing else was available.

One day five Catalinas, which strain a strut to go 100 miles an hour, were attacking a Jap battleship. Only two came back. But they damaged the battleship. Destroyers were small bait.

In a couple of weeks they had only 28 of their 45 planes left. So they would just search and then run. A pilot would find a convoy, report it, and the commander would say thank you. Worry about it was all he could do.

On the day before Christmas, the 28 planes were ordered to Ambon, between New Guinea and Java. Their three small ship tenders zigzagged thru the islands with them. One is now back in the Philippines. A fourth, the Langley, went to Australia.

Only Three Guns on "Cat."

The "Cats" operated from Ambon until hours before the Japs landed. Then they went to Java. They again become attack bombers. Fifteen more came up from Australia. Pitting a 'Cat,' which in those days had only three guns to protect itself, against warships and fighting planes was a losing battle but the "Cats" kept. On. The Langley tried to reach Java with a load of fighters to provide protection, but she was sunk.

At last, on March 5, Pat wing 10 pulled out of the isles and went to Australia. It had just three planes left and each carried at least 30 passengers, altho 10 is the normal load.

Pat wing 10 took over the defense of western Australia. They hunted shipping thruout the Indies. They picked up more than 250 American soldiers and civilians stranded by the fast Japanese advance. When Liberators and Mitchells began attacking the Indies, the Cats went along as rescue planes and many is the crew they picked out of the water.

Sink 250,000 Tons of Ships.

Together the Catalinas have played a big part in the fight back to the Philippines. These slow craft, once laughed at for their awkward appearance and dawdling speed, have sunk more than 250,000 tons of Jap shipping and damaged even more. As rescue planes they have been the best friend and morale builder of army and navy flyers, picking up almost 300 men, many of them literally under the guns of Jap batteries.

AMERICAN MAJOR CHARGES BRITISH 'STEAL US BLIND'

Higher-Ups Also Blamed in Cigaret Shortage.

BY JAMES SLOAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Some startling reasons why American soldiers overseas can't get cigarets even tho the home front is on short rations to provide them were presented last night in the army newspaper Stars and Stripes. In a letter to the editor, a major in the quartermaster corps charged: "We know British dock laborers are stealing us blind, and nothing is done to stop it. Many cigarets donated to troops are distributed thru special service officers to their friends, or they keep them themselves.

"British Allowed to Buy."

"Many British troops stationed at or near camps are allowed to buy American cigarets and their own British allotment too. The army also supplies the Red Cross, the navy, and other United States agencies, including the embassy and the war shipping administration.

"As a supply officer having seen what has been 'frozen' in depots, I believe the 'brass' has hit the G. I. below the belt. If we're short of tobacco, it's because we've had bad supply officers—at the top—poor planning, or bad logistics."

Another Yank wrote that in a military hospital which previously had treated wounded Americans but now handles captured Germans, prisoners received the same cigaret ration which United States troops had received. When sales to G. I.s were halted, the Nazis continued to receive smokes and one ward had no less than 15 cartons, the Yank said.

Free to Germans.

Another soldier reported that while he was waiting to debark from a hospital train in France, he saw German war prisoners at work at a labor battalion, and was told by one of the medical officers in charge that "the Huns get their cigaret ration every week, only they don't have to pay."

Break Safe for $2,500; Steal Acetylene Tools

Burglars found it necessary only to knock the combination off the safe in the auto repair shop of Carl Pidone, 2374 Milwaukee av., to get the $2,500 the strong box contained. But foreseeing that the future may hold tougher assignments, they also stole an acetylene torch and oxygen tank valued at $120, Pidone told the Shakespeare Avenue police.

COUNTY BALLOT WINNERS TAKE OATH TOMORROW

County officials elected Nov. 7 will take their oaths of office tomorrow, the interest of Democratic leaders and county officials centering in the newly elected state's attorney, William J. Tuohy, the only one of the group taking office for the first time.

Mayor Kelly and other officials will attend the Tuohy induction at 11 a. m. in the Criminal Courts building where former Corporation Counsel Francis X. Busch will be the chairman. Also attending will be Tuohy's 83 year old mother, Mrs. Julia Tuohy, his wife and four children and the Rev. Joseph Lannon, S. J., pastor of St. Ignatius church, which Tuohy attends.

The only appointment announced by Tuohy yesterday was that of James F. Ashenden, member of the state's attorney staff for 12 years, who will be his secretary.

Sheriff Mulcahy will be sworn in at 10 a. m. Coroner Brodie, County Recorder Kaindl, and Circuit Court Clerk Conroy will be sworn in after the Tuohy ceremonies. Superior Court Clerk Sonnenschein was sworn in Friday.

The four sanitary district trustees elected Nov. 7 will be sworn in prior to the meeting of the board Tuesday.

REP. LUCE URGES U.S. SUPPLY MORE NURSES FOR WAR

PARIS, Dec. 2 (AP).—Rep. Luce [R., Conn.], commenting on reports received today by touring members of the house military affairs committee at allied headquarters, said American women "have not been doing their part" as well as the British in supplying nurses.

"A large number of nurses is needed immediately and more will be needed later on," Mrs. Luce said. "Perhaps there is something wrong with our method of training and recruiting nurses, but in this phase American women have not been doing their part as well as the British. American women have done wonderfully, tho, in industry."

The congressmen were told by army authorities that types A and O blood, which can be flown directly to France are needed urgently.

No Shortage of Cigarets.

The visiting legislators were informed there is no shortage of cigarets for American troops, but a lack of transportation disrupted distribution. The cigarets may be distributed on a normal basis in some areas next week.

"The question came down to one of whether it should be bullets or butts," Mrs. Luce said, "and, of course, the priority went to bullets."

[It was announced today that American combat troops and hospital patients in Britain now can buy seven packs of cigarets a week in post exchanges and other personnel can obtain five packs a week. An earlier announcement said combat soldiers would get five packs a week and noncombat troops two.]

Rep. Luce said she was not a heavy smoker, but because of the shortage she was not smoking until after lunch during her European tour.

Hear Reports on War.

The touring representatives received a full description of the allied offensive. They sat for six and a half hours in a room covered with maps and diagrams and heard first hand reports from generals and chiefs of divisions.

Rep. Merritt [D., N. Y.], spokesman for the committee, called the session "the greatest thing that ever happened" for the congressmen and added, "The war department should lose no opportunity to give congress such periodic reports at all times."

The legislators leave tomorrow on a five day trip which will take them near the forward combat areas and each of them except Mrs. Luce tonight received his steel helmet as part of his equipment. Mrs. Luce was absent when the helmets were issued because she had slipped away to an appointment with a hairdresser.

ALLIES WIN 2 POINTS IN ITALY AS NAZIS CONTINUE RETREAT

ROME, Italy, Dec. 2 (AP).—Two positions north and south of Faenza have fallen to allied armies, headquarters announced today as German withdrawal thru the mountains toward the Po plain continued in the face of threats against the enemy's eastern flank.

Indian troops of the British 8th army seized strongly defended Albereto, a village five miles northeast of Faenza, capturing 100 prisoners.

The United States 5th army, swinging across the Lamone river, which blocks the approaches to Faenza, occupied Monte Giornetto, 11 miles southwest of the city.

HINT AT EARLY ATTACK ON N. Y. BY GERMAN 'V-3'

LONDON, Dec. 2 (AP).—A Stockholm dispatch yesterday quoted Albert Speer, Nazi labor chief, as saying that Germany's V-3 weapon would be ready for firing against New York by the end of December. No intimation was given as to the nature of V-3, if such a weapon has been perfected.

Services at New York "Ready."

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Commenting on a reported statement by a Nazi that Germany's V-3 weapon would be ready soon to blast New York, Arthur W. Wallander, deputy chief police inspector and chief of staff of the city protective forces, said today, "Our services are ready."

ORDER SEPARATE PACT DRAWN ON 2 AIR FREEDOMS

Delegates' Unanimity a Hint Some Will Sign.

BY FRANK HUGHES.

A subcommittee of the international civil aviation conference yesterday decided to draft the freedom to fly across a nation's territory without landing and the freedom of aircraft to land for nontraffic purposes into a separate document to be presented for signature by the 54 allied and neutral nations assembled here in the Stevens hotel since Nov. 1.

The motion carried unanimously, and conference spokesmen interpreted this to mean many delegations would sign the document. It will be related to a permanent world air covenant still to be drafted, but will not be a part of it.

"In practice this recognizes the first big approach toward generally recognized exchange of friendly permission in the air," said Adolf A. Berle Jr., chairman of the United States delegation and president of the conference.

Entry Rights Not Covered.

The two freedoms thus singled out for approval do not cover any rights of commercial entry into any nation.

The United States has laid before the conference another document which guarantees complete freedom of flight, and which contains the much discussed "five freedoms" of the air.

Like the "two freedom" document which developed yesterday, it is on an optional basis, and the fact that no general agreement to it was foreseen probably was responsible for yesterday's new document.

Max Hymans, chairman of the French delegation, held a press conference yesterday at which he said his delegation had drawn up the "two freedom" idea four days ago and that it was the idea for a solution the French proposed when they left Paris more than a month ago.

Invitation from Paris.

He explained the first two air freedoms—the right to fly over a nation and to land in it for nontraffic purposes—as "political" freedoms. All the others, he said, are "economic."

M. Hymans said his government had invited the conference to locate the permanent seat of the world air body in Paris. Gov. Green has proposed Chicago, calling it the air and transportation center of the United States.

A conference spokesman said the conference executive committee probably would recommend a site to the assembly just before the closing sessions.

U. S. AND SPAIN SIGN PACT ON 3 AIR ROUTES

MADRID, Spain, Dec. 2 (AP).—Carlton J. Hayes, United States ambassador, and the Spanish foreign minister, Jose Felix Lequerica, today signed a commercial air agreement that permits the United States to use Spanish air fields on three passenger, freight and mail routes into Europe and Africa from America.

The agreement, reached after 18 months of negotiations, covers these routes: [1] New York to Lisbon, Madrid, Barcelona, and thence to Marseille and points beyond; [2] New York to Lisbon, Madrid, Algiers and points beyond; [3] New York to Miami, thru South America to West Africa, to Villa Cisneros in Spanish Morocco; Rio de Oro, French Morocco; Sevilla, Madrid, Barcelona, Paris and points beyond. Returns are made by the same routes.

The accord provides that Spanish air carriers may operate passenger and cargo mail lines thru the United States under the same conditions, but each party is barred from engaging in internal traffic in the other country.

Boys' Sister, Not Father, Awarded Their Custody

Judge John Prystalski in Circuit court yesterday awarded custody of Richard Lucas, 16, and Jerome Lucas, 11, to their sister, Miss Rita Lucas, with whom they have been living at 5605 S. Seeley av. Their custody had been sought by their father, Charles Lucas, an electrician, who remarried shortly after the death of his first wife, the boys' mother, two years ago.

Wants One Son Back

Pvt. Roman Anczer, holding picture of brother, Florian, reported missing, and mother, Mrs. Anton Anczer, holding picture of son, Anton Jr., killed in action.

Mr. and Mrs. Anton Anczer of 2125 W. 57th st., both of whom are ill and unable to work, are petitioning the war department to release their son, Pvt. Roman A. Anczer, 24, from the army so that he may contribute to their support.

The war department already has agreed to retain Pvt. Anczer permanently in the United States, taking cognizance of the family's loss of Pvt. Anton [Tony] Anczer of the field artillery, killed in action in Italy last December, and the news that Staff Sgt. Florian Anczer has been reported missing in France since Sept. 11.

The Anczers have had six children. Roman, Dorothy, a young daughter, Ted, 34, who lives with wife and 3 year old daughter at 4821 S. Laflin st., and Florian are living.

Roman is the family's only possible breadwinner, the father said.

Two Robbers Get $936 at Laundry and Escape

Two gunmen yesterday invaded the Arcadia laundry, 850 W. 119th st., and forced Styras Salapatas, its president, to surrender $676 from the cash drawer. The robbers then searched his person and took $260 more. The two disconnected the phones before leaving. Anthony Thanas, a salesman, pursued the gunmen's car in a laundry truck driven by Gust Grapsas, but lost it in traffic.

EVERSHARP'S PLANT SHUT AS FIRE HAZARD

Police closed the Eversharp, Inc., pen and pencil manufacturing plant at 1800 Roscoe st., yesterday noon after a complaint by John L. Fenn, chief of the Chicago fire prevention bureau, that 15 specific violations of the fire ordinance had been found at the plant.

Huge quantities of a plastic product with a nitro-cellulose base were stored in the building, in which are employed 1,800 persons, Fenn said.

Lt. Patrick Krourke of the Damen av. police station, at the request of the fire commissioner's office, served the warrant which commanded the executive in charge of the plant to appear in License court tomorrow morning.

Police Guard Posted.

Two policemen were stationed at the plant and only a small maintenance crew was permitted to enter.

Fenn asserted the material is highly inflammable and that it gives off explosive fumes as it decomposes in storage and manufacture. The company, said Fenn, was ordered not to store more than 25 pounds of the material in one place at a time and to install fireproof storage vaults, explosive proof electric switches, and other safety equipment. These recommendations, he said, have been ignored.

On Feb. 23, 1944, Eversharp was fined $200 by Municipal Judge Erwin J. Hasten on charges that the firm had failed to comply with fire department regulations and remove completed quantities of nitrocellulose in the plant to locations where the material would not be a fire hazard.

Contracts Canceled.

The navy, said Fenn, later canceled its contracts for aircraft instruments. Last December, he said, when the plant was partly engaged in war work, the protective securities division of the army's 6th service command complained to him that government property was imperiled. The army also later canceled its contracts, he said.

Plant officials could not be reached yesterday. Martin L. Straus, Eversharp president, and Nicholas Zaro, vice president and general manager, were reported en route home from New York City last night.

FIRE CAUSES $500 LOSS.

Fire which apparently started from an overheated gas water heater yesterday caused an estimated $500 damage to a women's hat factory at 326 Adams st., owned by Max Krillof.

Gas Station Attendant Suffers Critical Burns

Ralph Bartolomei, 32, of 3119 Berteau av., a filling station attendant, was in critical condition last night from burns suffered early yesterday when his oil soaked clothing caught fire from a gas heater. Excited, he jumped thru the plate glass window of the station, which is at 1443 Ogden av., and collapsed in the street. Police took him to Henrotin hospital.

FOUND DEAD NEAR HOME.

Malcolm Smith, 46, of 7436 Kimbark av., a machinist, was found dead in front of his home yesterday, apparently of a heart attack.

WPB PLANS NEW WAR PLANTS AT ½ BILLION COST

Infantry Mortar Needs Given as Reason.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2 (AP).—The armament task now in sight may retard reconversion for some time after Germany collapses, Chairman Krug of the war production board said today.

He made that observation in disclosing that 500 million dollars' worth of new plant construction is planned to boost the production of shells for infantry mortars.

The drive to get lagging production programs on other war implement up to the pace needed to meet the demands of war on two major fronts is showing "excellent progress," Krug told a news conference. New workers, he said, are entering war plants in "encouraging" numbers in Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Philadelphia.

Cutback Plans Revised.

The unexpectedly rapid advance against Japan, piling new Pacific demands atop the requirements of Europe, has caused the army to revise its V-E day cutback plans, Krug said.

Tentatively, the war department has submitted estimates of anticipated contract cancelations appreciably lower than the 46 per cent estimated last summer, Krug explained. The estimate is bound to change from time to time until the Nazis actually quit, he said.

But if the army's present estimate holds good, the WPB chief continued, these modifications will have to take place in the WPB's announced program to give industry virtually a free hand after victory in Europe:

1. Instead of entering unlimited production, the automobile industry and some other lines of civilian production must be placed under production ceilings limiting output to the material and labor which can be spared.

Strict Construction Control.

2. The vast construction industry —counted on by many firms to build new factories for peace time goods —would be continued under strict control.

3. Fewer WPB orders and regulations would be revoked automatically than the 350 previously announced for the scrap pile.

While plane production failed to meet its goal in November, Krug observed: "I don't think any of the lag can be traced to the complacency of labor in the aircraft plants."

Changes in design were blamed for the output of slightly less than 6,800 planes, Krug said, compared with a schedule of around 7,000.

No Policy Change.

The 90 day suspension of new "spot" authorizations for civilian goods manufacture in 126 labor shortage areas, announced yesterday, does not represent a change of WPB policy, the chairman stated.

"When the 'spot' authorization plan was adopted, it appeared there would be a great many holes where civilian work could be fitted in without hurting war production. Developments of the last four or five months show that there are few if any holes in the critical areas. And with the new military programs we are trying to get into production, there will be even fewer holes."

HEAR INAUGURAL DAY IS PAY DAY FOR '1,000 CLUB'

Report Slush Fund Donors Invited.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—Capitol hill heard today that President Roosevelt has ordered invitations to his inaugural ceremonies sent to members of the Democratic One Thousand club, whose members were promised special privileges and a hand in formulating administration policies in return for contributions of $1,000 each to the Roosevelt campaign fund.

The report that Mr. Roosevelt had put out the welcome mat for the slush fund contributors brought immediate criticism from members of congress.

Called "First Payment."

Sen. Robertson [R., Wyo.] said: "This is Mr. Roosevelt's first payment. He is starting to pay back. He doen't as a rule. I'm glad to know he's paying. The inauguration will be a New Deal affair, anyway, with the Republicans of congress getting a place in the back row."

Sen. Taft [R., O.] chuckled as he said inviting the One Thousand club might prove useful to the senate. "Now," he commented, "maybe we can get a list of members. The senate ought to keep the list for reference when any of the club members come up for senate confirmation of appointments by the President."

Sen. Wherry [R., Neb.], senate whip, said: "This is the first payoff the President expects to make when he begins his fourth term."

Showing Gratitude.

Rep. Knutson [R., Minn.] observed: "That shows the President is not devoid of a sense of gratitude. If he stops there, it will be well and good. The thousand club members, I suppose, will get ringside seats."

The One Thousand club was an issue in the recent Presidential campaign, in which Mr. Roosevelt was accused of offering special consideration to persons with $1,000 to contribute to the New Deal cause.

After the club had been disavowed by Chairman Hannegan of the Democratic national committee, Mr. Roosevelt admitted that he himself had suggested its organization.

M'KAY AND TWO OTHERS ACCUSED OF BRIBERY PLOT

Named in Writ Issued by Judge Carr.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 2 [Special].—Frank D. McKay, Grand Rapids business man and former Republican national committeeman, was indicted today, together with a Republican legislator and a lobbyist, on grand jury charges that they conspired to influence "corruptly" the 1943 legislature's consideration of legislation pertaining to parimutuel horse race betting.

Judge Leland W. Carr of Ingham county Circuit court, who has been investigating state affairs for more than a year in the role of a one man grand jury, issued the warrant. It charged that McKay conspired with Rep. William Green of Hillman and Floyd Fitzsimmons, Benton Harbor sports promoter and lobbyist, to bribe unidentified legislators in an effort to gain passage of the racing bill in the form sought by them.

Kim Sigler, special prosecutor, said the men named in the indictment will be accorded a speedy trial. Judge Carr said they have been given until Tuesday to surrender for arraignment.

Secretive About Details.

Both Carr and Sigler were secretive as to details of the charges to be pressed against the three men. Sigler explained that it would be unwise "to tip off beforehand what might become evidence in this case."

It was recalled by legislative observers, however, that the bill involved in the charges was intended to increase the state's share of horse race betting at the Detroit fairground tracks and to require the installation of a certain type of machine for computing odds.

The measure died in the house state affairs committee, to which it was originally referred.

The legislature, during its first 1944 special session, enacted a measure increasing the state's share of Detroit horse race betting, but made no stipulation regarding the computing machinery installed at the track.

Served as State Treasurer.

McKay, who served as state treasurer from 1925 thru 1929, became a power in Republican state politics. He was acquitted of mail fraud charges in 1943 after being indicted by a federal grand jury at Detroit. During that trial the prosecution endeavored to link McKay with deals negotiated by the state liquor control commission.

McKay said tonight he was "very surprised" at the indictment, and added he was "never interested in any horse racing bill."

Fitzsimmons at one time promoted some of the leading sports events in Michigan. He has a wide acquaintance in the boxing and racing fields.

BOOST NAZI SPY'S SENTENCE.

BUENOS, AIRES, Argentina, Dec. 2 [AP].—The Argentine federal court of appeals today increased the sentence of Hans Zweigert, convicted as a German spy, from two to four years. The heavier penalty was imposed because Zweigert's "activities were "directed against the United States and Great Britain."

MEDICAL QUEST FOR LEUKEMIA CURE FRUITLESS

Patricia 'Sailing Under Her Own Power.'

Cause and cure of lymphatic leukemia, the blood disease against which Patricia Attaway, 6, is fighting for her life in St. Charles hospital, Aurora, are still unknown, medical authorities reported yesterday.

Condition of the child victim whose plight attracted national attention when the Red Cross was asked to find her Seabee daddy, Chief Petty Officer M. F. Attaway, and to bring him home from the South Pacific, was described by hospital authorities yesterday as "unchanged," but she remained cheerful and happy that her father was home.

"Keeping Chins Up."

Patricia is "sailing under her own power," her physician, Dr. E. M. Thomas, said yesterday. He added that today marks the end of the second week Patricia has continued to hold her own without a blood transfusion.

"There is no immediate indication that we will resort to blood transfusions again," he said. "We are keeping our chins up but making no foolish predictions."

Patricia showed improvement when her father arrived at her bedside Saturday. But the disease from which she is suffering always terminates fatally, said Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, head of the department of physiology at Northwestern university medical school.

Describes Two Types.

As pointed out by Dr. Ivy, there are two principal kinds of leukemia. One is the lymphatic gland type which has stricken Patricia. The other is known as myelogenous leukemia, involving the cells in the bone marrow.

Both types of the disease, he said, produce a marked increase in the number of white blood cells known as leukacytes, having an average diameter of 1/2500th of an inch.

When these white cells gain ascendancy in the blood stream, they crowd out the red corpuscles which carry oxygen. In still a third type of the disease, most difficult to diagnose, Dr. Ivy said the white cell count may remain at normal or even go below normal. This third type of the disease is known as aleukemic leukemia.

Usually Attacks Children.

The acute form of the disease usually attacks children, Dr. Ivy explained. At its onset, he said, the acute form resembles an infectious disease and may be diagnosed only by examining the blood and lymph glands.

Treatment, Dr. Ivy said, consists in the use of X-ray and the intravenous injection of radio active substances, such as phosphorus.

Such treatments in certain instances, he asserted, are able to give temporary relief, but in the end the disease always recurs and the victim dies.

Medical science is carrying on widespread investigation to find the cause and cure of the mystery killer. Research on the disease conducted at Northwestern was halted by the war, Dr. Ivy said.

Zebra Busting

ZEBRA FANCIER PUTS HIS BABY THRU ITS PACES

Victor Kleinert Jr., always wanted a zebra. He had horses in his riding stables at 6135 N. Lincoln av., and a rollcall of four dogs, two cats, two parrots and a monkey in his house, but he still wanted to try his hand at training a zebra.

So last October his wife, Ruth, and Dr. M. Webb, a dentist who keeps two horses at the Kleinert stables, bought one for him. They purchased Zombie, an 18 months old baby, from Brookfield Zoo, where he was born, for $500, and hauled the animal home, crated, in a big horse truck last Oct. 28, the day before Kleinert's 28th birthday.

His Baby From There On.

In the stable yard, they wished Vic a happy birthday and said something to the effect that Zombie was his baby from there on. Vic has a photograph of Zombie's little crate which indicates what his wife and Dr. Webb probably meant "by baby." Vic was surprised, but not confounded. He put Zombie in the barn, and ever since he's been taking him out for little training lessons, sometimes to the consternation of motorists driving by on Highway 41 who wonder if they're seeing what they're seeing, and sometimes stop to see for sure.

Zombie wears a halter now, and Vic can lead him, but it's probably just as well that Vic has plenty of persuasive strength on the halter rope. Vic has done a bit of bareback riding on Zombie, but the animal is still too young for much of that, he says. However, Kleinert has had a saddle on his trainee. Zombie is 12 hands high, but should grow to 14 or 15, the owner believes.

Uses Forceful Persuasion.

Zombie will kneel and lie down on forceful persuasion, but not on command. One horse in the stable will work with the zebra, but all of the others prick up their ears in alarm at the approach of the animal. The pet goat then wanders around the place and takes Zombie philosophically, just as he does the turkeys, ducks, chickens, and guinea hens around the lot.

Robert Bean, assistant director of Brookfield Zoo, says zebras are very high strung animals, and while it is not practical to break them for riding or driving, it has been done for novelty.

Vic ruefully admits, however, that one lesson in manners that Zombie will have to learn is not to bite. Zombie, his owner says, also will have to get over kicking, jumping straight up in the air and walking thru fences—all of which he did yesterday.

WAR FUND WORKERS BEGIN FINAL EFFORT TO GET $12,980,000

Community and War fund workers in the Chicago area yesterday began a last minute sprint to attain their goal in a drive which opened Oct. 2. Since the start of the campaign, workers in Chicago have raised a total of $12,570,891, or 97 per cent of their quota of $12,980,000.

Clarence B. Randall, general chairman of the fund, urged Chicagoans who have missed solicitors to mail their contributions by check or money order to the headquarters of the Community and War fund, 111 W. Washington st., Chicago 2.

"It is our responsibility to raise every penny of this goal," said Randall, "Thousands of persons at home and abroad depend upon us and we must not fail them. Particularly, we must not fail the fighting men whom we aid thru War Prisoners aid, U. S. O., U. S. O. camp shows, United Seamens' service, and American Field service."

COL. RHEA WINS MEDAL FOR HIS BRAVERY IN WAR

Lt. Col. Robert Lee Rhea, commander of an armored infantry unit, recently was awarded the silver cross medal in Heltrak, Holland, for gallantry in action, his wife, Mrs. Margaret Rhea, 2009 Howe st., learned yesterday. The citation lauded Col. Rhea "for the bravery he displayed when he established his headquarters at the front where his men were greatly outnumbered, and under heavy enemy artillery fire, directed the skillful withdrawal of his troops with few casualties." Prior to the war, Col. Rhea was a metallurgical specifications inspector for the United States Steel corporation. He has a daughter, Vivian Margaret, 2 years old.

$500,000 THIEF LOOKS BACK ON MISSPENT LIFE

His Memories: Jail; His Craving: Drugs.

Fred O'Rourke.

A quarter century crime career that has grossed half a million dollars from a specialized line of thievery was in temporary eclipse yesterday after the arrest of Fred O'Rourke, 53, of 27 N. Aberdeen st. He was seized by Detectives John Kustusch and Wilbur Parker as he emerged from the B. & O. railway station with two stolen express packages.

O'Rourke, whose prison record dates to 1920, told police he decided upon a career of crime in 1918 when he was getting a little old for his calling as a circus acrobat. He had observed, he said, that the pickpockets and grifters who followed the big show had a pretty easy life.

Then one day he saw a railway express truck on the street and before the week was out he was working for an express company, learning all he could. He learned plenty.

Begins to Pose as Clerk.

When O'Rourke eventually was caught with his hand in the till, he was fired, but he escaped prison because of his honest face. He now started the operations for which he had prepared himself.

Coatless, with sleeves rolled up, and with a pencil behind his ear, O'Rourke would appear in a busy express office, preferably at a railway terminal. His practiced eyes would spot the packages most likely to be valuable. He would confirm his judgment by examining the insurance notation on each parcel. His movements were brisk—as a clerk's should be—but they were assured. He aroused no suspicions.

O'Rourke would make notations on a pad, pick up the packages, and carry them away—into the night. His early success amazed him. But he was getting into the grip of the thing that was to be his undoing—dope. One night in 1920 he bungled a job in Georgia and went to the state prison for two years.

Prisons, Jails, Workhouses.

He came out supposedly cured of the habit, but when the money began rolling in again he became an addict again. In 1923 he messed up what should have been a smooth deal involving an interstate shipment and he went to the federal penitentiary at Atlanta. And so it continued, with major sentences in 1926, '30, '32, '34, and '43. In between there were scores of jail and workhouse terms.

Records he has kept fairly consistently—first in writing, then committed to memory—put his own receipts at half a million dollars in a little more than 25 years. Since this estimate was based on prices paid by fences, the loot actually was worth well over a million.

Gets 100 Packages in Year.

O'Rourke's trouble this time was that he stayed too long in Chicago and repeatedly raided the North Western, the B. & O., and La Salle st. express stations. In a year he has taken 100 packages, he told police. The two that caused his arrest were valued at $200.

Police said O'Rourke may have stayed here because narcotics are more easily obtained in a large city. And O'Rourke said—without pride or remorse—that he is a "mainliner"; he takes an oversized injection into a principal vein. Asked about his half million take, he replied:

"Where did it go? Right into my left arm!"

BOY'S DROWNING RULED ACCIDENTAL.

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury yesterday in the death of Gordon Kuzel, 14, of 1119 S. Sacramento blvd., who Friday was drowned in four feet of water in the Douglas park lagoon.

Gymnasium Teacher Cleared

Warrant Denied

A warrant for the arrest of Roger Rasmussen, 24, of 4313 N. Laramie av., gymnasium teacher who was accused by two parents of forcing their 13 year old sons to do 100 "squats" as a penalty for scuffling in school, was denied yesterday by Judge John R. McSweeney in Racine Avenue court.

Steve O'Kelley, father of William, 3840 Wilton av., a pupil in Le Moyne elementary school, 851 Waveland av., had requested a warrant for Rasmussen's arrest on the ground that on Monday Rasmussen had forced William and Robert Clements, 13, of 4019 Kenmore av., to do the 100 "squats" during a gymnasium period at the school.

In ruling that there was not sufficient ground to issue a warrant, Judge McSweeney said investigators had found that O'Kelley had made complaints at another school his daughter had attended.

Warrant Out in Kidnaping of Girl, 14, by Stepfather

A warrant for the arrest of Harold Anderson, 1675 Sunnyside av., who spirited his stepdaughter, Margaret Smith, 14, from the Juvenile home Wednesday, was issued yesterday by Judge Jay Schiller in Boys' court.

THE REPUBLICANS IN ILLINOIS.

The Republican party took a licking in Illinois in the last election. The fact that Gov. Green was carried thru by his personal popularity and that about half of the state ticket rode thru with him cannot obscure that fact.

There is some extenuation, but not enough, to be found in circumstances beyond the control of the Illinois Republicans. Gov. Dewey was a poor candidate. Just how poor he was can be judged by the statement made today in the Voice of the People by Frank J. Durham, vice chairman of the Business Men's committee, which undertook to secure the election of Republicans in five of the nine congressional districts wholly within Cook county. All five of these candidates were defeated, but, as Mr. Durham notes, the congressional candidates ran well ahead of the head of the ticket.

This is particularly significant because in the last election, as in all elections, the vote for President exceeded that cast for candidates lower down on the ballot. In Cook county there were some 64,000 more votes cast for President by both parties than the two parties cast for congress. Nevertheless, the Republican congressional candidates received a total of 926,615 votes, as against 919,207 for Gov. Dewey. They got 43.5 per cent of the vote and he only 41.8 per cent.

Gov. Dewey's campaign program was also fatal to the two nationalist candidates, Mr. Lyons and Congressman Day. He embraced the Roosevelt foreign policy, and party allegiance made it necessary for them, out of deference to the head of the ticket, to soft pedal their own nationalist views. In consequence, they had virtually no policy at all to lay before the voters and suffered even worse than Gov. Dewey.

These were circumstances beyond the control of Illinois Republicans. But they are not the only circumstances that contributed to the Republican defeat.

Republican campaign strategy in Illinois has, in recent years, consisted of conceding Cook county to the Kelly machine and seeking, successfully at times, to pile up a sufficient Republican majority downstate to elect state candidates. This year that strategy backfired. It not only contributed to the defeat of Mr. Lyons and Congressman Day, but it was almost solely responsible for the defeat of State Sen. Benson, one of the most attractive candidates on the Republican ticket.

The Republican organization in Cook county is no good. The state will not be safely Republican until there is a housecleaning and a revived organization is put to work to carry the county. There are too many members of the Cook county Republican organization, including a great many Republican job holders, who are content to sit back and let voters of Republican sentiments go to the polls without urging or organization, and then claim credit for results to which they have contributed virtually nothing.

HOW TO HOLD MEN IN THE WAR PLANTS.

President Eric Johnston of the United States Chamber of Commerce has protested most vigorously, and on the soundest ground, against efforts of the army and navy to stifle planning for post-war production. In this situation Mr. Roosevelt's cherished self-appellation of commander in chief really applies. Unless we have turned control of the national economy completely over to the military, the direction of production for war devolves upon the executive department as a whole and not merely upon its and the country's employes in uniform.

Mr. Roosevelt promised the nation 60 million post-war jobs and he is now permitting his agents to attempt to force a course of conduct on industry which will mean as few post-war jobs as possible. Mr. Johnston says army and navy officers have made informal efforts in recent weeks to prevent manufacturers from discussing their reconversion problems publicly. The army and navy excuse is that such discussions cause war plant workers to leave their tasks in an effort to find jobs that promise permanence after the fighting stops.

Mr. Johnston retorts that the best way to keep war plant employes on the job is to enable their employers to assure them that there will be other work for them when the manufacture of munitions ceases. His logic applies generally as well as specifically. Admittedly there are many war plants that will have to shut down. Aviation and shipbuilding are vastly overexpanded beyond peace time needs. Explosives and shell loading plants can hardly be reconverted. But if employes in these industries are assured that there will be plenty of jobs in other industries, they are not going to be so anxious to get to the head of the line in peace time plants. It is the fear that there will not be enough jobs to go around that is causing defections of war workers. The way to still their apprehensions is not to stifle talk of reconversion, but to promote it.

Mr. Johnston's complaint is given point by a concurrent announcement from the Monsanto Chemical company. It would like to spend about 50 million dollars on plants to manufacture many new products after the war. Instead of giving jobs to 5,500 people as it did before the war, Monsanto hopes to provide employment for twice as many.

But because it is forbidden by selective service rules to employ any of its research men liable to military service on nonwar planning it cannot do the pilot work necessary before it risks its capital in these new plants. Portions of its expansion program, under present conditions, will not get under way until five years after the war. Five years after the war isn't the time when the need for jobs will be greatest.

As we have stated on several occasions before, and as Mr. Johnston also asserts, the men and materials necessary to make the pilot models without which industry dares not undertake volume production of new products would form an inconsequential drain upon current man power and raw material resources. By the efforts of a few hundreds of men and the use of a few tons of raw material in these experimental activities, the nation will be making jobs for tens of thousands of men and markets for trainloads and shiploads of raw materials when the bottom drops out of war production.

Of the three principal allies in this war, the United States alone is discouraging post-war plans of industry. The governments of Great Britain and Russia are stimulating and not stifling them. The whole purpose of the new British-American lend-lease agreement, just announced, is to enable the British to reconvert their industries to civilian production on what their representative, John Maynard Keynes, considers an "equitable basis" with reconversion in this country.

The action of the army and navy in attempting to block American post-war planning and research for post-war conversion cannot be separated from Mr. Roosevelt's campaign promise of jobs. His followers are threatening that if industry does not provide the jobs the government must take over and provide them itself. The current actions of the administration are clear evidence of its wish to prevent industry from functioning after the war and thereby to provide an excuse for socialization.

That isn't the solution the American people want or will tolerate, and it isn't a solution that members of congress will tolerate. It will be the solution forced on the country unless congress uses its investigating and legislative power to make the executive department stop hamstringing industry.

IS THE REPUBLIC COMATOSE?

Her experiences in New Deal Washington and in a New Deal congress have not served to stifle Rep. Jessie Sumner's convictions or to deprive her of her courage, no matter how much she may feel that, for the moment, at least, good sense and good faith count little in the political scale of values. Back in Washington, where she was returned with the largest majority given her in three elections by her constituents in the 18th Illinois district, she is, as usual, found speaking her mind.

Discussing Mr. Roosevelt's abandonment of Poland, she said that with the Atlantic Charter now, "a last year's bird's nest, apparently never intended for anything but temporary shelter," the only hope for Poland and other small peoples lies in "the tried and proven principles of national security propounded by Washington and Jefferson and often referred to contemptuously as 'isolationism.'

"It may help to let it be known that these principles are not so dead as the propaganda insists," she continued. "They still live. They may rise again, tho at present, unfortunately for mankind, they are suppressed in what might be called our comatose republic.

"We know that the proposed international 'peace' organization is designed for the purpose of committing America to fight in every war hereafter. Even without such an organization we shall probably be in every war because England usually is in every war, and since 1914 America has acquired the habit of guaranteeing the British empire.

"The American people have been given no opportunity to demonstrate that they believe these self-evident truths. In the last two Presidential elections they were skilfully deprived of any chance to vote away the New Deal's pernicious foreign policy.

"It was hard for people to believe that a Republican victory in 1944 might relieve our country of the hated New Deal foreign policy, since the Republican Presidential candidate himself repeatedly and vehemently denied it."

With an electorate so willing to be hoodwinked, it is no wonder that Miss Sumner occasionally has thought it almost hopeless to bring real issues into the open. At one time she said that she felt that the United States these days was merely going thru the motions of having a republic. But the motions of republican government would be less perceptible than they are and the nation still more comatose than it is if true there were not men and women willing to constitute themselves an articulate opposition. Her male colleagues on the Republican side of the house frequently could profit by emulating Miss Sumner in this respect.

NATURAL TALENTS.

Robert Cromie's story from the German border about the ingenuity of a 19 year old hospital aidman, who saved the life of a soldier choking to death by operating, on the battle field, with a jackknife, illustrates one of the few virtues of war. That is that a great many young Americans have been forced, thru exposure to the unremitting stress of battle conditions, to discover themselves and their aptitudes and capacities at a much more accelerated rate than they ever would in normal peace time life.

The aidman, Duane Kinman, of College Place, Wis., may not have known that he had an innate talent for surgery, but he knows it now. The G. I. bill of rights passed by congress will enable him after the war to obtain a medical education. Many of our young fighting men might have been expected to spend years groping if war had not placed a premium upon quick thinking and crowded them to early maturity. In battle there frequently is no second chance. If a man does not respond instantly and correctly to the necessities of a situation, it may mean death for him or his comrades. Under the circumstances he learns, as did young Kinman, to act and to act rightly.

Select the answers which you consider best. The last problem counts five points. Then look for the correct answers below.

1. A bookkeeper would usually be most interested in a Typewriter Comptometer Mimeograph Linotype
2. The approximate length of the United States one dollar bill is 3 in. 4 in. 5 in. 6 in.
3. Which one of these creatures is called a rodent? Rabbit Elephant Horse Snake
4. A collar is generally associated with which one of these? Sheep Cow Horse Hog
5. Of the two sisters who were close friends of Jesus, which one was the overly conscientious housekeeper? Esther Martha Hannah Dorcas
6. Different races and religious groups have used different names for the abode of the dead. Try to match the terms in the right hand column below, which stand for heaven or paradise, with the proper racial or religious group to which each belongs. You deserve one point for each correct judgment.

[a] Buddhists	[v] Nirvana
[b] Hebrews	[w] Happy hunting grounds
[c] Indians	[x] Elysium
[d] Greeks	[y] Valhalla
[e] Norse	[z] Sheol

Score yourself as follows: 0-2, poor; 3-6, average; 7-8, superior; 9-10, very superior. [Note—The last question counts five points.]

STEPHEN DECATUR

[Following is the address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK.

American playwrights and novelists may well be charged with lack of patriotism. With a history as exciting and far more honorable than that of any other country, with historical characters, picturesque as well as heroic, to portray, our literati, instead of honoring them, have preferred to belittle and misrepresent our institutions and our people.

A bright star in this literary darkness was the late Cyrus Townsend Brady, from whose life of Stephen Decatur most of the following material has been drawn.

Decatur, like most of us, was of mixed descent—Dutch, French, Irish, and English blood flowed in his veins. His father, for whom he was named, bore an important, if not decisive, part in the Revolutionary war. The son was born in 1779 and given an education far beyond the ordinary of that time. So it was that he did not enter the navy until he was 18 years old.

President John Adams made the appointment at the request of Commodore John Barry, sometimes called the father of the American navy. The following year Decatur distinguished himself by going overboard to save a drowning man, and fought the first of the many duels in which he was to become involved. The same year he became fourth lieutenant to Capt. James Barron, who was to kill him in a duel 21 years later.

It was in 1804 that he performed the act which made him immortal.

The frigate Philadelphia had been captured by the Tripolitans. He was the first of several officers to volunteer to board and burn the Philadelphia in the harbor of Tripoli.

Taking all of his own crew and reënforced by several other officers, he sailed for Tripoli in company with the sloop Siren. Storms caused great suffering to the crew, crowded into the little boat with insufficient provisions, but Decatur was not to be denied. As soon as the weather permitted he sailed into the harbor, passed a number of Tripolitan gunboats, and thru an interpreter asked permission to tie up to the Philadelphia's cable—a not unusual procedure—which was granted.

This placed his vessel below the Philadelphia's guns, which, as the event was to show, were all loaded.

With the advantage of surprise, Decatur's 70 men boarded the Philadelphia and killed or drove overboard or into the hold more than five times their own number. They remained on board until the fire they had kindled was clearly beyond control and then rowed their little craft out of the harbor under the aimed fire of the castle's and of the gunboats' guns.

For this great accomplishment Commodore Preble recommended his promotion to the rank of captain at the age of 25.

In his new rank Decatur commanded a squadron of gunboats in August of that year and frequently attacked and captured Tripolitan corsairs in that harbor.

During one of these battles occurred the famous incident when Decatur, wounded and helpless on the deck, was attacked by a Tripolitan swordsman, and a sailor, Reuben James, injured so that he could not use his arms, interposed his own head to receive the blow.

These battles were conclusive of the war. The sultan of Tripoli sued for peace and surrendered all of his American prisoners and agreed not to molest American ships again.

An interesting and generally forgotten element of the Tripolitan war was that the kingdom of the two Sicilies, better known as the kingdom of Naples, joined a small contingent of gunboats to Preble's fleet.

In 1810 Decatur assumed command of the frigate United States, which he had launched 13 years before. When the United States navy built the frigates Constitution, United States, and President, it built them somewhat larger than the prevailing custom. They were classified as 44 gun ships, and their largest cannon were 24 pounders. The standard frigates of the day were rated as 38 gun ships, their largest guns being 18 pounders.

When the British frigate Macedonian was built in 1810 she was built to the old specifications, which then were considered perfect. It so happened that the ship sailed to Philadelphia and that her captain and Decatur had many discussions on naval questions. Capt. Carden insisted that he had the better and stronger ship.

When the War of 1812 broke out Decatur put to sea in the United States as one of a squadron under command of Commodore Rogers. Becoming separated from the other ships, he sailed for the coast of Europe and in due time came in sight of a British frigate.

Decatur attempted unsuccessfully to get to windward. The other ship was faster. Assuming that he had the better trained gun crews, and he did have the better equipped guns, which were fired with locks instead of matches, Carden—for he it was—opened the battle at long range. With instant chagrin, he found that the United States fired her larger cannon even more rapidly than the Macedonian could fire her lighter 18 pounders, and more accurately.

Before Carden could break off the action, which was plainly going against him, his masts began to fall. Decatur, having his foe now at his mercy, hauled off to check his own damage, and then, returning, compelled his full surrender. The American theory had been vindicated.

After Decatur returned to New London with his prize, the great British navy effected such a blockade of the coast that American ships found it difficult to leave their harbors. It was not until 1815 that Decatur, now in the frigate President, taking advantage of an offshore storm, put to sea at Sandy Hook. The President struck the bar, was injured, and lost valuable time. The President encountered the British frigate Endymion, which, being a faster sailer than the President in her damaged condition, was able to take a position from which she could fire on the President, while the President, heading for New York to avoid the British fleet, now in sight, could not reply.

Perceiving that he would be knocked to pieces if he continued his course, Decatur turned and closed with the Endymion, specially designed as a 44 to meet the American 44s.

The ensuing battle left the Endymion silenced but the President was badly damaged and was quickly surrounded by the British squadron, whereupon Decatur, himself badly wounded in two places, surrendered.

Because he had treated the officers and crew of the Macedonian with great magnanimity Decatur was paroled. Shortly afterward peace was declared.

According to naval custom Decatur was tried for having lost his ship. The trial board absolved him from blame.

During the war the Mediterranean pirates had resumed their attacks on American merchant ships. Decatur therefore was sent with a squadron to bring them to submission. He obtained the submission of the dey of Algiers in June, that of the bey of Tunis in July, and of the bashaw of Tripoli in August.

We now come to his tragic end. In 1807 Capt. Barron had taken the frigate Chesapeake to sea unprepared for action, had been fired upon and boarded by the British ship Leopard, which then took off several of its crew as alleged British citizens.

Decatur had been one of the officers who decreed a punishment of five years' suspension for Barron. Barron had been absent thruout the War of 1812 and, returning, asked reassignment to duty. Decatur, as one of the navy commissioners, denied the request. Barron thereupon challenged Decatur to a duel.

Decatur felt impelled to accept and was mortally wounded. In addition to his reputation for gallantry and naval skill, Decatur is remembered for his famous toast:

"To my country—may she ever be right, but, right or wrong, my country."

ARE GENIUSES NEUROTICS?

MUST one be a hypochondriac in order to qualify for great things in life? Comparatively few of our distinguished scientists can be classified as neurasthenics. By and large they have been normal individuals, with about the average percentage of routine illnesses.

Glancing over the careers of a score or more of men of eminence, however, one encounters a number of peculiarities, to say the least.

Abraham Lincoln was subject to intervals of depression which can be accounted for wholly by the fact that he sensed his responsibilities so keenly. His moments of jocularity offset the "cares which bowed him down."

A favorite character with many of us—Sherlock Holmes—in describing his shortcomings, remarked to his prospective roommate, Dr. Watson: "I get in the dumps every now and then and don't open my mouth for days on end." Evidently Conan Doyle assumed that to thus portray his hero was to lift him above the level of the commonplace.

Charles Darwin finished the formidable task of writing the "Origin of Species" despite wandering pains and many sorts of discomforts from which he was never free. Commenting to his friends he always referred to "my accursed stomach." He was about as full of physical woes as it was possible for a human being to be and still survive.

It would require more than a column to enumerate his symptoms. A sense of fullness would alternate with fatigue and emptiness. He was fearful that he had heart disease. He could not talk long with a friend, otherwise he would become completely exhausted and perhaps be obliged to remain secluded all the next day. Letter after letter recorded details of his habitual suffering.

According to the reports of his physicians, no organic lesions were ever discovered. He certainly did not have peptic ulcer. Neither was his pumping organ weak. Abstemious in his habits, he probably was not afflicted with an infected gall bladder. Nevertheless he was forever "doctoring" and he punished his system with one concoction after another. During a period in which cold bathing came into vogue he rigged up an apparatus and doused himself with icy water. Naturally he grumbled because the procedure left him shivering, bordering on collapse.

Furthermore, he thought that his doctors did him no good. Some starved him while others fed him. Still others insisted that he exercise violently. On one occasion he followed the latter prescription and was forced to go to bed for a week.

Did Darwin suffer from a neurosis? Certainly we can say that he spent too much of his time analyzing every minute twinge as well as every sign which he interpreted as abnormal. He was no different from a great many people who study themselves too acutely. They fail to understand that the human body possesses a goodly amount of resilience and that it can compensate for minor aches.

He must have been highly emotional because he was forever experiencing tremors, nausea, and palpitation. His one great cross was his inability to indulge his passion for hunting. He enjoyed it, but thought it must be wrong because it afforded him so much relaxation. The attempt to reason himself out of a healthful outdoor sport brought on an internal conflict. In addition, he worried over the effect of his "miseries" upon his wife and family. This only made matters worse.

Darwin died at the age of 73. He accomplished far more than most men of his era but he would have been happier had he been able to master his apprehensions.

WAR CASUALTIES.

R. S. V. P. writes: Many of our service men, who have been wounded or disfigured overseas, are now being treated at hospitals back in this country. I know of several who have refused to communicate with their families because they are ashamed of their appearance. These boys do not realize that, while such a bad break will make the parents sad, their love is so great that nothing is worse than the uncertainty of hearing nothing. They would so much rather share the burdens of their sons than to live in the void created by "no news." Cannot the military doctors either get their patients to write home or themselves make a report to the parents?

REPLY.

Your point is well taken. Perhaps the army and navy hospital staffs can be persuaded to include this procedure as part of the treatment program. So much can be accomplished under the rehabilitation plan that many physical defects will pass unnoticed.

ROSES VINDICATED.

Mrs. A. writes: Can rose sachet affect a person suffering from rose fever?

REPLY.

Rose fever is a misnomer. There really is no such thing. The term applies to a spring type of hay fever, for which pollen from grasses and trees is responsible. No danger from your cosmetic unless it contains some other irritant to which you are sensitive, such as orris root.

WET LUNG.

G. M. writes: What is meant by "wet pneumonia?"

REPLY.

Lung consolidation accompanied by an unusual amount of fluid.

ALL ABOUT BREAKFAST.

White Pigeon, Mich., Nov. 22.—Do you rise in the morning with an empty stomach and a refrigerator full of food and don't know what to do? Instead of maybe rushing to the kitchen and laying out the fruit, cereal, and toast, and putting the coffee on the stove, first consult U. S. Department of Agriculture bulletin, A. W. I.-107, entitled, "Eat a Good Breakfast to Start a Good Day." It will tell you what you need to get it. Pondering the bulletin may make you late at the shop or office, but the wisdom you have acquired will offset any lost time for the boss.

Agricultural department bulletin A. W. I.-107, put out by the office of war information, is elegantly printed on calendered paper in blue ink. The department highbrows evidently planned it as a substitute for the morning newspaper, for nobody has time to read both. You get up hungry and wondering, too, what the latest war news may be, but instead you should be worrying over what food calories you need, and which one of the government menus you ought to follow. You sit down with the bulletin and read these words of wisdom:

"Summer or winter, there's something hot, as a rule, in a good breakfast—a hot beverage, or hot cereal, for example. Something hot is cheering and tunes up the whole digestive route.

"There's always food for energy in a good breakfast. An active worker or a growing child can have a heartier breakfast by eating both cereal and bread.

"Eggs, liver and other lean meats, fish, and dried beans and peas provide high grade proteins for body building and repair, and they have mineral and other values, besides. [By the way, have you tried to buy fish or calves' liver lately for breakfast?]

"Halve oranges or prepare other fruit [maybe you never thought of this one]. Cover with waxed paper and leave in a cold place for late comers.

"Pour out glasses of milk, or a pitcherful, to use on cereal [you might be tempted to spread milk with your knife]. Cover and put into refrigerator or other cold, dark place until wanted." [Maybe you were going to store it on the lawn.]

"If you know how much of a food the family will eat, set out just enough. Then they will have fewer leftovers to set away." [Eleanor couldn't have said anything wiser.]

"Take a tip from New England and have Saturday night's baked beans for Sunday morning.

"Enjoy old-fashioned shortcake for breakfast. Split biscuit and spread with butter or margarine. Use berries or other sweetened fruit as a filling and top. Serve with generous portions of whole milk or with cream." [If this dish makes you late getting to the office, tell the boss and he will excuse your tardiness.]

And so on for eight pages.

The government warns constantly against a shortage of paper and man power for printing. You can't buy more than two rolls of toilet paper at a time in most stores, you have to carry greasy food packages because of the shortage of paper bags, and publishers can't get paper to print the books we want to read. But here are such fool bulletins as this scattered broadcast over the nation, giving information that anybody with common sense already knows and nobody is going to take time to read. That's the kind of waste we have voted in for another four years.

A PRODUCT OF FREE ENTERPRISE.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Yesterday I purchased a package of razor blades at a cost of 10 cents. Each blade is wrapped in what looks like onion paper and outside is a stronger paper neatly printed with the name of the blade and information as to how the blades are made in the U. S. A. The blades—five of them—are contained in a secure, neatly printed box. Altogether it looks to me like excellent value. The only comment I care to make it that this value is obtainable in America under what is known as free enterprise. O, yes, the blades give a smooth shave.

TAX ON INHERITANCE.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—What state or federal tax does a man have to pay on a farm that has been appraised at $15,600? He has inherited it from his mother. 2. If he should sell the property for $20,000, what federal tax, if any, would he have to pay? A. P.

1. There is no state or federal tax where the value is less than $20,000 and the inheritance is from mother to son.

2. If he sells for an increase on the value as of his mother's death, then that increase would be income and taxable as such.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CHOOSING ELECTORS BY DISTRICTS.

Alliance, O., Nov. 22.—I read with interest your editorial in SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE on Rep. Lea's electoral plan.

After each Presidential election there is considerable discussion about change or abolishing the electoral college—but like Mark Twain's comments on the weather "there is nothing done about it."

The electoral college as it now operates is the reason that one party or the other, Democrat and Republican, since the Civil war, without a single exception, has nominated a man from the New York City area for either President or Vice President, and many times both parties selected a New Yorker for their respective tickets. This year it was the sole argument for the nomination of Gov. Dewey, in the hope of getting New York's 47 electoral votes.

Both parties in the years past had far abler men living in the smaller states than the man nominated, who were never considered because they represented states with a small electoral vote. I agree with you that the Presidential electoral system deserves further study.

The elimination of the electoral college and the substitution of a direct vote would be unwise. The objective desired can be obtained by a very simple method, at the same time preserving all the safeguards intended by the fathers—i. e.:

Elect the Presidential electors exactly as we do United States senators and congressmen. Each party in the several states now nominates two state at large electors and one from each congressional district, but in the election the state as a whole votes on the choice of the entire lot. Change the rule so that voters of each state can elect only the two electors at large and each congressional district shall vote for one elector.

A trend begun with this year's election, lowering the voting age limit, could become serious, should the safeguards of our electoral system be completely abolished.

Georgia has lowered the age limit from 21 to 18. If 18 year olds are permitted to vote, what could stop some state from later reducing the age to 18 month olds. Under the electoral system the general results would not be materially changed, even if some state or region would vote the cats and dogs, along with the infants. CARL L. CUE.

PUNKIN PIE, NEW MEXICO STYLE.

St. Joseph, Mich., Nov. 22.—I have just read your editorial in today's TRIBUNE under the caption, "Too Much Punkin." It is very evident that what you know about "punkin pie" isn't much.

I've eaten pumpkin pie in Lordsburg, N. M., many, many times, and believe me, those Lordsburg pastry cooks know how to make it and make it good. They prefer "cow punkin" for pumpkin pies. Should you want squash pie, they'll agree with you that it is best when made from Hubbard squash, but it tastes no more like pumpkin pie than a Hubbard squash looks like a pumpkin.

You suggest "sugar" or "pie pumpkin." Again you muff the ball. People in Lordsburg want "pumpkin pie" and it is best when made from "cow punkins" or commonly called "field pumpkin."

You may well caution the "war brides" however, upon the method of preparing the pumpkin. It cannot be prepared in 15 minutes. The pumpkin must be nicely cubed and put on to boil and must be boiled for not less than 10 hours. As the pumpkin in the pot boils down, more may be added and should be boiled until the amount is about 10 per cent of the quantity started with. This pumpkin will then be a lovely brown and sweet enough to spread on bread and be eaten like butter. It doesn't take any more sweetening than a pie pumpkin takes. When well prepared by the addition of about three eggs and a teacup of cream, per pie, O! boy, you've got a punkin pie like you've never eaten before.

I hope none of those Lordsburg women see your editorial, else they'll wonder what kind of pie eaters live in Chicago. T. W. DONNELLY.

NEW FAMINE.

Chicago, Nov. 23. — Forced by the cigaret famine to smoke a pipe [an evil-smelling one, at that, as my best friends and total strangers tell me], it looks like the writer will be now forced to take up chewing tobacco as the next step in the regimentation of the tobacco addicts of the United States, for matches are hard to get.

In each one of four stores where the writer asked for matches today the saleslady [title is honorary] at the cigar counter, in the manner of a housewife berating her pup for spoiling the new rug, exclaimed in her impeccable war time English "we ain't got none."

Can any readers tell me which is better—fine cut or plug? W. R. C.

THE BUSINESS MEN'S COMMITTEE.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—On behalf of the fine group of men who comprise our committee, I wish to tell you how much we appreciated the support which THE TRIBUNE gave us in our campaign to elect the five congressmen from the Chicago area.

Our more than a year's work resulted in our drawing a complete goose egg for our efforts. If there is any satisfaction to be gained from our fight, it is that we, in July, 1943, realized the necessity of trying to preserve our way of life by electing a Republican house of representatives. We beat the PAC-CIO committee to the gun by six months. They, of course, did a much better job and were completely successful.

We are looking forward to the 1946 elections. The very fact that was brought out by George Tagge, that the congressional candidates from the five districts led the ticket, is proof of the fine work which THE TRIBUNE did in supporting our efforts. We recruited many workers because of your help. Our work had the support of Chicago's best citizens, who gave liberally of both their time and their money.

CANADA'S FEARS OF ANNEXATION.

Park Ridge, Ill., Nov. 27.—The editorial, "Overseas Service for Canada's Conscripts," contains some serious distortions, particularly about the Canadian election of 1911.

To say that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was overthrown in that election because he was too British would get a laugh from any Canadian old enough to remember that far back. The main issue of that campaign was the proposed reciprocity treaty, mutual tariff concessions between Canada and the U. S. A. There was considerable sentiment in favor of it thruout Canada until Champ Clark in a public address announced that reciprocity was the first step toward annexation of Canada.

From then on the fight against reciprocity and Laurier became a holy war. Big business was able to ignore such sordid things as protective tariff and wave the Union Jack. Even those who were lukewarm about the empire were aroused by Clark's stupid speech.

Opposing Sir Wilfrid were the arch imperialists led by Sir Robert Borden and the extreme French-Canadian nationalists led by Henri Bourassa. Fifteen years later, Bourassa declared that British connection was desirable as an obstacle to the absorption of Canada by the United States. So don't try to oversimplify Canadian politics.

SOME ISOLATIONISTS NOW ABSENT.

Benton, Ill., Nov. 27.—I still contend that isolationism was not a real issue of the recent campaign. I predict that it will be an issue four years from now and wait until we hear what the boys who are back from the war, have to say about isolationism. A candidate who isn't an isolationist won't have a chance on being elected to any office. Personally, I was an isolationist before Pearl Harbor and am proud to say that I am still one. S. M. WARD.

J. R. P. asks: "Are there any billets open in the navy for men up to 50 years of age who are thoroly experienced in the procurement, distribution, and storage of all kinds of material and supplies?"

The navy needs and will commission quite a number of men between 28 and 49 years of age as storage and warehouse facility officers. A college education is desirable, plus at least three years' experience in a responsible supervisory capacity in the handling of large quantities of stocks. This experience must include analyzing materials, handling problems and the actual application or use of the fork truck pallet system. Experience in the use of fork trucks, pallet, tractors, trailers, conveyors, cranes, and other supply-handling equipment is also required. If you want to know more about the matter, talk with Lt. Petrie, room 30, Board of Trade, Chicago.

D. K. C. asks: "Can a man hospitalized in a navy hospital who is to be discharged to a veterans' hospital, request to be sent to the one nearest his home?"

Such assignment is automatic if the hospital has facilities for treatment of the Yank's ailment, and if there is room available.

Marshall Field & Company

The Store of the Christmas Spirit

Christmas is little children's laughter everywhere—

It's the shouts of children Christmas morn—tree lights blazing, laughter ringing, Christmas shining in the eyes of babes. It's walking down our main aisle into the heart of Christmas—it's the joy-spilling sight of Allied children beneath their trees, turning the lights on again. It's the hope that next Christmas every child will set the tapers gleaming, streaming through unshuttered windows to the world.

Be sure to see our main aisle display "Christmas Lights Go On Again All Over the World." See the Christmas trees of our Allies, decorated with the proud symbols of each country. Beneath each tree are laughing little children. Main Aisle—State Street.

RADAR OUTPUT LAG AIMS BLOW AT ARMY'S 'EYE'

Major Plant Here Needs Workers at Once.

BY CHARLES BALLENGER.

One dark, rainy night early in 1942 a group of commandos, the famed black-faced, gum-shoed killers who raided the European mainland periodically before the invasion, were sent to knock out a radio station near Havre, France. After dashing across the channel the fighters slipped into the town, stole the vital parts of the station and blew up the rest.

The next morning the British released a statement describing the station as one devoted not to regular radio communications but to radio detection of raiding British and American planes. That statement gave the public the first hint of the new wonder being used by both the Germans and the allies—radar.

Some of Greatest Stories.

Since then tales of the effectiveness of this miraculous means of detecting the enemy's presence have provided some of the greatest stories of the war. It's infinite possibilities both as an instrument of war and an aid to peace time flying have excited the imagination of every one. Understandably the allied high command has released almost no details about radar for fear the enemy might get valuable information. However, several top military leaders have called the instrument the most potent weapon of this war.

With uncanny accuracy a radar set is able to locate a plane far beyond human sight. Properly used, it then can aim defensive guns and bring down the plane. Lately it has been used to locate for bombing planes targets that are completely obscured by clouds.

One of Major Plants.

One of the major plants in the country producing radio and radar equipment is the Hallicrafter company, 2611 Indiana av. Because of a labor shortage, the company is facing a serious lag in production schedules.

George T. Snider, personnel manager for the company's seven plants, said the following classes of workers are needed at once: Radio laboratory technicians, draftsmen, testers, radio repairmen, inspectors, wire and solder men and women, office workers, coil winders, analyzers, and experienced radio engineers. Unskilled and skilled help both can be used, he said. If an applicant does not know radio construction, the company will teach him, he said.

Pay Scales Listed.

Unskilled help is started at 64 cents an hour which is raised later under a regular schedule. Skilled help is paid from 85 cents to $1.30 an hour as a base pay rate. The work week averages 52 hours, with regular time and a half for all hours over 40 a week.

Company officials pointed out that an unskilled worker is able to advance thru a regular progression of jobs until he is working at the top paying job in the company. It is light work, well suited to women, they said. There are two working shifts, from 8 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. and 5:30 p. m. to 1:30 a. m.

FRENCH WOMAN WRITER DIES.

LONDON, Dec. 2 [AP].—A French broadcast announced today the accidental death of Mme. Malraux, wife of the French writer, Andre Malraux, and a novelist herself, but did not say when or where it occurred. Malarux, long identified with the FFI, is a soldier in the Vosges mountains.

Church Urges Nuns to Vote in French City Elections

PARIS, Dec. 2.—The importance attached to the municipal elections in February, the first to be held in liberated France, is shown by an appeal issued today in the Catholic diocese of Marseille urging all nuns to go to the polls. This applies to cloistered nuns and represents a change in the church's attitude. The appeal said grave national and religious interests were at stake.

Italian Cheese Retail Price Ceilings to Go Up

Ceiling prices of Italian cheeses [domestic] will be lifted 2 to 6¼ cents a pound at retail, effective Thursday, as a result of similar advances to manufacturers, the office of price administration announced yesterday. It was explained that makers were allowed increases to permit fair and equitable margins of profit.

THOUSANDS QUIT WAR PLANT JOBS ON WEST COAST

Vital Industries Beg for More Workers.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 2 [Special].—A monthly exodus of thousands of vital war workers to peace time jobs thruout the country is causing an acute man power shortage in California's huge shipyards and aircraft plants, despite all efforts to replace them, a survey of west coast labor needs disclosed today.

In the Los Angeles area, where 30,000 workers are urgently needed, more than 10,000 persons are now quitting war jobs each month, state man power officials say. Intensive efforts to hire sufficient replacements have fallen short, despite pleas of WMC officials and extensive advertising campaigns.

More than 68,000 persons are reported to have quit their jobs in the Los Angeles area between Jan. 1 and Oct. 1. Shipyards in the vicinity report a net loss of 6,000 workers in that time.

San Francisco Needs 21,000.

The San Francisco bay area reports an immediate need of more than 21,000 workers to replace the 7,300 lost last month and other thousands who preceded them to the midlands. Man power officials report 38,000 fewer persons employed in San Francisco area industries than last year. Employment in shipbuilding projects alone has declined 43,200 from the 185,000 peak set in June last year.

Altho war plants in the San Diego area are seeking 10,000 workers, the shortage in this area is less acute than around Los Angeles and San Francisco. Intensive educational programs designed to convince war workers that their jobs do not depend upon the outcome of fighting in Europe are credited with reducing the monthly turnover from the year's high of 10.5 per cent to 7.3 per cent for October.

Among individual plants, Consolidated Vultee aircraft of San Diego reports a need of 5,000 additional workers for new production in addition to several hundred to replace the net loss for October.

Other Firms Short.

Ryan Aeronautical company, also of San Diego, is pleading for 3,000 more workers to enable it to fulfill contracts for a new navy fighting plane.

Lockheed Aircraft corporation of Los Angeles reveals a need of 1,600 employes. Company officials said the job termination rate averages 3,000 a month.

While shipyards and aircraft companies continue to clamor for workers, a sharp increase in demands for water front and port workers is reported by Sam Kagel, state man power director.

"The sharp upswing since October in the number of unfilled jobs for water front and port activities emphasizes the growing importance of the west coast area to increased war operations in the Pacific," said Kagel. "It also serves warning that workers able to fill these jobs cannot leave the area without impeding the war effort."

Thousands of workers who came here when the war began have returned to their native states because they feared being stranded and jobless if the war ended suddenly.

Find Missing Child

Nancy Hesler, 5, and Pearl Dalton, nursemaid who admitted taking child from home.

Dayton, O., Dec. 2 (AP).—Nancy Hesler, 5, who vanished last night with her nursemaid, was found today on a street and the maid was arrested soon afterward, Police Capt. Wilbur C. Covert reported.

Nancy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hesler, was not harmed, Covert said.

He added that Pearl Dalton, 18, the nursemaid who was hired Thursday thru a newspaper advertisement, said they spent the night in a hotel.

UAW Files Application for FM Stations in 6 Cities

Application was filed with the federal communications commission in Washington, D. C., yesterday by the United Automobile Workers [CIO] for permission to establish frequency modulation [FM] radio stations in Chicago and five other cities. They are Detroit, Mich., Flint, Mich., Cleveland, O., Los Angeles, Cal., and Newark, N. J. The union originally intended to establish 11 FM stations, but was held to six by FCC regulations.

GRAZED BY SHOT OF BANDIT; WINS TRIBUNE AWARD

Detective Moss on Force Only Three Years.

BY EDWARD SCHREIBER.

Detective John Moss, 31, a city policeman for less than three years, who engaged in his first gun battle on Oct. 3, has received the $100 Chicago Tribune hero award for his bravery in pursuing and capturing an ex-convict Negro bandit, altho a shot fired by the holdup man at close range had grazed Moss' cheek and burnt powder from the gun had temporarily blinded him in one eye.

Detective Moss.

Bandit's Second Visit.

Each month THE TRIBUNE awards a $100 prize to the policeman or fireman who is chosen by the editors for having performed a deed beyond the call of duty. Moss, last month's winner, is following in the footsteps of his father, Police Lt. Stewart Moss of the Fillmore Street station, who has had numerous citations for bravery. His uncle, Fire Commissioner Michael J. Corrigan, has also been cited on numerous occasions for bravery and alertness.

The bandit captured by Moss was Robert Depont, 24, an ex-convict, who was sought for 50 robberies.

Detective Chief Walter G. Storms had assigned several men to stores he believed would be visited again by the robber. Moss was assigned to a haberdashery store at 2526 North av. He was concealed behind a row of coats when the bandit entered. The clerk in the store, Jerome Steibel, shouted as the robber neared the counter:

"Here he is again and he has my wristwatch with him!"

Fires at Detective.

Moss came from behind the coats and the bandit turned to see who the clerk was talking to. Without warning he fired a shot at Moss, who was less than six feet away.

Moss fired a return shot at the bandit, who turned and ran out the door altho he was hit in the shoulder. Moss chased the robber thru alleys and gangways and finally up the stairs of the elevated station at Western av. near North av. Cornered there and weak from loss of blood, the holdup man surrendered to his pursuer and Traffic Policeman John Jennings.

After he had recovered from his wounds, Depont was convicted and sentenced to 15 to 20 years in the penitentiary for armed robbery and one to 14 years for assault with intent to murder.

Moss is married and has four children. He lives at 2606 Mobile av. He has four brothers, all of whom at present are serving in the army or navy.

TRIBUNES FLOWN TO MEXICO CITY; LAND SAME DAY

Members of the American colony in Mexico City yesterday were enthusiastic about the possibilities of long distance newspaper circulation suggested Friday when 100 copies of THE TRIBUNE arrived in Mexico City aboard an air cargo liner 16 hours after the newspapers had been printed in Chicago.

The newspapers were aboard a Braniff Airways liner which took off from Chicago on the inaugural flight of daily air cargo service from Chicago to Mexico City. They had been printed at midnight and placed aboard the plane which left Chicago airport at 1 a. m. Friday.

The plane reached Laredo, Tex., at noon. One copy of THE TRIBUNE was submitted to the Mexican censor across the border at Nuevo Laredo. The cargo then was transferred to a plane of the Compania Mexicana de Aviacion, the Mexican subsidiary of Pan-American Airways. The edition was cleared by the censor while the shipment was flying south.

A large crowd witnessed the unloading of the newspapers when the liner arrived at 4:15 p. m. at the Mexico City airport.

MIDWEST MARINE VETS OF PACIFIC REACH CHICAGO

A slogan decorated special train on the Wabash railroad rolled into Dearborn station yesterday bearing 147 heroes of the 1st marine division, veterans of Guadalcanal, New Britain, and Palau, en route to their homes in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan, and Ohio.

The veterans, laughing and shouting, engulfed their welcomers and then melted into smaller groups and vanished into the city's surge of humans and vehicles. About 50 of the returned heroes are Chicagoans.

The train bore in chalk and paint such slogans as "Jap Hunters De Lux" and "Guadalcanal, New Britain, Palau, Chicago."

DE PAUL INSTALLS REV. C. J. O'MALLEY AS NEW PRESIDENT

The Rev. Comerford J. O'Malley was installed as new president of De Paul university yesterday in a day long ceremony which terminated with an inaugural banquet last night in the Palmer House. He succeeds the Rev. Michael J. O'Connell, who left the university in October to become superior of priests of the Congregation of Missions in Chicago.

At the inaugural banquet, Archbishop Stritch said education based on moral teachings has an opportunity to prevent a recurrence of the plight in which the world now finds itself. Similar sentiments were expressed by Dr. Franklyn Bliss Snyder, president of Northwestern university. Mayor Kelly extended the city's greetings to the new president of De Paul.

The inauguration ceremonies were held in St. Vincent's church on the university campus. Father O'Malley was presented for inauguration by the Rev. John A. Overberg and the Rev. Walter E. Case, trustees of the university.

EPIDEMIC FINDS 2 DOCTORS ILL; 3D FIGHTS ALONE

There used to be three doctors in Galva, Henry county. Then the pressure of war threw extra burdens on their shoulders, and it seemed that all of the 2,812 residents needed a doctor. As a result two became hospital patients themselves, and the third fought alone as an epidemic of measles swept the town.

In a village of 1,000 population near Monmouth, Warren county, one doctor must handle all the sick calls. His office is jammed from morning to night as more than 100 patients a day stream thru with various complaints.

Old Doctors Burdened.

These are examples of the results of the war born shortage of doctors, according to Dr. Harold M. Camp, secretary of the Illinois State Medical society and state chairman of the procurement and assignment board of doctors working with the war man power commission.

"This state now has 4,100 doctors in war service," Dr. Camp said yesterday. "Before the war, the state had 12,562 licensed physicians, of which 1,500 were not in actual practice.

"As a result of the loss of most of our young doctors, the old timers are carrying heavier burdens. Many of them are breaking under the strain, making the shortage more acute. Refugee doctors have moved into some of our critical areas voluntarily and helped us tremendously, but the shortage still remains serious.

Entire Nation Affected.

"With more than 60,000 of the nation's physicians in war service, the shortage of trained medical aid is widespread. Doctors who have retired are getting back in harness to help."

Dr. Irving S. Cutter, THE TRIBUNE's health editor, said the number of small towns without doctors is growing rapidly.

"With older men trying to do the work of two, it is inevitable that we cannot give the people the de luxe medical attention they would like; the doctors remaining in public practice are working to capacity and many are trying to do more than they can handle," he said.

VETERANS OF PRESS RELAX AFTER 5,000 YEARS ON THE JOB

Five thousand man years of newspaper work in Chicago, dating to the days when a runaway horse item was standard news, were represented last night at the annual dinner of the Chicago Press Veterans' association in the La Salle hotel.

Robert J. Casey of the Daily News was the principal speaker, and other war correspondents were special guests. They are Harold Smith and Stanley Johnston of THE TRIBUNE; Carleton Kent of the Times, and David Nichol of the News. Warren Brown of the Sun was toastmaster. The press veterans stood a moment in silence in memory of the 26 American newspaper correspondents killed and the 100 wounded in the war.

Richard J. Finnegan, editor and publisher of the Times, served as chairman and read the necrology, the longest in the history of the association. The 12 members who died during the year were William K. McKay of THE TRIBUNE and New York News, George Ade, Edward F. Younger, William S. Forman, James Corcoran, S. E. Thomason, Caleb Enix, Herbert E. Fleming, Hutchins Hapgood, Frederich Griswold, and Moissaye Boguslawski.

MARINE BAGPIPE BANDS PLAYS AT FEAST OF HAGGIS

Every year about this time for 99 years the Illinois St. Andrew society has celebrated its traditional feast of the haggis, but last night, in the grand ball room of the Stevens hotel, there was something new. The assembled Scotsmen heard the Marine Corps hymn played by the only marine corps bagpipe band from Quantico, Va.

The haggis itself was piped in by the society's own pipe band led by Robert H. Sim. Norman A. Imrie, retired army major, was toastmaster. Speakers included the Rev. Robert B. Whyte, pastor of the Old Stone church, Cleveland, and Maj. Gen. F. H. N. Davidson, deputy commander of the British army staff in Washington.

CICERO MAN LOSES APPENDIX AS TYPHOON TOSSES SHIP ABOUT

Leo J. Pagni.

UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET HDQS., Pearl Harbor, Dec. 2 (AP).—As the battle for the Philippines opened last month, United States warships ran into a typhoon that tossed even battleships about like toys, the navy disclosed today. At the height of the storm, a medical officer aboard a baby carrier, the U. S. S. Natoma Bay, operated on Leo J. Pagni, aviation ordnance man third class, Cicero, Ill., who had been stricken with appendicitis. The surgery completed, Pagni was strapped into his bunk to prevent him from being heaved out on the deck, and by the time the storm abated he was recovering.

Mrs. Rose Pagni, 1426 S. 51st av., Cicero, has received several letters from her husband, Leo, since his operation at sea, but in not one did he mention it, she said yesterday. Mrs. Pagni last saw her husband in June when she took their son, Bruce, 21 months old, to Memphis, Tenn., where Pagni was stationed.

BALLET THEATER TWICE BLESSED ON GOLLNER DAY

Ballerina's Development in Season Marked.

BY CLAUDIA CASSIDY.

It was Nana Gollner day at Ballet theater, altho Tamara Toumanova made one of her brilliant visitations at the evening performance, dancing the Black Swan divertissement from the third act of "Swan Lake," with John Kriza as her cavalier. But Miss Gollner, who has been waiting her ballerina turn, danced the Swan Queen from the contemporary version of Tschaikowsky's ballet last night, and the princess in "Princess Aurora" yesterday afternoon. Both these roles had been danced earlier in the Civic Opera house engagement by Toumanova and the comparison between the beautiful dark Russian and the ditto Texan proved just one thing: that Ballet theater is twice blessed.

The chief difference is personality, which colors both technique and style. Where Toumanova has a dagger thrust almost fierce in its stabbing clarity, Gollner has a gracious limpidity of line, a persuasive and pervasive fluidity of movement — the one is etched in flame, the other dreamily sketched in pastel.

Steel Under Velvet Control.

Yet Gollner's style is just as clear, and her dancing of the pas de deux in "Aurora" proved even before her "Swan Lake" [and in addition to her "Sylphides"] that her development since last season has been close to sensational. Then a touch of hardness had crept into her performance. Now she understands the steel under velvet control that makes the greatest dancing look the simplest.

I don't know why they are omitting the rose adagio from Dolin's version of "Aurora" this year, as it is one of the better excuses for eliminating several other dances from the beguiling ballet. But there was some excellent dancing, notably John Kriza's Bluebird, Alicia Alonso's variation, Tommy Rall's ease and unstudied elegance in the pas de trois, and the rough and tumble vitality of the Three Ivans, danced by Orloff, Herbertt, and Fernando Alonso.

Variation Has More Style.

Rosella Hightower is a brilliant dancer, extraordinarily quick, but her variation had more style than she has yet been able to bring to the Bluebird. That lovely dance is more effective, too, in the old way with the stage cleared. Too many onlookers blur its sparkle.

"Barn Dance," which some of us missed last week because it conflicted with the Chicago Symphony concert, had its only repetition yesterday, and I for one could have kept right on missing it. Is Ballet theater so bankrupt of ideas it must buy devitalized junk from other troupes? "Barn Dance" was fair with the Littlefield Ballet because it had no competition. But in Ballet theater, right after the endearing brilliance of "Fancy Free," it was a meaningless romp that wasted a lot of time on both sides of the footlights.

Engagement Ends Tonight.

Ballet Theater ends its engagement tonight, with the only "Pas de Quatre" of the brief season danced this afternoon. Meanwhile, if you have glimpsed Daniel Saidenberg of the Saidenberg Symphonietta at recent performances, he is getting ready to replace Antal Dorati while Mr. Dorati takes a brief vacation.

100 TRUCKS USED IN FIGHTING PAIR OF $75,000 FIRES

Two fires burning at the same time put more than 100 pieces of fire fighting apparatus into motion in Chicago yesterday. The first, at the Willett garage, 750 Tilden st., caused damage estimated at $75,000, destroying or damaging 25 trucks of the Chicago Sun. The other was at the Hysam Products company, 58 E. Cullerton st., manufacturers of soaps and disinfectants, where damage was estimated at $75,000.

The Willett garage fire started when an acetylene torch ignited gasoline which had been spilled on the floor. Ralph Nakasuji, a Japanese-American welder, said the floor suddenly blazed up about him and that a sheet of flame spread swiftly beneath near-by trucks. Nakasuji and five other workers fled to safety.

Chief Fire Marshal Anthony J. Mullaney directed firemen and mechanics in saving 15 loaded newspaper truck which had not been touched by the flames.

Fires an hour Apart.

Operator D. L. Sullivan at the fire alarm office, said the first Willett alarm was phoned in at 10:54 a. m. At 11:05 a. m. a 5-11 alarm was sounded, calling out 34 pieces of apparatus, including 24 pumpers, five trucks, and other equipment. At 11:59 a. m., while the garage still was burning, the first alarm was sounded for the Hysan fire.

As demands from the two fire scenes drained the surrounding areas of equipment, pumpers and trucks were moved in from outlying sectors to protect them. Well over 100 pumpers, trucks, ladder wagons, squads, and high pressure trucks were on the move during the three hour period before duty was completed, he added.

Motor Spark Starts Blaze.

The flames that swept the 4 story brick building housing the Hysan company originated in the second floor waxing room when a spark from an overheated motor ignited inflammables, according to Harry Brownstein, general manager. His secretary, Miss Rita Shanoff, phoned in the alarm, then quickly notified department heads on all floors. They shepherded 60 employes, half of them girls, to safety.

Two explosions occurred after the fire started, but no one was injured. Smoke was rolling from the building and flames were bursting from lower windows as the first firemen arrived.

Fire Commissioner Corrigan set part of his forces to protect the 2d Presbyterian church, 1936 S. Michigan av., and the State Ignition Service, 52 E. Cullerton, both of which were threatened. Neither was damaged.

MANY SHAKEN UP AS ENGINE RAMS COACH ON B. & O.

The rear coach of the Baltimore & Ohio's Columbia Limited was jolted yesterday when it was rammed by the engine of a westbound express train five miles east of Gary.

Hundreds of passengers on the train, stalled when the rear wheels of the last coach had derailed, were shaken up. Six ambulances were sent out from Gary, but none of the passengers was forced to leave the train.

GREEN NAMED KAPPA SIGMA'S 'MAN OF YEAR'

Gov. Green, named "the man of the year" by Kappa Sigma fraternity, will be honored by it at a dinner in the University club Thursday.

The governor was chosen because of "peerless leadership and outstanding achievement as governor during the great World war of one of our greatest commonwealths and because of his outstanding achievements in years of public service," said Estes Snedecor of Portland, Ore., worthy grand master of the fraternity.

The 50th anniversary of the founding of the Chicago alumni chapter of Kappa Sigma will be observed at the dinner. Norman H. Parker, alumni chapter president, will participate in the program.

HUNDREDS PUSH THRU TESTS FOR SAFETY STICKERS

Chicago automobiles were streaming thru safety testing lanes by the hundreds yesterday after a one day campaign in which police issued summonses to 116 motorists whose cars bore no safety stickers. Edward J. Gorman, acting public vehicle license commissioner, estimated more than 3,000 machines were tested. The lanes, open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., are at 701 N. Sacramento av., 31st st. and the Outer dr., 68th st. and St. Louis av., 1747 E. 95th st., and 5140 Lawrence av. The lane at Wilson av. and the Outer dr. is open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

REPORTS LOSING $1,400.

Frank James, 1350 N. Wolcott av., told police yesterday he lost $1,400, including a $1,000 bill, near Damen av. and Division st.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Notre Dame, Ind., Dec. 2.—Notre Dame beat Great Lakes today for the first time in two wars—and made a rather decisive job of it, as clearly indicated by the score, Notre Dame, 28; Great Lakes, 7; if not by the statistics.

Jim Youel, one of the busiest men on the field, tho he played with the losers, went over from the 1 foot line on the first play of the second quarter and Jim Mello kicked the extra point. Great Lakes had outplayed Notre Dame in the first quarter but instead of making the Bluejackets hungry for more scores, their 7 to 0 lead touched off the Irish spark. Bob Kelly with his 13th touchdown of the season, and Steve Nemeth with a placekick, tied the score 10 minutes after the Sailor touchdown.

This first Irish touchdown was made on a pass, Frank Dancewicz to Kelly, good for 15 yards.

Irish Score on a Fumble.

The 7 to 7 tie prevailed at the half and for almost 12 minutes of the third period. Then, with three minutes and 10 seconds remaining in the third quarter, Notre Dame made what proved to be the winning touchdown on a fumble. This winning touchdown was negotiated thus:

Dancewicz kicked out of bounds on the Great Lakes 6 yard line. On the first play Eddie Saenz took the ball and when he was tackled by Left Guard John Mastrangelo, Saenz fumbled. The ball rolled into the end zone, where Doug Waybright, Irish right end, fell on it for the payoff touchdown. Nemeth kicked the point, the eighth straight of the series of 10 with which he wound up the season.

Dancewicz Engineers 2 Touchdowns.

The Irish fattened up on the two unneeded touchdowns in the fourth period; the first on a pass, Dancewicz to Bob Skoglund, which took care of the last 4 yards in a brilliant 46 yard advance that featured slick forward passing by Dancewicz and nice catching and dashing by Skoglund and Kelly. The second touchdown of the final period, the last of the season for Notre Dame, was negotiated by Dancewicz from the 1 yard line after Kelly had run 23 yards before being pushed out of bounds on the 2 yard line. Bob took one stab for his potential 14th touchdown and a point total of 90 for the season, but was stopped on the 1 yard line. Dancewicz sneaked over from there.

The statistics are not so revealing as the score, insofar as what the 38,000 witnesses beheld after braving ice and snow to reach the scene. Each team made 11 first downs and virtually were tied on net yards from rushing and passing. The losers made 151 net yards from rushing to 148 for Notre Dame. Notre Dame had a slight edge in passing yardage, 72 to 62.

Dancewicz Completes 8; Youell, 5.

Dancewicz attempted 19 passes and completed eight and Youel tossed 20, only 5 of which con-

TILDEN BEATS WEBER FOR CITY TITLE, 13 TO 7

65,000 Watch Chicago Prep Season Final

BY DAVID CONDON.

Tilden Tech of the City league, scoring in the first and third periods, defeated Weber High, Catholic league champion, 13 to 7, before 65,000 in Soldiers' field yesterday to give the City league its first Kelly bowl football triumph since 1940.

The victory was the first for Tilden in three bowl appearances, and the Weber defeat was the first a Catholic league representative had suffered in Kelly bowl competition since Fenger defeated Leo, 18 to 0, four years ago.

For Weber, it was a disappointing conclusion for a rags to riches campaign in which the Red Horde, playing under a young coach, George La Cognata, who was in his first season of competition, amazed Chicago prep circles by winning its first Catholic league championship.

Tho losing and badly battered by superior Tilden power, Weber valiantly attempted a story book finish that was halted on the Tilden 35 yard line as the game ended.

Tilden Scores First.

Tilden, veteran of Kelly bowl appearances in 1941 and 1942, entered the game as the City league co-champion because of a tie with Austin in the league semi-finals. The Blue Devils gained an early advantage by scoring in the first nine minutes of the game, when Mike Swistowicz, full back, cut thru tackle to score from the 1 yard line. Bob Jaderholm, a guard who was sidelined because of an injury, came in to make the extra point from placement and Tilden led, 7 to 0, at the end of the first quarter.

On the second play of the second quarter, Milt Mayer, Weber quarter back, ran Ed Kriwiel's punt back to the Weber 10 yard line to start a drive that carried 90 yards down the field and ended in a Weber score.

Weber Scores on Pass.

After Mayer was downed on the 10, Herman Miskowicz and Stan Wojcik unleashed a series of plays that carried 28 yards. Five more plays thru the line and a 5 yard penalty on Tilden carried the ball to the Blue Devils' 33 yard line, where Tilden called time out. After three plays, Weber still was 2 yards short of a first down but Miskowicz, electing to run on fourth down, dashed 8 yards to the Tilden 17. Three plays later, Ronnie Chernick took Wojcik's pass on the 1 yard line and crossed for the touchdown. Bob Zavala, a reserve half back, came in to drop kick the extra point, which tied the score, 7 to 7.

Chernick kicked off for Weber to open the second half, and after Weber twice had held the Blue Devil attack for downs inside the 5 yard line, Bill Gay returned Wojcik's punt to the Weber 29 yard line, and the second Tilden scoring drive started. Three plays moved the ball to the 15 yard line and, after Swistowicz gained a yard, Kriwiel dropped back and threw a long pass to Gay, who caught the ball over his head in the end zone for the winning touchdown. Jaderholm missed the kick and Tilden led, 13 to 7.

Final Gun Halts Weber Drive.

In the fourth quarter, Tilden drove to the Weber 15 before yielding the ball on downs. An exchange of quick kicks gave Weber the ball on the Tilden 20 and Stan Koza, an end, taking the ball on a triple reverse, carried to the 42. Here Tilden held and Miskowicz punted out on the Tilden 43.

Tilden drove to the Weber 45 before Kriwiel punted. His kick rolled dead on the 5 yard line and with two minutes remaining, Weber launched a drive that carried 60 yards, concluding with a first down as the game ended.

In this series Chernick passed to Bob Simandl for 6 yards, and then for 10, with Simandl running to the Weber 46. Wojcik gained 7 yards, and then Mayer took Chernick's short pass on the Tilden 46. Chernick dropped back and passed to Stan Koza, who fell on the 35. The gun sounded ending the game as Weber attempted to call time out.

Six Prep Bands Play.

The game was played under good weather conditions as bright sunshine warmed the field after several days of inclement weather. The majority of the spectators were high school students altho many service men and women attended the game as guests of Mayor Kelly. Before the game began, six high school bands were on the field for the playing of the national anthem, as an R. O. T. C. unit raised the flag. At half time, the Tilden and

TODAY'S GAMES.

Boston at Detroit.
Brooklyn at Philadelphia.
Bears vs. Card-Pitt in Pittsburgh.
Washington at New York.

BY EDWARD PRELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 2.—A savage battle between the Giants and Redskins, reminiscent of 1943, with the Philadelphia Eagles as an added disturbing factor, opens tomorrow afternoon in Polo Ground. A crowd of 55,000, possibly more, will be witnesses to as stirring a climax as the National Football league's eastern section ever has experienced.

It won't be over tomorrow, either, because one of the two—Giants or Redskins—will be certain of only a week's tenure at the top in the east.

It's a Tight Fit.

They will slam into each other a week from tomorrow in Washington. If the same team wins in both these contests it will be the 1944 eastern winner, even if the Eagles score today against the victoryless Brooklyn Tigers and a week from today against the Cleveland Rams. Both of these games will be played in Philadelphia. If the Giants and Redskins split their series, the Eagles can take the prized spot by winning their two remaining games.

If ties are involved in any of these remaining battles, almost any number of situations can be conjured up, the most disturbing being the one which could delay the league title playoff game against the Green Bay Packers until New Year's eve. Last year's championship game was played in Chicago's Wrigley field the day after Christmas.

Experts Vote for Redskins.

The Redskins came into town today determined to turn things in their favor, and were pleasantly surprised to learn that New York football experts are giving them only a slight chance to win out over the Giants. If the Redskins are eliminated it will be the first time since 1939 that neither they nor the Bears were involved in the title playoff. In '39, the Packers defeated the Giants for the championship, 27 to 0. In 1940 the Bears beat the Redskins, 73 to 0; in 1941 the Bears downed the Giants, 37 to 9; in 1942, the Redskins upset the Bears, 14 to 6, and last year the Bears walloped the Redskins, 41 to 21.

Last year, the Giants beat the Redskins on successive Sundays, 14 to 10 and 31 to 7 to force a playoff in the east. This the Redskins won, 28 to 0, in the Polo grounds. Before that game, the Giants' followers

Grimm, Dykes Visit Chicago; Reveal Plans

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

As far as Charley Grimm, who yesterday resumed business at his Wrigley field desk, can see at the moment he is going to treat his Cub pitching staff and catchers to an extra week or so free board and lodging at the French Lick Springs [Ind.] camp next spring.

In return for these extra days of $8.50 per diem per man comforts, the Cub manager expects the mound experts to do enough training to get themselves in passable trim for presentation at batting practice when the main squad arrives.

And from the other side of town James Dykes, the Sox boss fresh from California, announced he was taking a hand in the little matter of locating a spot in which his seventh placers can train.

Reporting Date Uncertain.

Just what dates Grimm will use when he sends out his spring orders he hasn't definitely decided, but he'd like to give the regulars, or main squad, about a month in which to get rid of winter pains. As the season opens April 17 this would mean about a March 10 reporting date for the battery candidates with the others showing up a week later. That will be ample time if Herr Charley can capture the favor of the weather man who last spring contributed everything including a flood.

Grimm, accompanied by Vice President Jim Gallagher and Secretary Bob Lewis, will set out tomorrow night for the Buffalo minor league convention and the major meetings at New York, but he's not at all optimistic over the prospects for a helpful trade. Mr. Dykes feels the same way about dealing, altho he's willing to listen to reason. He'll also head east tomorrow night, accompanied by Vice President Harry Grabiner and Secretary Frank McMahon.

Dykes on Lookout for Camp.

Dykes will pay a personal visit to Terra Haute tomorrow to determine what the spot has to offer in the shape of training facilities, but after two springs at French Lick where everything was handy for a fellow who didn't care to walk more than half a block, he may be a bit too critical. The Sox want to locate in that section so as to be within reach of exhibitions with the others training thereabout. However, that doesn't include the Cubs, who, after two springs of poaching by Dykes on their training field, promise to call out the gendarmes if the little round man even sets foot within the village limits.

Casey Stengel, who took over the Brewers when Charley Grimm moved to the Cubs early last season and who resigned his Milwaukee job this fall, was another baseball visitor yesterday.

MARQUETTE FIVE WINS, 83 TO 28, OVER TEACHERS

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. [Special].—The Marquette university basketball team defeated Milwaukee State Teachers' college in the Marquette gym tonight, 83 to 28.

Marquette set a terrific pace in the first half, leading by a score of 32 to 15. Gene Berce and Bill Chandler Jr. were tied with 14 points apiece for the Hilltoppers' scoring honors.

PVT. WILMAN IS SHARPSHOOTER IN ALL-STAR BOWLING TOURNEY

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Pvt. Joe Wilman of Fort Lewis, Wash., yesterday made the opening bombardment in the fourth annual All-Star bowling tournament in the Auditorium service men's center a real G. I. homecoming with a smart 1,250 total for the first round lead in the big show sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., and the Bowling Proprietors' Association of America. Rolling on the third squad of the day, the 39 year old Chicagoan hung up a score that withstood volley after volley of strikes by the nation's leading ten-pin marksmen.

The Wilman 1,250 still was standing up as the final squad in the field of 120 preliminary bowlers went to the line near midnight last night. Nearest approach to Joe's splendid total was that of another Chicagoan, Al Walter, 30 year old time study engineer from the Windy City league's Bee Vacs, who posted a 1,243, four pins better than the 1,239 turned in by volatile Andy Veripapa of Hempstead, N. Y.

Crimmins Scores 1,225.

John Crimmins, hero of the 1942 challenge match against Ned Day, came in with a neat 1,225, to beat out one of his squad rivals, Marvin Ashley of Los Angeles, Cal.

Only other men to top average or better in the six game opening chore were Joe Sinke of Chicago, who rolled 1,213, and Fred Bujack, the tall, blonde member of Detroit's now famed E. & B. team, who last year distinguished himself as a substitute in the all-star finals. Fred delivered a 1,201. Russ Creamer, the red headed star of the Chicago Classic league's Congress Arcade quintet, followed with 1,195, one pin better than the total submitted by Johnny Small, the Chicagoan who rolls for the Monarchs in the Classic league.

The same program of six games, 10 twelve-man squads over 12 alleys will be followed today, tomorrow, and Tuesday, thereby completing the preliminary schedule of 24 games on a total pin basis. Squads will begin bowling at 9 a. m. Each of these three days. The matinee sessions will end at 6 p. m. with an hour's intermission following before the night program gets under way.

Semi-Finals Open Wednesday.

The high 48 men for the first 24 games then will enter semi-final competition on Wednesday, rolling a total of 12 games, six in the afternoon and six in the evening. The 11 top performers for the total pin stretch of 36 games will qualify for the match play phase of the tournament, a round robin based on the Petersen point system.

These 11, beginning Thursday and continuing thru Sunday's finish, will join with the five bowlers who were seeded into this year's finals off their performances in the 1943 event. This quintet consists of Paul Krumske of Chicago, who took the title away from Ned Day, last year's winner, in a special challenge match a week ago; Day himself; Rudy Pugel, youthful Milwaukeean; Buddy Bomar of Chicago, and Connie Schwoegler of Madison, Wis., 1942 titleholder.

Use Point System in Scoring.

The Petersen point system will be used thruout the finals. This pattern awards a bowler one point for each 50 pins knocked down and one point for each game won within each four game match. An additional point will be credited to the bowler who might win the lesser number of games, but still outscores his opponent in total pins over the four game route. In the event of a tie game, each bowler will be given

Jim Ferrier Takes Lead in Western Golf

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 2 (AP).—Sgt. Jim Ferrier of the United States army took the lead at the half way mark today in the 72 hole San Francisco Open golf tournament. He knocked in putts from 4 to 25 feet for a sensational six under par 66, the finest round of the tournament. It gave him a 36 hole total of 141.

The blazing round equaled the competitive course record for Harding Park set in 1940 by the San Francisco amateur, Ed Castagnetto.

Sgt. Ferrier's feat permitted him to snatch the lead from Mark Fry, Oakland, Cal., pro, who set the first round page with a 69. Fry, adding a 73 today, rested in second position with 142.

The 50 low scoring pros, including ties, and 20 low amateurs, qualified for the final two rounds to be played tomorrow and Monday. Scores of 155 and lower qualified those in the professional field. Amateurs with 162 or below remained in.

ARKANSAS ROUTS AGGIES TO CLOSE SEASON, 41 TO 0

Fayetteville, Ark., Dec. 2 (AP).—Closing their 1944 football campaign in a blaze of glory, the University of Arkansas Razorbacks punched over four touchdowns in the fourth quarter to blast the Arkansas Aggies, 41 to 0, for the unofficial state collegiate championship.

Arkansas already had scored twice in the second quarter for a 14 to 0 lead at the half.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 2. — The young men from the United States Military academy wrote finis to the most brilliant page in the last quarter of a century of Army football history this afternoon as they soundly trounced Navy, 23 to 7, for a ninth consecutive victory in an undefeated season. The Cadets, who never were behind, led, 7 to 0, at the intermission, added a safety by blocking a punt in the third period before Navy scored its only touchdown, and then finished with two scoring assaults in the closing quarter.

A capacity crowd of 66,658, including the army corps from West Point and the regiment of midshipmen from nearby Annapolis, saw the 45th game in a series begun in 1890, which today, in Baltimore's Municipal stadium, was resumed with pre-war panoply after a two year hiatus. These thousands also saw Army end Navy's domination after five consecutive triumphs and in that achievement also saw one of the best elevens of all time. Certainly Army today earned the National collegiate title.

Bond Sales Total $58,637,000.

Civilians, who obtained their tickets thru routine channels, were asked to contribute to the sixth war loan and at game time it was announced that $58,637,000 in bonds had been sold.

For the rival elevens this contest was no different from that of last year, when they met at West Point and Army lost its 19th game to the midshipmen. Today's victory was Army's 23d and there have been three ties. But for the thousands gathered in Baltimore's stadium, the spectacle once again offered the pageantry of a game which has no counterpart in intercollegiate sport.

From the time that Army's cadets, in their blue-gray uniforms, marched precisely into the bowl at 1 o'clock and were followed 20 minutes later by more than 3,000 midshipmen in 20 companies, until these same young men assembled in serried ranks to leave the field, the afternoon was one never to be forgotten. And for the nation's millions of young men, in all sections of our global warfare who defend the American way of living, the pageantry and the game were broadcast. No other event ever has been so completely reported.

Cadets Heavily Backed.

By virtue of its point a minute attack—481 in eight games—Army entered today's engagement a prohibitive choice. Navy banked on the defensive record of its line with hope that it might surprise a too optimistic opponent. But the course of the battle followed anticipated channels.

Army's line was adequate defensively and it was too well trained in the intricacies of the T formation for Navy to present an impregnable barrier. Navy's line was superb, particularly until superior man power wore down its resistance by attrition. But Navy's attack, save for a third period drive in which five first downs were linked to-

LOWLY HAWKS IN FOR MORE WOE: THE CANADIENS

Montreal Bids for No. 7 Over Chicagoans.

Just Too Bad

CHICAGO.		MONTREAL.
Karakas	G.	Durnan
Seibert	L.D.	Lamoureaux
Thoms	R.D.	Bouchard
Smith	C.	Lach
Mosienko	R.W.	Richard
Horeck	L.W.	Blake

Those Montreal Canadiens, who defeated the Blackhawks four straight times in the Stanley Cup finals last spring and have increased the streak to six in a row in the two meetings thus far this season, will attempt to make it No. 7 tonight when they meet Paul Thompson's cellar dwellers in the Stadium. The opening face-off is scheduled for 8:30 p. m.

Altho the champions have lost two of their last three league starts, one to the lowly New York Rangers on the home ice, the 'Hawks aren't too optimistic over their chances of a victory. The Canadiens haven't dropped two consecutive games for the last two seasons and haven't lost to the Chicagoans since Dec. 6, 1942, something like 22 games ago.

Have Outscored Hawks.

Montreal's famous front line trio of Joe Blake, Elmer Lach, and Maurice Richard has accounted for 28 goals against 25 for the Hawks' Pete Horeck-Clint Smith-Bill Mosienko combination, the difference being due largely to the Canadiens having played in two more games. Richard is the league's leading scorer with 13 and Blake and Mosienko each have collected 11 goals.

Much perturbed by Thursday's debacle when the Hawks took a 7 to 2 whipping from Boston, Manager Thompson has held several conferences with the various defense and offense combinations and Goalie Mike Karakas in an effort to get an answer to the question, "What's wrong with the Hawks?"

Still Seeking Answers.

Thompson hasn't yet discovered why such players, who have proved their worth in big league competition, such as Mike Karakas, Joe Cooper, Earl Seibert, Clint Smith, Bill Mosienko, Cully Dahlstrom, and Mush March haven't been able to produce this season.

Last year Seibert was selected on the league's all-star team for the 10th time; Smith established a league record for assists with 49 and also won the Byng trophy for sportsmanship; and Mosienko had a total of 70 points, 32 as a result of goals.

Horeck was the leading scorer in the American league last season with 32 goals and Karakas, Dahlstrom, and March had their best seasons in several years.

PVT. WILMAN IS SHARPSHOOTER IN TENPIN MEET

a half of a point, or the equivalent of 25 pins.

The tournament carries a purse of $7,000, headed by first money of $2,000 and a runnerup prize of $1,000. In addition to the championship proper, two special prizes of $200 and $100 will be awarded to the two men who lead the field thru the five day, total pin chore of 36 games. Last year, the $200 prize went to George Young of Baldwin, N. Y., who finished with a preliminary and semi-final total of 7,464, against 7,443 for Krumske.

Chest of Medals Stolen.

The most fitting development of the day was the performance of Pvt. Wilman, long one of Chicago's outstanding tenpin artists before he entered the army. The likable Joseph, who will be 39 years old come Dec. 20, captained the Chicago Budweiser team which won the last prewar A. B. C. team championship in Columbus, O., two years ago with a 3,131 total.

Joe's chest of medals, recently pilfered from a Rockford bowling establishment by some nefarious character, included the A. B. C. all-events award, captured with a 2,028 in Cleveland in 1939. And he still is the official all-events champion of Illinois.

The remarkable feature of Joe's work was the revelation that during his stay in Fort Lewis he did not use his own bowling ball or shoes. Still, working with a house ball chosen at random and wearing rented boots, he averaged 215 over one eight-game match, and holds high game of 277 and high series of 745 for bowlers at Fort Lewis.

Holds to 200 Beam.

Yesterday Joe got away with an ordinary 167, then followed that with his high game, a 238. From there on, he didn't swerve from the 200 beam, finishing out with four games of 209, 201, 211, and a fine 224.

One of the highlights of yesterday's crowded program was the appearance of Mayor Kelly with a number of the soldiers Gen Eisenhower has sent back from the European battlefront as special emissaries in a mission to ask civilians to step up the supply of ammunition for our overseas forces.

North Central Defeats Concordia Quintet, 36-28

The North Central college basketball squad began its season with a 36 to 28 victory over a more experienced Concordia team in Naperville tonight. Ed Zager was high scorer for North Central with 13 points. The Cardinals held the River Forest team scoreless for the first 10 minutes.

SPOTTING THE PINS

BY ROBERT BEACH.

FOR the second time within a short span, Chicago has lost one of its leading bowling personalities. Al Sindelar died shortly before the current season opened; Friday little Steve Owens finally became the victim of the auto crash in which he was injured a few years ago.

Steve was one of the most affable and congenial and gentlemanly characters ever to grace the Chicago tenpin scene. More than that, many of his fine attributes have found their way into the game he loved so well. They are indelible impressions that are there to stay. They reflect Steve's personality like a mirror and they compose a tribute to the honest, capable judgment which made him a dominant factor in our bowling picture for so long.

As president of the Illinois Bowling association he established an enviable record of accomplishment and in the councils of the executive committee of the American Bowling congress he was a strong and admirable force. As an official of the famed Randolph league he contributed wisely and lastingly to that league's welfare and advancement.

C. B. A. Will Select Successor to Al Sindelar Today.

CHATTER—Today's the day they elect the new secretary of the Chicago Bowling association. There are many fine candidates available for the position so the delegates can't go far wrong, no matter which way they look. Indorsement of the American Bowling congress may give Milton Raymer, the university and high school instructor and now a radio mechanic in the army air corps, a little edge. . . . It was Eldora Aronson and her 556 which led the girls in the Evergreen Sunday Nite Mixed. . . . Morris Lee, a 180 average bowler with Jack's Spot Inn in the Bowlium's Commercial league, turned in a 707 series, highest at that establishment this season in league play. . . . The Fewer Boilers and the Cook's Restaurant fives are tied for the lead in the Pla-Mor Ladies. . . . Jim Kowitz of the Jack's Barber team in the Cicero Businessmen's league, turned in a nice 713 series on games of 201, 249, and 263. . . . Florence Geary with 235-608 topped the Evergreen Ladies Major. Helen Harmon's 570 was second. . . . Verne Anderson and Joe Devore, formerly of the Classic league, will engage in a five game match this afternoon at Monte Carlo, 2263 Lincoln av., with a little matter of $500 the stake.

Keeleys, Edelweiss Tie for Lead in Samuelson's Major.

Keeleys and Edelweiss are tied for the lead in Samuelson's Major with 23-16 records. Mobilgas is one game behind and Monarch Encores two games in the rear of first place. . . . That match between the men and women of Ward-Mitchells resulted in a 2,471 to 2,302 triumph for the lads. . . . Scotty Elder of the Chicago Tribune Nite Hawk league is doing a swell job in promoting a fund raising campaign for sending crippled kids to a vacation camp next summer. . . . The Gold Crowns now have a two game lead in the N. E. Traveling. The C. & G.'s and Keeleys are closing in fast, however, and Marigold Arcade is only three games off the pace. . . . The 14th annual Illinois K. of C. tourney will open in Congress Recreation Jan. 27. . . . Saturday, Feb. 17, has been named the date for the annual meeting of the Illinois State Women's Bowling association. Their tournament will start three days later. . . . Chuck Collins' 211-601, Matt Crnic's 244-593, and Winks Gorge's 219-592 featured the Herb's Inn-Fechtmeyer Shirts battle in the Greater N. W. Traveling. The Inns and White Pines Golf are in the top spot with 24-12. . . . Herb Pagliero of the Richards Flowers in Rose Bowl's Major got eight in a row and a ten pin tap for a 267 game and a 579 series. The Polly Inn is setting the pace with 26-10. . . . The Dixie Specials are still the team to beat in the C. & I. E. R. R. circuit. At least they're in first place.

T.C.U. Beaten by S.M.U. in Upset, 9 to 6

Dallas Tex., Dec. 2 (AP).—The Southwest conference football race ended on an unusual note here today as Texas Christian's champion Horned Frogs were toppled, 9 to 6, by lowly Southern Methodist.

The Mustangs, fighting for company in the conference cellar, outplayed the Frogs most of the way and beat them with a second period field goal by Pete Kotlarich and an end around touchdown play in the third quarter by brilliant Bobby Folsom.

The Horned Frogs' score came on a 77 yard dash by Randy Rogers in the second period.

A crowd of 8,000 turned out for the final with scouts from Oklahoma A. & M., Texas Christian's Jan. 1 opponent in the Cotton Bowl, in the stands. They saw little, however, as the lifeless Frogs staved off repeatedly Methodist drives in the first half, scoring their touchdown with 38 seconds to go on a lateral pass play.

nected, mostly in the last desperate moments of the game. All his completions were after the score became 21 to 7, and he missed nine before he clicked.

Kelly, who will play his next football for the United States Naval academy a year hence, carried the ball 19 times for 97 yards and Dancewicz, with all his pitching, found time to carry the ball 15 times for 39 yards.

Mello, who played on the losing side of the Great Lakes-Notre Dame a year ago with the Irish, carried 12 times for 55 yards; Chuck Avery negotiated 40 yards on 14 tries, and Saenz made 53 yards on 16 rushes.

Despite the snappy temperature there were only five fumbles in the game, two by Notre Dame, neither of which was recovered by the Sailors, and three by Great Lakes, two of which were recovered by Notre Dame. The one which resulted in the winning touchdown was not due to frozen fingers, so much as the violence of Mastrangelo's aforesaid tackle, which was backed up by a tremendous jolt by George Sullivan. Georgia Tech Routs Georgia Eleven, 44 to 0

Athens, Ga., Dec. 2 (AP).—Georgia Tech's Orange bowl bound Engineers routed a hapless Georgia team, 44 to 0, today by coupling a deadly passing attack with a razzle-dazzle ground offensive. George Mathews, 150 pound half back, scored two touchdowns, threw a pass for another, and caught numerous tosses to add to the rout.

The all-civilian bulldog team could not cope with the heavier navy V-12 Engineers, and it was not until midway of the third period that they reached Georgia Tech territory. The drive carried 47 yards, but was halted at the Tech 19.

Frank Broyles, Tech's All-Southeastern conference full back, had a hand in five of Tech's seven touchdowns, scoring two and passing for three others. It was the first Tech victory in Sanford stadium since

DE KALB BEATS ELMHURST, 47-34, BUT LOSES STAR

De Kalb had little trouble in defeating Elmhurst, 47 to 34, in its opening basketball game of the season last night at De Kalb, but already has lost its star who scored 19 points in the game.

Howard Boudreau, forward who was the leading individual scorer with eight field goals and three free throws, will be in either the army or navy by Dec. 18 when the Teachers meet Loyola in its next encounter. It was, incidentally, the first basketball game for Boudreau who starred at quarter back on the De Kalb eleven.

THOSE ELUSIVE BUNNIES MAY BE HARD TO FIND

BY BOB BECKER.

Sometimes they're plentiful and sometimes they're scarce. That's the way the rabbit population goes in this state and others where the cottontails frequent the weed patches, hedgerows and sloughs. With the rabbit season open now in Illinois and continuing thru January, many hunters are able to make their own observations on the number of cottontails this year.

If rabbit shooters invade sloughs this fall for rabbit shooting and find few of them as compared to the number seen some years ago, they can chalk it up as one of nature's tricks. The scientists who study the habits of these animals tell us that nature has a sort of "planned scarcity" for the rabbit population in that every 10 years we have a high in population.

Then the cottontails go into a slow decline to reach a low point. This low point is followed by increases in population until we have another high. The average length of this cycle in Illinois is around 10 years. Our latest rabbit high in Illinois occurred in 1938-'39, says Ralph Yeatter, the upland game authority of the Illinois natural history survey.

Therefore the cottontails now are well down in their cycle in most parts of the state. But from here on they ought to show an increase to reach another high around 1948 or 1949.

Repeat Annual Warning.

If rabbits didn't suffer from tularemia all of us who like to hunt them out would be much happier. Because they transmit this disease to humans it makes it imperative that certain precautions be taken in cleaning all rabbits for table use. One of the easiest ways to get tularemia is to clean a rabbit with your bare hands.

That is why the suggestion about wearing rubber gloves when you dress a rabbit carcass is repeated every fall. After the animal is thoroly cooked there is little chance for any one eating the meat to get the disease.

Tulane Upset by Louisiana State, 25 to 6

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 2 (AP).—A battle scarred Louisiana State Tiger, whipped in five of eight starts this season, all but passed a favored Tulane Green wave off the field today to score a 25 to 6 victory in the 42d renewal of one of the south's oldest football rivalries.

The Tigers' passing combination of Y. A. Tittle, 183 pound tail back from Marshall, Tex., to Full Back Elwyn Rowan, Memphis, Tenn., was one of the most effective aerial shows seen here in years. Two of Tittle's pitches scored touchdowns, and the Exan's tossing set up another.

L. S. U. Drives 81 Yards.

Louisiana State got off to a 6 to 0 lead in the second quarter, driving 81 yards for the marker with Rowan going over from the one foot line. Tittle completed two passes to Rowan to set up the score.

The Tigers received the second half kick-off and promptly drove 65 yards for their second touchdown of the game. Tittle connected with four passes in the drive, the last a 2 yard strike to End Charley Webb, for the score.

Tulane Scores Touchdown.

Tulane got into the game following the Tigers' second score and went 65 yards for its only touchdown.

32 BOXERS EYE 16 C. Y. O. TITLES IN FINAL BOUTS

Crown 1944 Champions Next Wednesday.

Bouts on W-G-N

THE eight open class championship bouts in the annual Catholic Youth organization amateur boxing tournament will be broadcast over station W-G-N Wednesday night, starting at 10:15, it was announced last night by the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, founder and director of the C. Y. O. Jack Brickhouse and Harry Creighton, W-G-N announcers, will be at the microphone.

Thirty-two aggressive, hard fighting boxers will engage in their semi-final drill in C. Y. O. center gymnasium this afternoon for the 16 open and novice class championship bouts in the 14th Catholic Youth Organization tournament in Asriland auditorium Wednesday night.

They may not be the greatest amateurs to appear in the C. Y. O. finals, but they make up in ambition, determination, and ruggedness what they may lack in skill.

Fourth War Time Tourney.

It is the fourth war time tournament sponsored by the famous organization headed by the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil. Altho many familiar faces will be missing from the scene as a result of the conflict, their absence is serving as an inspiration to Wednesday's survivors.

The military will be represented by Pvt. Vince Pellegrini, open lightweight of Fort Sheridan, and Specialist Gene Field and Seaman Claude Cole, novice heavyweight and bantamweight of Glenview Air station, respectively. Then, too, a number of other finalists are army and navy medical dischargees, including Curtis McDaniel, Jesse James, and Charles Immormino.

McDaniel, open light heavyweight representing St. Anselm, is the only two time champion in the big show, he having captured middleweight honors in 1937 and again in 1941. Curtis, who is 24 years old and a railroad dining car waiter on leave, was a sailor at Bainbridge, Md., until released from service last July.

Immormino Faces Plummer.

James, who is paired with McDaniel, served with the coast artillery for three years before being mustered out, while Immormino, altho only 19, was with the army engineers for eight months before given an honorable discharge. Immormino, standard bearer for Holy Rosary, faces one of the toughest rivals in the meet in Joe Plummer, 1944 Chicago novice Golden Gloves bantamweight title holder.

Outstanding among the eight novice title matches is the one between Jack Corbett and Gene Bruno, light heavyweights of St. Mel High school. Bruno, who is a member of the school football team, is of Italian descent while Jack is of Irish parentage, as his name implies. The rivalry here is intense and has caused some west side fans to forget that two other St. Mel High students also will be fighting for novice championships in the impending show. These are Featherweight John Killeen and Welterweight Homer Manfredi.

Weighs In Wednesday.

All the finalists will report to be weighed and examined Wednesday at 2 p .m. at C. Y. O. center. These festivities will be conducted by Doctors W. Lloyd Kenny, James Wall, Robert Mustell, and Thomas Russell. Clerks will be James Knize, Andy Zaucza, Henry Nichols, Joseph Bucki, Frank De Vito, Bert Coudry, John Giometti, and Peter McAleese.

Officials presiding at Wednesday's finals yesterday were announced by Lou Radzienda, C. Y. O. boxing director. They follow:

Referees—Phil Collins, Joe White, Howard Walsh, Jess O'Brien, Dave Miller, Tommy Gilmore, Norm McGarity, Tommy Thomas, Joe McNamara. Judges—William O'Connell, Romaine A. Geudie, James McManus, Edward Hintz, Livingston Osborne, Rube Metz, Dr. E. Allen Frankel, John Bray, Frank Gilmer, Carl Witt, Dr. G. W. Christoph, Perc Kenny, George Kenny, H. G. Vance. Timers—Joe Lipp, William Finn, Walter Johnson, Charles Siderbotham, James Taylor, Tom Fitzgerald, Joe Galarneau, William Faehse. Announcers—Chet Coyner, Pat Rush.

Tickets, priced at $1.20, $2.40, $3.60, and $10 are on sale at C. Y. O. gymnasium, 31 E. Congress st. Reservations may be made by calling Wabash 1114.

21 DAY LIMIT ON LIDMAN AND HAGG WAIVED

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the National A. A. U., said tonight he had received a cablegram from the International Athletic federation in which the 21 day limit on athletes' visits to other countries was waived in the case of Gunder Hagg and Hakon Lidman.

Hagg and Lidman, Swedish track stars, accepted invitations to compete in the United States during the indoor season last Wednesday, but Ferris replied that he was not interested unless the athletes were permitted to stay the entire campaign—late January to the end of March.

The pair is expected here early nert month for a period of training.

JOLIET ATHLETE LEADS RICE TO 18 TO 7 VICTORY

Houston, Tex., Dec. 2 (AP).—The Rice Owls closed their 1944 season by defeating Southwestern university, 18 to 7, today.

Nine second stringers started for the Owls and they came thru with two touchdowns in the first quarter. The second stringers had more luck against the Pirates than the first team.

J. B. Anderson of Joliet, Ill., scored the first touchdown on a plunge after he had passed to Bill Scruggs on a flat pass with Scruggs running 40 yards to the 4.

TILDEN SMASHES TO TOUCHDOWN IN CITY PREP FINAL

Army Crushes Navy, 23 to 7, and Wins National Crown

gether in a 73 yard advance to Army's goal, was not equal to the power of the Cadets.

Felix [Doc] Blanchard, Army's battering All-America full back; Glenn Davis, fleet sprinter who got the Cadets' third touchdown, and the smooth positive generalship of Doug Kenna and Capt. Tom Lombardo were assets Navy could not match.

Injuries Hurt Middies.

Army always was a threat from any point on the gridiron, as Davis' 50 yard touchdown run eventually proved. Navy was not explosive, which is the character of the T formation, and it was handicapped further by the loss of Bob Jenkins and Don Whitmire thru injury.

Jenkins, sidelined after the Cornell game three weeks ago and sufferer of additional disability in training, lasted three plays in the first quarter. He returned briefly in the final quarter, tossed a pass which was intercepted and was pivotal in Army's move for a touchdown, and then was retired permanently. Whitmire, the outstanding lineman of the game until injured in the second period, saw no further action.

Until Whitmire was hurt, he and Navy's guards, Ben Chase and Jim Carrington, shackled Army's T and with brilliant assistance from Leon Bramlett and John Hansen, midshipman ends, stopped Army with one first down in the opening period.

Statistics Are Misleading.

Army gained only 181 yards by rushing to Navy's 71 despite three touchdowns, altho 10 of Army's 12 first downs were made on the ground. The first Cadet score in the second quarter required only two first downs, altho it covered 65 yards. Navy's nine first downs included three by rushing and, when it got its touchdown, three of the five first downs were by passing, one by penalty.

Navy outgained Army in the air, 98 yards to 81, by completing 9 of its 24 passes, but five Navy passes were intercepted.

The teams opened cautiously, sparring like two heavyweights fully impressed with each other's strength. Each marked up a first down in the first period but Army's misplays were a hindrance to its ambition. A slow turf also handicapped the fleet cadet backs. Army broke loose in the next period and scored when four minutes of the half remained.

March 65 Yards to Score.

From their own 35 yard line, where Hal Hamberg's quick kick was downed by Army's Davis, the Cadets rolled to their first score. Dale Hall plunged for three yards and Blanchard swept Navy's right end for three more. On third down, Hall ripped thru the defensive left tackle for a first down on Army's 46.

Blanchard, a veritable tank, lunged over guard for 9 yards and Davis went wide around end and out of bounds on Navy's 24 yard line. Bill Barron, Navy back, was fooled completedly by the reverse.

On the next play Hall, sprinted thru the vulnerable right guard position and raced down center behind accurate blocking to score. R. G. Walterhouse, Army's place kicking specialist, added the point. It was his 45th in 57 attempts this season and broke the national record established in 1942 by Clyde Leforce of Tulsa. Walterhouse finished with 47 after subsequent touchdowns.

They Didn't Need It.

Army's safety occurred early in the third period. After receiving the kick-off, Navy put the ball in play on its own 34. Two plays lost 9 yards and, after an offside by Navy, Hansen went back to punt. Arch Arnold broke thru and blocked the ball, which bounded back and into the end zone, where Hansen recovered. Thus, Army led, 9 to 0.

Penalties and misplays set Army back after the kick-off and Navy took the ball on Blanchard's punt. From their own 27 the Midshipmen roared to the Cadets' goal. Fifteen plays were required and they were built around Hamberg, who was credited with 11 of them. Hamberg hit thru guard for 8 yards and then raced around end for first down on Navy's 40 yard line. He passed to Hansen for 17 yards and repeated to Barron for 14 yards after plunges by Clyde Scott and Barron had netted 3.

Hal Keeps Marching.

Another pass, Hamberg to Scott, put the ball on Army's 20. Leon Bramlett caught the next pass for a first down on Army's 13. Hal had an incomplete pass but followed with a gain of 9 yards at defensive left end.

Hansen could have scored on the next pass by Hamberg but he was held by Army's John Minor, an infringement of the rules overlooked by the officials. On fourth down, however, and to the satisafction of the crowd, which scarcely had finished expressing its disproval of the previous oversight, Army was penalized for offside. Navy had first down on Army's 1 yard line.

Middies Finally Score.

Scott missed the touchdown by inches on his first plunge but scored on the second. Vic Finos kicked the point and Navy trailed, 9 to 7.

This was the tabulation as the teams went into the last quarter. Four plays after the exchange of goals, Davis set up the opportunity for Army's second touchdown by intercepting Jenkins' pass. Davis was downed on Army's 48 yard line.

Army scored in 9 plays with Blanchard leading off with a 21 yard dash around defensive left end. He and Davis went on to Navy's 21 yard line. Minor got a yard and Blanchard carried on three consecutive plunges thru Navy's tiring line to Navy's 9. The Midshipmen guards, in particular, were unable to stand up to the attack.

Sheer Power Produces.

From the 9 yard line Blanchard now powered over Navy's right guard and went to the end zone before he was tackled. Walterhouse's placement gave Army a commanding 16 to 7 lead.

Navy was impotent now and, after receiving the kick-off, punted on fourth down. Army started again from its 32 yard line, where the kick had left the field of play. Davis and Blanchard accomplished a first down on Army's 48 with benefit of an offside by the Sailors. Minor plunged for 2 yards and, on the next play, Davis took a short lateral at full speed from Lombardo and escaped around Navy's right wing to sprint down the west sideline to the goal. Walterhouse's 47th point of the season completed the final tabulation: Army, 23; Navy, 7.

The Army Mule Has Its Brief Taste of Glory

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 2 (AP).—This was it, the Army against the Navy at last. Long before game time, the stands were filled to the last inch by war time's most gaily bedecked throng.

Everybody was there, it seemed . . . that is, everybody but President Roosevelt. And just before the kick-off, the 66,658 fans thought for a minute that the President was making a belated entrance.

A long black limousine rolled onto the cindered track. Police escorted it. One had a machine gun. The car slowly cruised around the oval and stopped in front of the 50 yard line boxes, where the navy's high ranking officers sat.

Brightly dressed trumpeters took their places beside the car. Then the royal robe was spread at the rear door. Out came the Army's mule, followed by the Navy's goat, and the game was on.

Gold braid and stars dazzled everywhere. Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of air forces, and Lt. Gen. Ben Lear, chief of ground forces, sat on the Army side.

Across the field, in Navy boxes, were Adm. Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations; Adm. William D. Leahy, chief of staff, and Adm. Jonas H. Ingram, commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet. Ingram, eldest of three brothers who starred on Navy teams, was formerly director of athletics and coach at the Naval academy.

More than 1,000 injured overseas men, soldiers, sailors and marines, were in field box seats.

TILDEN DEFEATS WEBER, 13-7, FOR CITY PREP TITLE

St. Philip bands, the latter representing Weber, paraded on the field before Mayor Kelly introduced his guests, who included service men from five major fighting fronts and wounded war veterans from Gardiner and Vaughan General hospitals.

Comdr. Jack Dempsey of the coast guard spoke briefly between halves after previous plans for him to land on the field in a helicopter had been canceled.

WEBER GETS CUPS

Altho Weber lost to Tilden, 13 to 7, in the Kelly bowl game yesterday the Red Horde had the better of it a half time ceremonies. Coach George La Cognata received two trophies for the Weber team. One was presented for outstanding sportsmanship, while the other, donated by the Catholic Order of Foresters, was emblematic of the Catholic league title.

Coach Cruck Harvey of Tilden, coaching his third Kelly bowl team in four years, disproved the theory that Weber, with only 24 men in uniform, had the iron man squad of the day. Harvey had 40 men in suits, but used only four substitutes, one less than Weber. Harvey didn't make a change in his back field.

Friday night, Bob Jaderholm, Tilden guard, said that he had made 19 out of 22 attempted extra points during the season. Yesterday, he made the first one, but the second attempt was blocked, so Jaderholm, by his own figures, ended up with 20 successful kicks out of 24 attempts.

Tilden, even in winning the game, was slightly befuddled on numerous occasions by the offense George La Cognata fixed up. Weber ran plays from the T formation, from the Notre Dame box, and on several occasions, gave a very fair counterpart of the accordion shift Ted Shipkey used to employ at the University of New Mexico. The Red Horde used at least one triple reverse; employed the end around, and frequently came up with a line shift that first switched completely to the right, and then, completely to the left. Both teams utilized quick kicks to good advantage.

Following the game, the Austin High school football team, co-champion of the City league by virtue of a 7 to 7 tie with Tilden in the semi-final play-off, swarmed on the field to congratulate the victors. The scene on the Weber side of the field was not as joyous, as several of the players, besides being disappointed in losing, were let down because their disabled co-captain, Stan Wodka, had asked them to win.

Wodka, who watched the season's games from a wheel chair, was a right guard on the 1943 Weber team until he was stricken with infantile paralysis on Oct. 18, 1943. This year he was elected co-captain and, prior to the Catholic league championship game two weeks ago, shook hands with the Weber players as they took the field to play Fenwick. Wodka told Cookie Wojcik, the other co-captain, "I want the ball." Weber came from behind to win, 25 to 20, and Wodka received the ball. The Weber players had hoped to repeat the gesture yesterday.

Virginia Scores 26 to 7 Victory Over N. Carolina

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 2 (AP).—The University of Virginia's once beaten team ended one of its best seasons today with a 26 to 7 victory over the University of North Carolina. Renewing the south's oldest continuous gridiron rivalry, Virginia's T-formation clicked off large chunks of yardage in the first half to roll up 19 points.

NEWS FROM ARMY AND NAVY POSTS

BY FRANK MASTRO.

Vaughan General Hospital.

A CAPACITY crowd of 1,000 convalescent soldiers attended last Monday's basketball scrimmage between the College All-Stars and De Paul in the gymnasium at this hospital in Hines, Ill. . . . The unofficial score at the end of the regulation period was De Paul, 35; All-Stars, 26. . . . George Mikan, De Paul's lanky center, was individual star of the exhibition, scoring 21 points, more than the combined total made by Bob Kurland, Don Otten, and Bill Henry of the All-Stars. . . . Brig. Gen. Percy J. Carroll, erstwhile football and basketball player at St. Louis university, who is commanding officer here, was a prominent spectator. . . . Andy Frain cooperated by dispatching three of his best ushers — Tates Johnson, Joe Murphy, and Dick Cusmond — to handle the turnout in major fashion. . . . The spectacle was made possible thru the efforts of Ray Meyer, De Paul coach; Arthur [Dutch] Lonborg, in charge of the All-Stars; Capt. Art [Ken] Flanagan, reconditioning officer, and Sgt. Vince Garrity, representing the special services office.

Great Lakes.

THE Great Lakes Bluejackets, who beat Glenview air station in their first basketball game of the season last Thursday, will appear against Illinois in Chicago Stadium Friday night. . . . Lt. Robert Callihan, former member of the Great Lakes quintet, spent part of a leave from duty on a destroyer escort as a spectator at Bluejacket scrimmages. . . . Chief Petty Officer Forrest Anderson, acting coach of the current Great Lakes cage representatives, was Callihan's teammate on the 1941-'42 team.

87th St. Training School.

THE marine detachment at this establishment at 87th st. and Anthony av. will make its next appearance in the Midwest Service Men's Basketball league competition by playing the sailors of this school in the gymnasium here Thursday. . . . The marines conquered Vaughan General hospital in a league contest Tuesday night, 47 to 27.

Fort Sheridan.

THE Bakers and Cooks' basketball team of this fort will meet Radio Chicago, naval training school at 190 N. State st., in a Midwest Service Men's league game Wednesday night. . . . Several hundred disabled veterans at this camp were entertained by a series of exhibitions between members of Chicago's Ringside gymnasium last week. . . . The show, held under the direction of Maj. George P. Kreider, special services officer from Springfield, Ill., included nine bouts, two between teen age lads from Frank Gilmer's Libertyville Boys' club. . . . Jack Begun, Chicago Stadium and Marigold gardens promoter, was a referee. . . . Among the judges was Pvt. George Rodgerson, who was wounded in the invasion of North Africa two years ago. . . . Rodgerson is a former boxer and played football at Minneapolis' Washington High school and St. Thomas Military academy. . . . Fear of endangering his status as a lightweight finalist in the Catholic Youth organization tournament in Chicago Wednesday prevented Pvt. Vince Pellegrini from going thru with a scheduled sparring match with Johnny Bratton. . . . Tom Somlo, Chicago amateur light heavyweight, is a nephew of Ike Bernstein, civilian boxing coach here. . . . Ted Christie, New York junior lightweight, boxed three rounds with Frankie Gaffney in preparation for a six round fight against A. C. Lee of Indianapolis in Marigold gardens tomorrow. . . . WAC Jane Preuss is the new sports editor of the camp newspaper, replacing Corp. Bill Scanlan, who now is a member of the post orientation center.

KENNEALLY TO COACH BOXING AT WISCONSIN

Madison, Wis., Dec. 2.—Tom Kenneally, boxing chief with the navy training unit at the University of Wisconsin, will take over the boxing coaching duties on the Wisconsin campus for the 1945 season on a voluntary basis, it was announced today by Harry Stuhldreher, athletic director.

In taking over coaching duties formerly held by Boxing Coach John Walsh, now on leave from the university to serve with the marines, Kenneally will be carrying on his navy boxing instruction duties, since the main portion of this year's Badger boxing squad will be navy personnel. Kenneally was assistant football coach and boxing coach at St. Phillips High school in Chicago in 1938-'39.

Vito Schiro, Wisconsin boxer in 1935-'36-'37, will assist Kenneally in boxing.

Chicago, St. Louis Tied, 7-7, at Half in Roller Derby

Chicago and St. Louis were tied, 7 to 7, at the half in the 10th game of the roller derby in the Coliseum last night. Charles Saunders of Chicago and Gene Gammon of St. Louis led in scoring with two points each.

55,000 to See Redskins and Giants Today professed no fear of Washington's great Sammy Baugh.

Tomorrow they have less reason to worry about Sam, whose spectacular career has taken an almost unbelievable turn due to a combination of circumstances. First, he has divided his time between a Texas ranch and football. Second, the Redskins' new coach, Dud DeGroot, installed the T formation.

Baugh May Be Baugh Again.

Baugh, getting only a minimum of practice, couldn't adjust his passing style to it. He likes to get the ball on a direct pass, case his field, then pitch. Taking it on a handoff from the center, Baugh lost his fine coördination and confidence. Adding to the mixup, Frankie Filchock, one time Redskin, returned after a stretch in the navy and worked magic with the T, so much so that he has thrown more touchdown passes, 13, than his league rivals. Baugh has pitched only three scores and this is the fellow who pegged 23 last campaign.

But Baugh is Baugh and it would not be surprising if the Redskins forget the T formation tomorrow and return to the modified Notre Dame system with Sam at left, or tall back, where he takes a direct pass from center. Under this system, Wilbur Moore, Bob Seymour, and Andy Farkas will be dangerous runners and Sam may wake up as a passer. In Joe Aguirre they have one of the best pass catching ends in the league.

Tomorrow in Pittsburgh, the Bears close their season against the Card-Pitts, who have lost nine in nine played. The Bears have to win this one to clinch a tie for second place in the western division with the Detroit Lions.

Sooners Take 2d Straight Big 6 Title

Oklahoma City, Okla., Dec. 2 (AP).—Scoring four touchdowns in the first half, the University of Oklahoma won its second consecutive Big Six football title today, defeating Nebraska, 31 to 12.

The Sooners, performing before 3,000 shivering fans kept Nebraska from touching Oklahoma territory in the first half while throwing the Cornhuskers for a minus 11 yards rushing.

BOBBY PERMANE HURT IN SPILL AT GULFSTREAM

Miami, Fla., Dec. 2 (AP).—Jockey Bobby Permane suffered a broken left collarbone today in a spill during the first race at Gulfstream Park. Permane's mount, Budded, fell when another horse bore out in the stretch. Budded received a broken leg and was destroyed.

The accident will keep him out of the saddle for several weeks.

HAKOAHS BATTLE HANSAS IN CUP SOCCER MATCH

Today's Game

CLASS C SEMI-FINALS.
[Key Branch stadium, 5400 Roosevelt rd.]
Hansas vs. Hakoah-Centers, 12:30 p. m. Referee—Robert Jones.
Schwabens vs. Spartas, 2:30 p. m. Referee—Eli Korer.

STATE SECOND ROUND CUP GAME.
[Yates stadium, 82d st. and Yates av.]
Swedes vs. Guisti-Italians, 2:30 p. m. Referee—Philip Lopater.

PARK DISTRICT JUVENILE GAMES.
Franklin Park vs. Portage Park, 5400 Roosevelt rd., 2:30 p. m. Referee—Robert Jones.
Smith Field vs. Hamlin Park, Smith field, 3600 W. Grand av., 1 p. m. Referee—Emil Baun.

BY OFFSIDE.

Three games, two of which have a bearing on a league championship, heads today's soccer schedule with a double header listed in Key Branch stadium, 5400 W. Roosevelt rd., and a single contest in Yates stadium, 82d st. and Yates av.

The first half of the double bill pits the Hansas against the Hakoah-Centers at 12:30 p. m. with the National league's C title at stake. The second attraction at 2:30 o'clock finds the Schwabens and Spartas clashing in the semi-finals of the same division.

The Swedes and Guisti-Italians clash in the third cup battle in Yates stadium.

Hansas Expect Battle.

The Hansas expect a stiff fight from the Hakoahs since the latter outfit has one of the strongest lineups in the circuit but has lost several games by one and two goal margins. However, the improved play of Goalie Bill Stein makes the Centers a threat for the title and they enter today's game as no less than an even choice to win.

Leo Hony, star full back, is the mainstay of the defense and the middle line of Eli Field, Dr. Julius Brant, and Max Kassner ranks with the city's best. Eddie Linderman and Max Pearlman will be at their usual posts in the front line.

The Hansas, who have gained a reputation for their hustling style of play, possess a strong defense in Goalie Vern Fekker and Full Backs Arch Streader and Herbert Sack.

Hope to Beat Schwabens.

The Spartas loom as a definite threat to end the title march of the Schwabens since they gave the Swedes plenty of trouble a week ago even tho outplayed. The Schwabens, handicapped by a scarcity of reserves, will rely on their regular lineup with Kurt Wunderlick as the only doubtful starter.

Pairings for Soccer Cup Contests Are Announced

Pairings for the first round cup games of the National Soccer association were announced yesterday by Fred Netto, western commissioner of the association. They are: Hansa vs. Hakoah Centers, Vikings vs. Necaxa, Slovaks vs. Guisti-Italians, Swedes vs. Schwabens. Sparta drew a bye. On Dec. 17 the Vikings and Necaxa will play in Winnemac park stadium and the Slovaks will meet the Guisti-Italians in the Sparta stadium.

Certainly feels like old times

SCHICK INJECTOR BLADES ARE BACK!
(Sorry—No New Razors Yet Except for the Armed Forces!)

Here you are, sir—looking and feeling your best after tomorrow morning's shave. And for good reason! Schick Injector Blades are back again in force!

Yes, tomorrow just return to your Schick Injector Razor—and presto! It's smooth shaving from then on.

We now have blades to supply civilian as well as military demands—but we still can't get the material for new razors except for the Armed Forces. So keep your Schick Injector Razor in A-1 condition and keep on enjoying these Schick Injector features. They're the only basic improvements in safety razor shaving in the past 40 years.

SCHICK INJECTOR RAZOR BLADES
Magazine Repeating Razor Co., Bridgeport 1, Conn.

AUTOMATIC BLADE CHANGE
...an exclusive Schick Injector feature. A pull and push on the Injector shoots out the old blade, slides in a fresh one instantly. Nothing to take apart or re-assemble. No fumbling with sharp blade edges or messy paper wrappers.

SOLID GUIDE BAR
. . . has a sure-grip surface that stretches and flattens the skin just ahead of the blade. Pops up whiskers for closer, more comfortable shave. Corner guards protect against nicking and scraping.

DOUBLE-THICK BLADES
. . . just as long but twice as thick as ordinary blades. 3 times as thick as paper-thin ones. So they take and hold a really keen edge. Oil packed in special cartridge, their cutting edges are suspended in space.

And don't forget to buy more War Bonds!

The Home Front

BY WILLIAM BAYLISS.

BUILDING with an eye to the future, the Bell & Howell company is laying out a 10 acre recreation field at its new plant, 7100 McCormick rd. Tho the entire layout will not be completed until after the war, when certain necessary building materials again will be available for general use, the field will be ready for use for outdoor sports next summer.

The outdoor sports areas which are included in the plans consist of a softball diamond, which will be equipped with the latest thing in lighting systems, 12 horseshoe pitching lanes, and tennis and volleyball courts. The fieldhouse, to take care of basketball and other winter sports, will be built as soon as the materials can be secured.

Looking forward to the time when the new diamond will be ready for use, Wayne Lemmon, recreation director for Bell & Howell, already is making plans for organizing a softball league for next summer. North side industries and commercial industries which are interested in joining a league of this sort might find an opening there.

'Stop Illinois Tool' Is Theme Song of North Avenue League.

The theme song in the North Avenue Y. M. C. A. Industrial Basketball league this winter will be "Stop Illinois Tool," and with good reason. The Illinois Tool Works quintet will be bidding for its third straight championship, which, if achieved, will give that concern permanent possession of a traveling trophy which it may have to provide a semi-trailer to transport.

The league opened its schedule this week and for the time being at least, Illinois Tool is not in first place, or even tied for that spot. On the other hand, it didn't lose, the explanation being that its scheduled opponent, Motorola Radio, had a plant softball and basketball banquet on its program Wednesday night and therefore asked that the game be postponed.

The other six teams in the league played, the J. P. Seeburg Corp. beating Russell Electric, 26 to 19, Wednesday to start it off. Two games were played Thursday when Gits Molding beat the Eugene Dietzgen company, 46 to 32, and Oak Manufacturing won from Utah Radio, 34 to 33. Leading scorers of the first round were Joe Raso of Gits and Manuel Guallardo of Oak, with 17 points each.

Topspins Are Current Leaders in Table Tennis Play.

The Topspins are the current leaders in the Industrial Table Tennis league [also called the Hot Stove league] at the North Town Table Tennis club, 804 Wilson av., with the Choppers, Drivers, and Broken Paddles following in the order named. The Broken Paddles are said to be planning on changing their name as a possible aid in getting out of the cellar. However, this may not be necessary, since there was a shifting around of several players at the end of the first round, in order to provide better balance. In the second round, Dan Robertson continues to set the pace among the individuals, having won all of his games, with Ed Schmitzer as runner-up.

The Clearing Industrial association bridge experts will finish their 1944 season Thursday, Dec. 14, but will start a new program with the new year. The championship still is a wide open affair, the leaders, with their point standings being, J. P. Cisler, 65.6; W. K. Dillon, 63.7; R. A. Monson, 63.7; C. E. Wood, 59.6, and J. G. Carr, 54.8.

THE Clearing Industrial District Basketball league is getting set for the season. It will open its schedule tomorrow night in the Englewood Y. M. C. A. with a membership of eight teams. Plans call for a post-season championship playoff series involving the top four teams at the close of the regular schedule, with the usual array of trophies and an all-league banquet after it is all over.

Some dopesters in the Clearing Industrial district already are picking the Lindahl Foundries team as one of the leading possibilities in the title race. This squad has been working out in the Valentine Boys' club for some time under the supervision of Harry [Swede] Roos, one of the best known players in Chicagoland industrial basketball.

Chicago Industrial Recreation Group to Meet Tuesday.

The organization committee of the new Chicago Industrial Recreation association will hold a meeting in room 810 at the Continental hotel [Medinah club] Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. The meeting is open to representatives of any Chicago industrial or commercial firms and the purposes of the new organization will be explained. Permanent officers will be elected to take over the work which thus far has been done by a temporary committee. Walter Ray, assistant director of the Chicago park district recreation program, will speak.

The Chicago Recreation association is the metropolitan subsidiary of the Illinois Industrial and Commercial Recreation association, formed this fall. Aims of the organization are to [1] provide a clearing house for exchange of ideas among recreation directors; [2] develop well balanced recreation programs, with both athletic and non-athletic activities, and [3] provide a uniform set of rules for athletic competition above the intraplant and industrial league level. The last of these looks toward establishment of city and state industrial tournaments in various sports.

Two Teams Tied for First in Association of Commerce League.

Hohman & Hill and Kemper Insurance still are tied for first place in the Chicago Association of Commerce Industrial Bowling league, with four more teams deadlocked for second, only one game behind. These are Illinois Bell, Thompson Elevator and Electric, Railway Express, and Workman Calculators. Illinois Bell last week rolled a 1,053 game, second high of the season, and Ray Hanson of Kemper had a 275 effort, good for third among the individuals. Illiois Bell, 1943 league champion, and Thompsons, the 1944 winners, will meet Thursday in this week's top match at Bensinger's Wabash av. alleys.

The Motorola Radio girl bowlers last week regained first place in the Women's Radio Industries league, or at least a share of that spot with Chicago Transformer. In the Industrial Traveling league, Revere Copper and Brass won three straight and leads the Motorola men's team by three games, despite the latter's sweep over Douglas Aircraft.

U. S. JUDGE HITS PLOT TRIALS AS 3 RING CIRCUSES

The growing tendency of the government to institute conspiracy trials in the federal courts was criticized yesterday by Federal Judge Elwyn R. Shaw, who blamed this type of litigation for the death in Washington, D. C., Thursday of Judge Edward C. Eicher, presiding jurist in the seven months' old sedition trial there.

Judge E. R. Shaw.

Judge Shaw's outburst occurred as he received preliminary motions in a conspiracy case against 105 corporations and individuals accused by the government of violating anti-trust laws by fixing the price of American cheese.

The indictment, returned in March, 1942, closely paralleled that of 30 defendants in a case involving brick cheese, which dragged thru a nine week hearing and ended last January when a jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Questions U. S. Procedure.

Judge Shaw asked Robert Nitschke, special assistant to the attorney general in charge of anti-trust cases, why the issues in the current case, the same as those in the brick cheese hearing, could not have been settled in a single trial.

"This court has no intention of being dragged into a long trial by repetition of testimony offered in a previous conspiracy trial in which a not guilty finding was returned by a jury," Judge Shaw said.

"Ever since prohibition," the court continued, "there has been a general tendency of the government to try conspiracy cases. They [the government] put everything into a sack and toss it at the jury. That theory is faulty. In Washington, it killed Judge Eicher. Similar conspiracy cases elsewhere have gone haywire.

Orders Bill of Particulars.

"Before we go into this trial we are going to have a bill of particulars. If that is not sufficient, we'll ask for more information. This court does not intend to go into a three ring circus. We're not going to throw everything into a pile and expect a jury to come up with a verdict. This case is not going to be one of those 'dragnet' cases. We're going to have definite allegations."

Judge Shaw gave the government 90 days to file a bill of particulars as asked by some of the defendants.

The court took under advisement a motion by the National Dairy Products company, one of the defendants, to quash the indictment against it. George I. Haight, counsel for the company, pointed out that the firm was a stock holding company, not a dealer, and said it therefore could not have participated in the alleged price fixing.

Scores of major food companies, including the Kraft Cheese company, the Borden company, Armour & Co., Swift & Co., are among the defendants. Many of them also were defendants in the brick cheese conspiracy case.

MICHIGAN STATE QUINTET BEATS DRAKE, 44 TO 36

East Lansing, Mich., Dec. 2 [Special].—Michigan State returned to basketball competition tonight after a year's lapse and the Spartans celebrated the resumption of activities by scoring a 44 to 36 victory over Drake university.

Sam Fortino was the sparkplug of the Spartan attack. He scored 20 points and kept the Spartans in the running thruout the game and sparked the drive during the final minutes.

Drake held a 23 to 21 lead at half time, only to see Michigan State pull up on even terms at 27 to 27 midway in the second half. The Bulldogs, led by Jack Edling, rolled up a quick five point lead at this point, only to have Michigan State rack up 16, while Drake could add only three. Edling tallied 16 points for Drake. BUDDY YOUNG PLANS TO GO ON OVERSEAS TOUR

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 2 (AP).—Claude [Buddy] Young, 18, freshman star half back of the University of Illinois eleven, said today he had left school and was planning to join other Negro athletes in a U. S. O. tour abroad.

Young said he understood the group was to leave this month to visit London, Cairo, and Paris. He said the Pittsburgh [Pa.] Courier had wired him asking if he would be interested in making such a tour and that he replied he would.

To Settle Suit

MRS. HARRIETT VAN ORMAN.

Evansville, Ind., Dec. 2 [Special].—The suit for a divorce and a settlement of $250,000 filed here by Mrs. Harriett Hodgini Van Orman, former Chicagoan and once a circus bareback rider and gymnast, will be settled without a trial, it became known here this week.

She had charged F. Harold Van Orman, head of the Van Orman chain of hotels in Indiana, Illinois, and Ohio and former lieutenant governor of Indiana, with "cruel and inhuman" treatment. They have a son, Richard, 8.

Mrs. Van Orman was a 20 year old equestrienne with Cole Brothers-Clyde Beatty circus in 1935 when she eloped with the hotel owner after he had followed her show and courted her thru seven states. The former "Mademoiselle Harietta" of the sawdust ring said she will not return to the circus, but will reside in California where Van Orman's first wife went to live after they were divorced in 1931. Mrs. Van Orman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hodgini Sr., operate an apartment house in Chicago.

AIR LINES AGREE TO CITY'S PLAN FOR TERMINAL

Ready to Double Their Capacity, Says Kelly.

Mayor Kelly's written demand early last week that the air lines act promptly for the proposed new terminal building at the airport brought a response yesterday that resulted, the mayor said, in agreement to go ahead on a scale contemplating a 100 per cent increased use of the field.

Representatives of the eight lines using the airport met with the mayor in a closed session in his office. Afterward, he said that he had retracted his letter, which was a 30 day ultimatum, and the air lines people, on their part, had accepted his view that the present mile square port has adequate runways and that its passenger handling capacity could be doubled with a proper terminal building.

'A New Conception.'

"I believe the lines now have a complete new conception of our project," he said. "Heretofore they had been thinking in terms of 50 per cent capacity, which is what present use of the port amounts to. The field will handle twice that many arrivals and departures. We need a terminal scaled to that full capacity use.

"Every one is clamoring for an airport that will handle Chicago's post-war traffic. Our latest technical advice is that the municipal field is adequate for some time to come, but the 50 per cent terminal, which the air lines had in mind up to today, would not do when traffic expands beyond its present volume.

"They see that now. They left our meeting to begin work on new designs for a building that will meet the demands of doubled traffic."

End of Deadlock Seen.

The agreement appeared to end a deadlock of several months. The air lines had submitted plans for a terminal which the city had rejected as inadequate, and the situation had reached the stage where the lines were talking of using the Douglas port, northwest of the city, for their principal terminal investment, and city officials were talking of putting the city's money into the Municipal terminal.

Originally, the lines had agreed to lend $1,250,000 to build the terminal and the city was to put up $500,000 for accessory improvements. The new full capacity terminal will cost more, the mayor said, but he implied that neither the lines nor the city had made a point of that.

None of the air lines representatives was available after the meeting, but Mayor Kelly indicated that possible use of the Douglas airport was not mentioned. He said it was mentioned that the new terminal might be located at the west side of Chicago airport on Central av.

NEW PAY BOOST SOUGHT IN WAKE OF RAIL STRIKE

Trainmen of the North Shore and Aurora-Elgin Electric lines, who last Monday accepted a 5 cents an hour pay raise and returned to work after a 17 day strike, yesterday served new demands on the roads for wage increases ranging from 12 to 16 cents an hour.

The demands were made by officials of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. Dan D. Miller, vice president of the latter union, said the proposed increases would bring the trainmen's pay to the standard hourly rate being paid by competing roads.

Under the present scale, recommended by a Presidential panel and accepted Nov. 26, motormen and conductors are paid 97 cents an hour, and ticket collectors and brakemen 85 cents an hour. The new demands are for $1.13¼ and 97¼, respectively.

A meeting between union officials and the management will be held Tuesday morning, Miller said. If the management disagrees with their demands, the union will call upon the national mediation board to arbitrate, he said.

If that step in the procedure fails, as it did in their demands early this year, an emergency panel would be appointed under the national railway labor act.

The recent strike affected 75,000 commuters and in some instances isolated communities in the western and northern suburbs. War production in the area was greatly hampered by absenteeism created by the workers' inability to get to their jobs. A survey by the state department of labor disclosed that absenteeism in affected plants ranged as high as 35 per cent. The strike was settled as a result of intervention by a representative of the war production board.

U. S. TAX BOOKS BACK JOHNSON'S RETRIAL PLEA

Income tax records for the Albany Park bank building were filed yesterday in the federal District court clerk's office, purporting to show that taxes on income from the building for 1937 to 1940, inclusive, were paid by Theodore Goldstein, son of Atty. William Goldstein.

The records were ordered placed on file by Federal Judge John P. Barnes in connection with the appeal for a new trial by William R. [Big Bill] Johnson and four co-defendants convicted of income tax evasion.

The appeal is based upon the defense contention that new evidence unearthed since the convictions indicates that Johnson was not the owner of the bank building, as charged by the government, and that testimony that he was, offered by William Goldstein, was perjured.

TRAINING SCHOOL ONLY PLACE TO SEND OFFENDERS

Until the state can supply additional facilities for the commitment of youthful criminals and delinquents, the confinement of these groups will remain an administrative problem for the Illinois State Training School for Boys, near St. Charles.

Judge Frank H. Bicek, who has presided over Cook county's Juvenile court for 12 years, made this declaration yesterday in answer to criticism leveled at the courts in connection with numerous escapes from the training school.

"The state training school is the only institution to which this court can send offenders," he said, and pointed out that the shortage of help and low salaries paid guards, while better jobs are available in war plants, have increased administrative problems of handling inmates in the state school.

Urgently needed, he said, are expansions of the Sheridan branch of the school, where there are barred rooms, with maximum confinement security. Also needed for a more effective segregation of boys who get into trouble is a school for offenders under 12 years of age, Judge Bicek said.

GUNNISON PLANS PRE-FABRICATED HOME EXPANSION

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

[This is the second of two stories on the pre-fabricated home industry. The first was published on Nov. 28.]

Pre-fabricated homes, which Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel corporation, recently predicted would become one of the world's greatest industries and substantially aid in post-war employment, got their first real start in 1934 when Owen D. Young, then chairman of General Electric company, asked Foster Gunnison to study the potentialities of the factory built home industry as a means of helping to end the business depression.

Foster Gunnison.

Gunnison, son of the former publisher of the Brooklyn Eagle, a naval ensign in the World War I. and later an internationally known lighting expert, at once organized Homes, Inc., to study the entire prefabrication field.

Uses Assembly Line Method.

Later he moved his research activities to New Albany, Ind., where he formed Gunnison Homes, Inc., to develop and perfect factory built homes which in size, style, price, speed of construction and erection, he hoped would meet the mass residential market of America.

He installed an assembly line similar to the timed-flow conveyor production system which by increasing the number and decreasing the cost had put automobiles within reach of the ordinary citizen and the motor industry in the front rank of American manufacturing.

Gunnison was so successful in turning out completely ready-for-use homes that he interested both the government and the United States Steel corporation. Federal agencies ordered 2,800 factory built units, all of which have been made, and United States Steel bought control of the company.

Placing the steel corporation's capital back of the Gunnison business means its rapid development into a nation-wide chain of one story streamlined plants as soon as war time building restrictions are lifted, said Gunnison, who remains the principal individual stockholder in Gunnison Homes, Inc. The New Albany factory will be operated as a "pilot plant" for the pre-fabricated home industry, he said.

Employs No Architects.

Efficiency at least will be doubled in new plants designed especially for the job, Gunnison asserted. If that proves true, it was estimated that 100,000 men would be able to turn out 2,000 houses every 25 minutes, or 115,200 every 24 hours. This would be an important contribution towards solving the post-war housing problem, Gunnison said.

"Almost all of our executives are from the automotive industry where mass production is a byword," said Gunnison at his New Albany plant. "We've never hired any architects or builders. They have so many pre-conceived ideas about design and construction that we couldn't use them successfully."

Gunnison is getting the plant ready for what he expects will be a vast post-war market. This expectation, he said, is based on the fact that he can sell all he can make.

Seeking Materials Inventories.

But an assembly line can't be started unless all necessary items, from lumber to tacks, are on hand, and Gunnison is trying to build up a big inventory of materials. He may not be able to resume mass production of homes before next spring, he said, altho possibly he may get government permission to start before then.

"When we do get under way again we'll be able to give the public more, better, and cheaper homes than was possible before the war," Gunnison said.

Lawrence and Sacramento Corner Sold for $76,500

Morris Markovitz sold the southwest corner of Lawrence and Sacramento avs., improved with six stores and 27 flats, to Z. Klein and M. Zemel for a reported $76,500.

BUYS ESTES AV. FLATS.

H. Sandell purchased the 19 flat building at 2014-18 Estes av., from Vernon Tittle, trustee, for $65,000 cash. Ben Beron of Dearborn Realty & Mortgage company, and Ludwig Kahn of A. G. Stahl & Co., were brokers.

Plan Two G. I. Bill Dwellings for Lombard

Lombard will be the location of the first homes to be erected in the Chicago area by veterans under the G. I. Bill of Rights. Charles H. Cress, president of Green Valley Homes, Inc., yesterday said plans had been drawn and necessary steps almost completed for two returned service men to build homes in Lombard.

Ernest L. Darsey, of Elmhurst, who was in the army two years, and now is an engineer with Columbia Broadcasting system, has bought a 75 by 165 foot lot at 133 E. Morningside av., Lombard, for $1,800 and will build a two bedroom brick house, with garage attached, to cost $7,500. Darsey is getting an $1,860 down payment loan thru the veterans' bureau. He is getting the balance thru an FHA insured loan. At the same time he will get priorities for his home.

Build What They Please.

Under H-3 housing regulations of the national housing agency, set up for veterans, they may build what they please provided they can obtain noncritical materials.

Richard Kufer, of Lombard, who was in the army 14 months and now works in the Dodge-Chicago plant bought a 50 by 160 foot lot at 149 S. Stewart av., Lombard, for $1,250. He will build a brick home to cost $7,200.

Other Applications Made.

Three other veterans have made home building applications, Cress said, and many more are expected.

Cress said that later homes for veterans would be erected in his company's 118 acre Green Valley development on the west side of Main st., Lombard, a block south of the Aurora and Elgin railroad. This tract is being laid out with curving roads, and business centers and 400 home sites are provided for.

ENGINEER GROUP WILL CELEBRATE 75TH BIRTHDAY

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be guest speaker at a dinner of the Western Society of Engineers Tuesday evening in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman. His subject will be "Chicago and Its Growth." The meeting marks the 75th anniversary of the founding of the society, the third oldest engineering organization in the country.

Certificates of honorary membership will be presented to Dr. Daniel W. Mead, professor emeritus of hydraulic and sanitary engineering, University of Wisconsin, and to George Terry Horton, president of Chicago Bridge and Iron company, builder of LST craft [tank landing ships] at Seneca, Ill. Presentation will be made by P. R. Elfstrom, president of the society.

NORTH WABASH BUILDINGS SOLD TO BASS HEIRS

The two five story buildings at 159-165 N. Wabash av., fronting 80 feet and with a depth of 96 feet, yesterday were sold for $150,000 by Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, to Sam Bass Warner and Helen Wilson Warner, trustees of the Gertrude Bass Warner share under the will of Clara F. Bass. The north building, at the southeast corner of Benton pl., was sold for $80,000. The other sold for $70,000. Winston & Co., agent for the buyers, will manage the properties for them. The new owners expect to erect new buildings, it was said.

PEACE TRAFFIC WILL TOP 1939, RAILS PREDICT

Oppose View Slump Will Follow War.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—United States railroads expect for three or four years after reconversion business approximating volume in the 1929 boom year, and during the poorest 12 months in a reconversion period lasting 18 to 24 months a revenue volume at least 25 per cent larger than that of 1939.

These estimates were obtained from J. H. Parmelee, director of economics for the Association of American Railroads. The estimates are considered particularly significant because volume of freight and passenger traffic, dependent as they are upon general business conditions, are popularly accepted as a gauge of general business conditions.

No Slump Expected.

Thus, in the opinion of the bureau of economics of the country's railroads, there will be no reconversion slump with widespread unemployment of the character apprehended by a minority of business men. Parmelee's estimates do not go beyond his "reconversion period" of 18 or 24 months plus three or four years of "post-war era" thereafter.

The industry's chief economist, mainly on the basis of surveys of principal shippers, placed operating revenue during the lowest 12 months of reconversion at 5 to 5½ billion dollars. For the post-war period, he placed annual operating revenue at 6 to 6½ billion. These figures compare with the 6 billion 280 million dollar revenue of 1929, the largest peace time year in rail history, and with the 3 billion 995 million dollar revenue of 1939, the last year before the United States started heavy production for the European war.

Based on these revenue figures, the railroads will employ 1 million to 1,100,000 during reconversion and 1,140,000 to 1,225,000 in the post-war years. They are now employing 1,400,000.

Prepare for Peace Business.

The railroads are preparing for this post-war business. They expect to invest 1 billion 750 million dollars in rolling stock in the first five years after Germany is defeated and approximately the same amount in roadway betterments, terminals, and incidental equipment. Incidental equipment will probably include radio communication with locomotive cabs for traffic control, it was said.

Replacements in rolling stock will incorporate recent modernization in design and advancement in materials. This applies to freight cars, in which light weight metals, plywood, and high test steel are employed to reduce dead weight, as well as to passenger cars in which streamlining and decorations add to customer appeal. Improvements have also been made in locomotives.

Annual replacements needed will include 70,000 freight cars, 1,270 locomotives and about 50 million dollars for passenger trains.

Make Technical Studies.

The railroad association has technical committees making exhaustive studies of three subjects: [1] Reduction of weight of freight and passenger cars; [2] advantageous uses for diesel, electric, and steam locomotives, and [3] design and composition of steel rails and their fastenings.

The carriers anticipate competition from air lines, trucks, and private automobiles. They are inclined to admit that the planes will take much of the transcontinental passenger business, but relative costs will give only a comparatively minute portion of freight hauling to air lines. On shorter rides, the railroads will give added comfort for passengers and will retain the advantages of dependability and of downtown terminals, it was said. Additional comfort and speed will be used to compete against the private automobiles.

To prepare the country's railroads for the reconversion and post-war years, the association will continue its perennial arguments with congress over tax rates and with the interstate commerce commission over tariffs.

British Revive Steel Industry Export Output

BY JOSEPH CERUTTI.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—British iron and steel manufacturers are losing no time in starting production for export trade as a result of Prime Minister Churchill's announcement, confirmed by Washington, that their products will be free of all lend-lease restrictions beginning next month.

Export orders totaling millions of dollars already are on hand, it was reported, and manufacture of such products as rails and tin plate can be begun with a minimum of delay. Twenty-five per cent of British steel production capacity has been lying idle, industrial sources disclosed, and can be switched to export requirements.

Expect Other Releases.

Altho Churchill and Washington specified only iron, steel, and some nonferrous metals as released for export, industrialists are convinced many other products will be similarly freed and a month hence they will be free to start sending overseas a wide range of goods which had a pre-war export value of millions of dollars.

The manufacturers' reception of the new lend-lease agreement was reflected on the stock market where lively demand developed for steel and engineering stocks.

The unstinted approval made light of man power problems and shortages of vital materials, including coal, confronting the manufacturers. Some observers asserted Britain's own unspecified construction needs must absorb much of the new production, but estimates that the United States would supply 40 million dollars worth of building materials and complete houses under lend-lease suggested that America will play a big part in helping to solve Britain's biggest headache.

Dollar Source Questioned.

Another difficulty, lightly regarded, is where Britain will obtain the dollars needed for future purchases from the United States. Churchill refused a direct answer in commons when asked whether the United States was prepared to accept imports of British goods or wanted cash for exports to Britain, other than lend-lease.

The Manchester Guardian financial writer suggested Britain may find dollars in South America as well as in certain European countries in return for exports. He said the dollar reserve accumulated from earnings of empire countries also has been allowed to swell recently tho the government refused to disclose any figures.

Some indication of Britain's intentions regarding payment may emerge from the debate on export trade scheduled in commons Wednesday when the government is expected to disclose plans to aid British manufacturers regain their overseas markets.

WFA BOOSTS DEALER, FACTORY ALLOTMENT OF BURLEY TOBACCO

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2 (AP).—Cigaret and smoking tobacco manufacturers will be allowed to buy 5 per cent more burley tobacco from this year's crop than they used during the 12 month period ended Sept. 30, the war food administration announced today.

The burley crop, which will start moving to market week after next, is being allocated among manufacturers and dealers by the WFA. Burley is second to flue-cured tobacco in quantity used for cigarets. This year's crop must be aged, however, 18 months or longer before it will be ready for use.

Dealers will be permitted to purchase 4 per cent more than last year.

The increased allocations are possible because the 1944 crop totaled 488 million pounds compared with 390 million last year. The order will permit manufacturers to buy 446 million pounds, about 21 millions more than they used during the 12 month period ended Sept. 30. Dealers will be allowed to acquire 68 million pounds, 54 million pounds of which will be for resale to manufacturers. The 14 million pound balance in dealers' hands is assigned for export.

CEILING PRICES FIXED FOR ARMY BATTERY SALES

Washington, D. C., Dec. 1 (AP).—The OPA today set ceiling prices of 10 cents each at retail and 5½ cents wholesale for about 22 million flashlight batteries to be sold as surplus property.

The order followed a congressional investigation in which, after disclosing the batteries were to be sold without publicity, the senate war investigation committee directed that these items and all other surplus war commodities must be disposed of openly.

Army officials had expressed belief, the committee was told, that because there was a temporary oversupply of small batteries the public might assume there were surpluses in other types. Plans had been made for disposal of the batteries at 4 cents each thru the treasury department's procurement division. The original cost to the army was 9.3 cents each.

NAZIS STRICKEN BY STEEL AND FOOD SHORTAGE

Attributed to Loss of Territory.

Germany is suffering a food shortage and is handicapped by reduced steel supplies, studies made by the American Institute of Food Distribution and the American Iron and Steel institute disclosed yesterday.

Food supplies in Germany have been so reduced in the last few months by the loss of large imports that civilians are experiencing the first real shortage of essential foods in the war, said the food institute. Undernourishment will be quite general in cities during the winter, with the plight of millions of forced workers and prisoners "very bad," and the army will not get all the food it needs.

Hunger Bad in 1918.

"Insufficient food and hunger were largely responsible for Germany's quitting in 1918," it said. "With inadequate shelter, insufficient fuel, and inability to get enough food, German civilians will be under pressure to start rioting in the big cities, altho this cannot be confidently predicted while control by the Gestapo is so tight."

The institute predicted that when allied armies overrun Germany and its remaining occupied territories they will find such inadequate reserves of essential foods and such a breakdown in transportation and food distribution that many millions will be fed for several months thru army relief. Food supplies of some types in Germany will continue seriously short until the autumn of 1945, it was said. The prediction was based on government surveys of German food production in 1944 and food conditions in other territory under the control of the Nazis.

Drain Occupied Lands.

Altho Germany long has had to make important food imports, Germans have been better fed during the present war than people in any other European country. Food has been obtained by draining supplies from occupied countries. Most of these sources have been cut off since 1944 harvests, leaving serious deficiencies in Germany. German farm acreage has been maintained and actually increased during the war, but lack of fertilizer and insufficient labor have cut crops until total production in 1944 was less than in pre-war Germany, the institute said.

After Germany's collapse needed wheat will be drawn largely from other countries, but the United States will have to supply some live stock feed, fats, and such staples as dry beans and peas. The call on America for dairy products and meats probably will be larger than Americans will be willing to supply, it said.

Steel Output Slashed.

Germany's highly increased steel production, the backbone of its war machine in both world wars, has been slashed almost in half thru military setbacks, loss of territories, and damage inflicted thru bombings, the iron and steel institute reported.

A lagging German steel industry was stimulated in 1871 by Prussia's defeat of France and its acquisition of Alsace-Lorraine with its extensive iron ore deposits. Following that conquest industrialization proceeded rapidly in Germany and by 1913 it was producing twice as much steel as England and four times as much as France, the institute said.

Defeat in 1918 and the Treaty of Versailles eliminated more than half of Germany's iron ore production, but by 1922 it was once again the leading European producer.

German steel capacity probably has been cut to not more than 36 million tons from the 60 million tons available in axis Europe at the height of Nazi power by the loss of most of Italy, France, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Balkans, and Hungary. An additional 20 per cent loss in production is estimated to have resulted from bombings and sabotage, said the institute.

The Treasury's Working Balance

Charge 11,000 Violations of Pricing Rules

Approximately 11,000 instances of used car sales above ceiling prices have been reported to local price panel assistants in the seven states of the office of price administration 6th region, Rae M. Walters, regional administrator, said yesterday.

"Price panels thruout the seven states have done a remarkable job in handling the great number of violations of the used car regulations," said Walters. "They have obtained refunds for customers ranging from $5 to $500 and they have instituted criminal or law suits in more than 180 cases regarded as worthy of judicial review and criminal proceedings or fines.

Repeaters Face Injunctions.

"Injunctions also have been sought where violations were flagrant and where dealers have been found guilty of violations for the second time."

Walters said the industry as a whole, however, had coöperated "in a splendid manner and we feel that midwestern dealers have given us better coöperation than dealers in other parts of the country, but we know, too, that certain individuals have attempted to organize and operate black markets in automobiles just as they have in the fields of foods and other products."

To help enable dealers to stay in business they are permitted to sell cars put in first class condition at higher prices than individuals. In such cases they must give a warranty.

Main Violations Listed.

Walters listed the following as the most common types of violations:

A seller charging a warranty price for a used car when he is not an authorized dealer, side payments, upgrading as selling standard makes at de luxe model prices, sellers requiring trade-ins of other cars, selling cars not in good operating condition, sellers charging price for radio or heater without delivery, sellers requiring purchasers to buy extra equipment, and seller refusing cash and requiring purchaser to pay for car on time accounts.

EXTRA DIVIDEND OF $1 DECLARED BY CARNATION

Carnation company yesterday voted an extra dividend of $1 with a 50 cents a share disbursement on common stock and a quarterly payment of $1 on 4 per cent first preferred stock. Keystone Custodian Funds announced a semi-annual distribution of $1 a share on Keystone investment bond fund series B-1 of which 50 cents was a special distribution and $3 a share on appreciation preferred stock series K-2 of which $2.55 was a special distribution.

Allied Products corporation authorized a special dividend of $1 a share with quarterlies of 50 cents on common and 43¾ cents on class A stock. Hummel-Ross Fiber corporation declared an extra of 10 cents with a regular of 10 cents.

Duplan corporation declared a dividend of 30 cents and a dividend in stock of one share of common for each 50 shares held.

LARGE CIGARET MAKER SUED ON PRICE CHARGES

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—The regional OPA today filed suit for $998,769 against the American Tobacco company, charging the company sold cigarets at over ceiling prices to wholesalers, jobbers, and distributors for resale for army and navy use.

Regional OPA Administrator Daniel P. Woolley said that on Nov. 1, 1943, American Tobacco increased prices to wholesalers and jobbers on case lot sales of Lucky Strike, Herbert Tareyton, and Pall Mall cigarets to such military establishments as post exchanges and ship services.

The OPA told the company the price change was in violation of regulations and on July 1, 1944, the company returned to the lower prices, Woolley said.

CORN DECLINES ON INCREASED COUNTRY SALES

Purchase of 600,000 bushels of corn for deferred shipment from the country, the largest day's business in more than three weeks, gave corn futures a weak undertone yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. December was sold freely by commission houses, and when some pressure developed from cash interests, the close was 2¼ cents a bushel lower. Deferred deliveries lost 1 to 1¼ cents.

December rye advanced 1⅞ cents at the opening on buying induced by failure of traders to deliver grain on future contracts, but pressure developed later and rye prices at the close were unchanged to ¾ cent lower. Weakness in corn was a factor. Wheat ended ⅝ cent higher to ¾ cent lower, oats unchanged to ⅛ cent lower and barley ¼ to ⅝ cent lower.

Chicago Bank Clearings Increase to 640 Million

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $640,800,000, compared with $463,100,000 in the preceding holiday week and $498,200,000 a year ago, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. The figures:

	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday .....$	78,400,000	$ 6,800,000
Tuesday	92,000,000	9,300,000
Wednesday	102,200,000	7,700,000
Thursday	120,700,000	16,900,000

RAILS, SUGARS LEAD STOCKS IN BROAD RISE

2 Hour Trade Tops 700,000 Shares.

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Stimulated by strength in rails and selected industrials, notably sugars, the stock market made a broad rise on the largest volume in a Saturday short session in about six months.

Gains of fractions to 2 points were scattered thruout the list soon after the opening and were largely maintained, altho steels and motors were relatively weak and many other leaders were unchanged or showed minor losses at the close.

The Associated Press 60 stock composite was up 0.3 at 55.8, only 0.6 below its seven year top in July. Its gain for the week was 0.8. The rail average added 0.5 at 30.5, highest mark since Dec. 31, 1937, for a rise of 1.1 in the week. Transfers totaled 705,650.

Sugars and Rails at Peak.

Among 60 stocks at new 1944 peaks were South Puerto Rico Sugar, American Sugar, Manati Sugar, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Southern railway, Westinghouse Electric, and United States Realty. Lower were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, American Can, Johns-Manville, Consolidated Edison, and Standard Oil [New Jersey].

Dividends, earnings, and individual situations stimulated favorites thruout the week, altho specialties were in the most consistent demand. Prices were up Monday, about even Tuesday, and on Wednesday made their most substantial average climb since Sept. 15 on a turnover of 1,161,246 shares, largest since Sept. 7.

The forward movement stalled Thursday under profit cashing, and selling remained sufficient to hold the market about even yesterday.

RAIL BONDS ADVANCE.

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Railroad bonds, with gains of fractions to a point or more, overshadowed other trade in today's market. The general list was fully steady, however, and various specialties and favored issues in other groups edged over to new high levels. Trading was relatively active for a two hour session, sales aggregating $6,432,000, compared with $5,108,500 last Saturday.

Leaders in the rail upturn included Morris and Essex 4½s, New York Central Lake Shore division 3½s, Norfolk and Southern 5s, Northern Pacific 5s, Seaboard unstamped 4s, Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern stamped issues, Chicago and Alton 3s, Milwaukee 4½s, Great Northern 4s, and Illinois Central 4s. Missouri Pacific refunding G 5s crossed 73 for the first time in many years. The general 4s moved up 1⅛ to 30⅝ on sales of $693,000.

CHICAGO PRICES CLIMB.

Prices advanced in turnover of 19,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Volume leaders included Illinois Central, up 1⅛; Marshall Field, up ½; Standard Dredging, up ½ at a 1944 high of 4⅛; Chicago Corporation common, off ⅛, and Miller & Hart, unchanged. Dayton Rubber closed at a 1944 peak of 21½, up 1.

ILLINOIS PRISON OUTPUT FOR WAR TOPS 1 MILLION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—Inmates of prisons and correctional institutions in Illinois produced $1,078,904 of garments and textiles for war purposes from July, 1942, to Nov. 1, 1944, WPB'S prison war program branch reported today. The Illinois figure was one of the largest in the national total of nearly 25 million dollars of industrial war production turned out by 120,000 inmates.

WPB said that manufacture of such military items as steel pontoons, submarine and cargo nets, work garments, blankets, rope, parachute cords, stretchers, camouflage netting, and ammunition and rifle boxes currently is at the rate of 1¼ million dollars a month. In addition, prison agricultural output has increased more than 90 per cent, or from a dollar value of $24,015,469 in 1942 to $43,556,343 in 1943.

Federal Life Purchases $3,200,000 of War Bonds

Senate Group Kills Oil Pact with British

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—The Roosevelt administration suffered a severe setback in its foreign policy today when the senate foreign relations committee turned thumbs down on the Anglo-American oil treaty.

The treaty, another of the international projects with which the administration has been dabbling, had the sponsorship of Petroleum Administrator Ickes and the blessing of former Secretary of State Hull.

There had been lively speculation that the treaty might be used for the curbing of aggressor nations in the post-war period, as well as for the regulation of the world's oil commerce.

Fought by Oil Industry.

Leaders of the American oil industry had assailed the compact, however, charging it was a deliberate attempt to regiment American oil interests and subject them to international cartel agreements.

Opposition was substantial in congress on the ground that the treaty would lead to British domination of American oil companies. It also had been under fire because it was drafted with little open discussion and slight opportunity for congress to learn what was going on.

There was widespread suspicion that the original contract would be presented as an executive agreement over which congress would have no control, but after a controversy on this point the plan was submitted to the senate for ratification as a treaty.

It encountered rough sledding in the foreign relations committee. Even Chairman Connally [D., Tex.], an administration stalwart, opposed it. He announced today there is no likelihood the treaty will ever get out of a committee pigeonhole.

"It is my view," Connally said, "that the treaty is unfair to the American oil industry, and it is not necessary for the general welfare."

The treaty, drawn up by Great Britain and the United States, was presented as a plan for assuring the orderly development of petroleum resources for international trade after the war.

Former Secretary Hull was chairman of the American delegation in the drafting of the oil agreement. Ickes was vice chairman.

ONE BIG DETROIT STRIKE ENDS, 2 OTHERS PERSIST

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 2 (AP).—One major war plant strike ended today, but two others continued, involving 9,600 employes.

The first of 1,300 employes at the aircraft engine division of Chrysler corporation's main Dodge plant returned after voting in a mass meeting this morning to end the strike which began Thursday. Members of CIO United Automobile Workers local 3, they were engaged in work on engines for Super Fortress bombers. Chrysler spokesmen said continuation of the strike would have affected output of the big Dodge Chicago plant. International UAW-CIO officials had threatened "drastic action" unless the strike ended. It centered on a seniority dispute over assignment of a girl employe.

Jess Ferrazza, president of UAW-CIO local 212, called a mass meeting tomorrow of 5,800 strikers of the Briggs Manufacturing company Mack av. plant to vote on a back to work proposal. Indications were that some 3,800 idle at the Graham-Paige Motors plant may return Tuesday. Both cases involved seniority disputes.

STOP NUT FIRM REPORTS LARGE 3 MONTH LOSS

Blames War Work Cut, U. S. Rules.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 2 (AP).—Elastic Stop Nut corporation of America, whose president, William T. Hedlund, committed suicide Wednesday, reported to the securities and exchange commission today a $738,000 operating loss for August, September and October. Government regulations and termination and cutback of government contracts were blamed.

The commission suspended trading in the company's common stock for 10 days, acting nine hours after Hedlund, 45, was found with his throat slashed in an outbuilding at his home in Summit, N. J., and invoking suspension power for the first time in its 10 year history.

Plant Closing Authorized.

In an amendment to its prospectus, the company told the commission that directors had authorized the management to close and dispose of the plant situated in Lincoln, Neb., following completion of certain war contracts for shell fuses.

"During the fiscal year ended Nov. 30," the amendment said, "the company experienced a reduction in demand for its self-locking nuts due principally, it believes, to the application of government regulations preventing buying by contractors beyond their current contract requirements and cutting down the number of permissible spares; to the surplus inventory which had accumulated, and a substantial reduction of shop losses in contractors' plants; and to termination and cutbacks by the government of contracts with prime contractors."

Losses Listed by Months.

Operating losses for August, September, and October were listed at $472,000, $116,000 and $150,000.

"In the industry there is less plant capacity in operation than formerly," said the statement, "and the company believes its relative competitive position has improved."

The pay roll dropped from 3,500 to 2,795 at the Union, N. J., plant, and from 1,354 to 676 at the Lincoln plant in the 11 months ended Oct. 31.

In the only mention of Hedlund's death, the statement said:

"Mr. William T. Hedlund, president of the company, took his own life on Nov. 29, 1944. Mr. Hedlund had for a period of months overworked himself to the point of complete exhaustion, which is believed to have resulted in a nervous breakdown. The company is confident that this circumstance will not adversely affect its future."

Consider Lift to Finances.

The company has considered ways and means of improving its financial position, said the statement, adding:

"It was concluded that the company's financial position would be improved thru the sale and disposition of surplus and obsolete inventories during the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, 1944, at the best prices obtainable. Inventories having an estimated book value of approximately $3,500,000 have been liquidated with a resultant realization of only a nominal amount."

Permit Extra Holiday Rail Cars for Men in Service

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2 (AP).—The railroads today were authorized for the third consecutive year to operate special trains or extra cars for the next 45 days to handle holiday travel by soldiers and sailors.

as told in BARRON'S

WHEN the Russians told the Finns their armistice terms, it was the dollar that triumphed. Finnish reparations, the Kremlin insisted, must be counted in U. S. Dollars!

This little-known but highly significant fact . . . conclusive proof of renewed world confidence in the American dollar . . . was recently pointed out in BARRON'S National Business and Financial Weekly.

In a revealing article, Barron's traced upward the resurgent confidence in the dollar from the fears for its future following Pearl Harbor . . . described how a host of folk here and abroad put their savings into everything of so-called "real value," from gems to fine arts, antiques to gold . . . only to see them all slump in price during the past half year.

The safest wartime investment, the article concluded, has been U. S. Government Bonds.

You get not one but several studies of this kind every week in Barron's. For Barron's is written to help the man or woman with assets of $10,000 or more to protect. In addition, it brings you such regular weekly features as:

The Trader . . . an analyst on whom many depend exclusively for stock-market guidance.

How's Business? . . . Each week's developments at a glance. Saves hours of other reading.

Investment Studies . . . Individual securities analyzed both for their good and bad points.

Market Laboratory . . . Dow-Jones averages tabulated and graphed, with exclusive Dow Theory interpretation of price movements.

. . . And other departments equally important to people who mean to keep what they have . . . and make it produce for them.

Barron's is the only weekly affiliated with Dow-Jones, the largest, fastest of all business news-gathering organizations. To read it pays dividends in reliable, usable business and investment knowledge.

RETAIL TRADE GAINS.

An outstanding development of the war period is the steady rise in aggregate retail sales. The upward trend in dollar volume has been maintained since Pearl Harbor despite the absence from the market of numerous items of durable goods and limitations on the production of many others.

The ability of merchants to maintain inventories as large and varied as they have carried has been described in retail quarters as "a tribute to the resourcefulness of retail management and to the genius of American production." This statement is accepted as generally true despite such inconveniences as the more recent cigaret famine.

Combined sales of all retail stores this year are expected by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce to reach 67 billion dollars, highest on record. This volume is 20 per cent above 1941 and 60 per cent above 1939.

On the basis of quantities, not dollars, the comparisons are different. It is estimated that perhaps as much as 70 per cent of the entire dollar increase from 1939 thru 1944 is accounted for by higher prices. In quantity of merchandise handled, the bureau estimates, the retail sales peak was in 1941. The 1944 retail distribution of actual goods is put about 5 per cent below 1941, but about 15 per cent above 1939.

Quality of some goods is not up to pre-war standards. The deterioration modifies the quantity comparisons. It leaves unchanged the general fact of high war time consumption. Consumers would have bought still more if the wanted items had been available. Sales of durable goods stores are estimated by the bureau at 14 per cent of total retail volume in 1944, compared with 25 per cent in 1939.

The bureau's statistical calculations indicate that retail purchases have failed by a wide margin to keep pace with the war time expansion in incomes. For the three years, 1942 thru 1944, there is a 45 billion dollar discrepancy between actual sales of durable goods and what might ordinarily have been expected on the basis of consumer incomes. The unspent money has become part of the nation's war time savings.

It is not expected that the savings will necessarily prove an accurate measure of the pent-up demand for automobiles, homes, and other durable acquisitions. The freedom with which savings are spent will depend on post-war employment and incomes.

With U. S. 1st Army in Germany.

"MAJOR, the American soldier has a lot of sense. He's an individualist. In nearly 38 years of active service I've never seen a soldier fail if given the proper leadership and proper instruction."

The speaker was Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, commanding general of the United States 1st army, which spearheaded the invasion of the European mainland, which broke the German military back at St. Lo, which won the battle of France and swept on thru Belgium to pierce Hitler's Siegfried line.

Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges

The man General Hodges was talking to was a battalion commander; and the general was being critical. A platoon had failed to do what was expected of it. But General Hodges was not criticizing the platoon or the platoon leader. He was criticizing the battalion commander for not making his instructions crystal clear.

"How can you expect soldiers to do their job on that kind of instructions?" the general demanded.

The incident illustrates an outstanding facet of General Hodges' character. He is one of the strongest supporters of the army's junior officers and the soldiers they lead. He knows them and knows their needs. He was himself an enlisted man for three years before winning his commission, and he remembers those three years. He likes the system that finds officer material among the enlisted men.

That is what General Hodges believes in, and he has acted on this belief all thru the 1st army, never hesitating to relieve a commander who fails to measure up to the Hodges standard. Hodges' predecessor, Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, now commanding the 12th army group, holds the same belief.

When the army was being put together in the United Kingdom, getting ready for the invasion, one of Hodges' main tasks was to visit the various units, get acquainted with the commanders and the men under them, watch them work, study them, and make recommendations to Bradley for the changes that he thought would be useful. Many of the suggested changes were made before D-day, others after D-day, until the 1st army was shaken down into the fighting team it is today.

This ability to appraise men, to discover their strong points and their weak points, and thus to see that each man is fitted in where he belongs, or weeded out entirely if that is what is called for, is a characteristic of successful generals and is probably one of the chief reasons why Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, picked Hodges to command the 1st army under General Bradley.

Hodges is a firm believer in the army's long-established tactical doctrines; and all thru the Louisiana maneuvers he kept watch to see that these doctrines were strictly observed. They were firmly established by 1924 for such procedure as single envelopment, double envelopment, penetration, and employment of main effort. Since then, says Hodges, there have been no changes in our military principles, altho there has been, of course, improvement in equipment and development of such weapons as the tank

GARY SHEAHAN, Tribune artist-correspondent in the European theater, depicts on this page some of the action he saw following the invasion of France. Above is a view of Brest the morning after the city had been surrendered by the Germans. The great crane, partly wrecked by bombs and shells, overshadows the battered city and harbor. The evening before German prisoners had milled in the streets below the clock tower, awaiting transportation to prison camps.

Originally sketched during the shelling of the approaches to Brest, this picture shows the town of St. Marc, barely visible on crest of farthest hill. Defenses on the first hill in the distance had been almost knocked out. Our infantry is in hedgerows just beyond the telephone poles. The brownish puffs in the foreground are shell bursts from German guns.

Left: United States military police direct traffic at a street intersection in St. Lo. Bulldozers have opened a lane thru the rubble of shops and homes that formerly lined these streets.

Men of United States army engineer corps, port construction and repair group, build a temporary bridge across a river in a town in Brittany. About 60 highly skilled men work on a two-shift schedule. They include Tech. Sgt. Otis Kelly of Carrier Mills, Ill., and T/4 Vaughn O. Daines, La Crosse, Wis.

Ziegfeld Started 'Em!

Hollywood.

EVERY producer of musicals in Hollywood is trying to equal Flo Ziegfeld's record, for no one person ever discovered more beautiful girls than did Flo.

Lilyan Tashman

Flo picked 'em for his Broadway shows, but sooner or later—it was usually sooner—the studios signed 'em up on contracts and made 'em screen stars. Strangely, too, many of those luscious blonde, brunette, and titian stunners ended their careers tragically. Some moths found the flame too hot.

Irene Dunne evaded the "Ziegfeld curse" of heartbreak. She's one of the successful girls who started with Flo. This last season she has appeared in a pair of screen hits. Irene recently completed another romantic comedy with Charles Boyer called "Together Again." Another Charles—Vidor—directed, which Irene considered a good omen, since Vidor made "Cover Girl" and "A Song to Remember." Irene will shortly commence another comedy at Columbia—"Over 21," based on Ruth Gordon's stage hit.

Irene played Magnolia in "Show Boat" for Flo. She has many anecdotes about the way he worked. All his girls were required to shampoo their hair daily. The filmy, fabulously expensive undernothings which they wore were replaced at each performance. Stage costumes were immaculate and cleaned on schedule. That sheen which Flo's girls had on the stage was genuine.

Irene Dunne, incidentally, is as lucky in private life as she is professionally. She married Dr. Francis Griffin in 1927; they have one adopted daughter, Mary Frances, and they're all very happy, thank you.

Paulette Goddard is another who started as a Ziegfeld girl. Paulette was in "Rio Rita." She came here as a blonde showgirl to appear in the line of some of the early Eddie Cantor musical films. Paulette was ambitious—still is. She married Charlie Chaplin, appeared as his leading lady in "Modern Times" and "The Great Dictator," and prospered even more after she left his board and pictures.

Paulette is currently under contract to Paramount at $5,000 weekly, has a large fan following, and is married to Actor Burgess Meredith.

Virginia Bruce still appears in pictures. Virginia is wealthy in her own right, but her life has had many tragic moments. Her marriage with John Gilbert ended on the rocks. They had one child. Her happy marriage to Director J. Walter Ruben ended in despair when he died suddenly. They had a child, too.

Billie Dove had a long and fortunate picture career following her "Follies" days, which lasted right up thru the early talkies. Now even more beautiful, Billie has retired and is married to wealthy Bob Kenaston.

Fannie Brice, currently making one of her rare appearances before the movie cameras in "Ziegfeld Follies," is a big radio name thru her Baby Snooks character. Fannie was never a beauty, but she soared to fame as a comedy star and introduced such unforgettable songs as "Rose of Washington Square," "My Man," and "Second Hand Rose." Altho Fannie's career has been perennial, her private life hasn't been all orchids and ermine. She broke her heart over the man she married, Nicky Arnstein, when he went to jail. She was once Mrs. Billy Rose, but that didn't work either.

Pretty, dainty Marilyn Miller starred in "Sally" and "Sunny" on the stage before she repeated those successes for the cameras. Marilyn married Jack Pickford, and the ceremony caused a breach with Flo. The marriage didn't last long, ended in divorce. Marilyn was still a star when she died, but her death came years too soon.

Ina Claire is best known as a stage star of drawing room comedy, but Ina was a Ziegfeld lass way back in "Follies of 1916." Ina's off-stage-and-screen life has been tempestuous, and several of her marriages have ended in divorces.

The most publicized was to John Gilbert. Now Ina is happily wed to a San Francisco lawyer.

Eva Tanguay goes back to the "Follies of 1909." The "I Don't Care" girl made one picture called "The Wild Girl" and starred in

PAULETTE GODDARD
(inset, as a blonde Ziegfeld girl).

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

vaudeville for years. Now for a long time Eva has been bedridden with arthritis, and her friends of the theater have seen that she has medical care and comfort.

Billie Burke, who was not only Flo's wife but the star of one of his musicals (strangely, a flop) called "Annie Dear," still plays dizzy matrons in films, also on the air. Billie's stage career goes back to Charles Frohman. She was an ingenue star in some early Paramount pictures. How many of you recall her in a serial, "Gloria's Romance"?

Lupe Velez, who made so many "Mexican Spitfire" pictures, was in "Hotcha." The vehement Velez was married to "Tarzan"

Irene Dunne

Johnny Weissmuller and divorced after a tempestuous period of marital strife. Lupe doesn't do many pictures any more. She hasn't remarried, but is well fixed financially.

Peggy Fears (Mrs. A. C. Blumenthal) still sings in night clubs. A few years ago she made some musicals for the old Fox company. Peggy and Blumy are news, via fights and lawsuits, and rumor has it she'll soon go to Reno to divorce her spouse, who now lives in Mexico City exclusively.

Marion Davies, one of Flo's loveliest girls, had a long screen career. She'd still be on the screen if she'd been allowed to do comedy.

Ruby Keeler, star of Flo's "Show Girl," which was based on J. P. McEvoy's book with George Gershwin music, had quite a movie career in such films as "42d Street." Ruby married Al Jolson. Since their divorce Ruby has married again, happily this time.

Gypsy Rose Lee was a chorine with Flo, then became a celebrated strip-teaseuse for Minsky. Gypsy made movies under her professional name as well as that of Louise Hovic. She married and divorced Alexander Kirkland, and is now waiting to have their baby. She's done very well as a writer—better, I believe, than as an actress.

Marion Davies

Ann Pennington, the "Pretty Penny" of the dimpled knees, was the girl who introduced the "black bottom." Ann was an ingenue star for Paramount in the early days, then in talkies in "Gold Diggers." Financially Ann has had ups and downs. Last year she played in a touring light opera for Shubert.

Mae Murray, the original "Neil Brinkley girl," was a great favorite. Her biggest hit was in "The Merry Widow" with John Gilbert. Mae ran thru several husbands and fortunes. One was Prince David Mdivani. Mae's last appearance was in Billy Rose's "Diamond Horseshoe Revue."

She's been in headlines because of her financial difficulties and a suit to retain custody of her son, Koran.

Gilda Gray, the shimmy queen, first gained fame with Flo, then in "Aloma of the South Seas" and "The Devil Dancer." After Gilda divorced Gil Boag her career seemed to slip.

Helen Morgan, Jacqueline Logan, Nita Naldi, Peggy Shannon, Kay Laurel, Lilyan Tashman, Dorothy Mackaill, Martha Mansfield, and Lillian Lorraine all were "Follies" graduates whose lives were tied up in eventual disappointment and defeat. They made their mark first with Flo, later in the movies, but lived unwisely and too well for eventual safety.

It seems sad that so many beautiful girls who had so much of this world's goods ended by really having so little happiness.

On the whole our screen stars may not have had such great beauty, but they fared better both with fame and that old security ally, their bank accounts.

and the airplane. The principles which have stood this test of time are the ones Hodges helped to teach the younger officers while he served (1920-'24) as instructor at West Point.

In that period Gen. Douglas MacArthur was superintendent at the West Point academy; and MacArthur felt that tactics ought to be taught largely by men who had seen action as battalion and regimental commanders in France during the first World war. Hodges was one of these, having been a battalion commander with the 6th infantry during the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives.

The teaching staff at West Point in that post-World war period was rich in men who now have important commands. The list includes Lt. Gen. Simon B. Buckner Jr., Maj. Gen. Charles H. Bonesteel, Maj. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, Lt. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Maj. Gen. Oscar W. Griswold, Brig. Gen. Ernest J. Dawley, Maj. Gen. Vernon E. Prichard, Maj. Gen. Douglass T. Greene, and Maj. Gen. Charles W. Ryder.

While Hodges has taught at West Point, he is not one of the academy's graduates. He was appointed there in 1904, when he was a freshman at North Georgia college.

"I was only 17 years old," he said, "and found that North Georgia college taught a different brand of mathematics from that required at the academy. So I didn't go back after the first year."

Instead he enlisted as a private, worked up to buck sergeant, and after three years of soldier life won his commission as second lieutenant in a competitive examination, November, 1909.

General Hodges believes that the greatest men produced by the United States in his lifetime have been Gen. John J. Pershing, leader of the A. E. F. in the first World war, and Gen. George C. Marshall, present chief of staff. These two have had a profound influence on Hodges.

When Pershing's punitive expedition went into Mexico in 1916 Hodges was with him, in charge of a detachment of mounted scouts. He followed Black Jack across the ocean to fight in France, where he won the distinguished service cross in the Meuse-Argonne action, serving as a battalion commander.

Hodges served with Marshall in the Philippines, and it was Marshall who gave him his first important command, running the infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga. Marshall also gave Hodges the position of chief of infantry, a post which was abolished at the time of the reorganization of the war department in March, 1942. At that time Hodges became head of the army's replacement and school command.

His responsibilities included the expansion of the infantry school, establishment of officer candidate schools, training of selectees; and the organization of our air-borne forces was one of the most important accomplishments of this period.

Hodges strongly dislikes politics and politicians. He thinks General Marshall is the army's indispensable man.

Hodges is fond of describing himself and Lt. Gen. George S. Patton Jr., head of the 3d army, as "the oldest of the new school," the school of General Eisenhower and General Bradley. And Hodges and Bradley make a team, having known each other for many years. When the two are seen together there is a physical contrast, for Bradley is over 6 feet tall and Hodges 5 feet 9. Bradley likes to describe his plans to Hodges and get his reaction. Once Bradley told Hodges he planned to make William B. Kean his chief of staff.

"The best man possible," said Hodges. And Major General Kean is still Bradley's chief of staff. Hodges once said, "A general makes his staff, and then the staff makes the general."

Here is an anecdote which illuminates the Hodges character: Late in June, when he was deputy commander to General Bradley, he drove into Caumont, accompanied by his senior aide, Maj. William Sylvan. Caumont was then the Americans' point of deepest penetration into France, and it was held by the 26th infantry regiment of the 1st division. The place was not what you would call quiet, and the first thing Hodges noticed was that a military policeman was standing in a doorway instead of the middle of the street.

HODGES OF THE FIRST

Lt. Gen. Omar Bradley decorates Lieutenant General Hodges.

The reason why the soldier was taking cover became soon apparent. German shells were dropping in. As Hodges and Sylvan, after inquiring their way to a forward battalion's command post, walked up a street, they frequently found it advisable to duck from the sidewalk as the shells came over.

When they reached the command post, however, they sat down and talked with the regimental and battalion commander for an hour—a somewhat longer time than would have been strictly necessary.

"Why so long?" Sylvan inquired. And Hodges laughed.

"I was just remembering," he said, "the time when I was a battalion commander in the last war and brass would come up to visit the front. I always hoped things would get hot so I could see how the brass would take it. Well, I know these young officers today got a kick out of watching me while the German shells were coming in. So I decided to stay longer than usual."

It is a good thing for young officers to have a healthy respect for the "old man's" nerves. Sylvan says he never knew a man calmer under fire than Hodges.

Hodges has a temper, but he does not lose it. When he gets mad his anger is directed not against a man but against a situation. His staff never has seen him betray excitement over a big problem, but he may be irritated by little ones, such as finding a military policeman who doesn't know the directions to all points in his outfit. That is not, probably, the fault of the military policeman, whose information is limited to what his instructors have given him. It is the situation that annoys Hodges.

"Corps headquarters," he will say, "is a place of business, and should be conducted that way. I haven't time to spend 20 minutes running around trying to find the way to a commanding general's tent."

General Hodges is primarily an infantryman, but in a war such as this one a general must not be narrow. It is healthy for an infantryman to know all about artil-

DR. CARLSON'S A GREAT FINDER OUTER

By DELOS AVERY

EVERY baby begins as a student of physiology. He investigates the mysterious mechanism of his toes, his fingers, his ears, his vocal apparatus Presently, in most cases, he yawns and turns to other subjects.

At the University of Chicago a man who was an inquiring baby almost 70 years ago is still seeking the answer. He is Dr. Anton Julius Carlson, emeritus professor of physiology and president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He is one of the world's greatest living finder-outers.

Hunger is one of the Carlson specialties. What hunger is? Where it begins? How it acts on the human stomach? How hunger is distinguished from appetite?

Stomach hunger is one thing, brain hunger another. Carlson knows both. He has deliberately and experimentally starved his own stomach for many days at a time, and found the experience not only harmless to his health but beneficial, "as good as a month's vacation." He recommends it to the average healthy adult.

But hunger of the brain, the hunger that feeds on hard-won truth, the fussy hunger of the scientist who forages for facts, facts, and more facts, each separate one of them verified, certified, and ticketed as pure, that kind of hunger is not to be denied its nourishment by men of the Carlson stamp. Stomachs may fast, not brains. He is up and out at 4 o'clock in the morning, on the hunt for a breakfast of facts.

Carlson at 69 (he'll be 70 on Jan. 29, 1945) is tough-bodied, tough-minded, and probably the hardest worker on the campus, altho by university rules he was supposed to become "inactive" and "in retirement" four years ago. In fact he has violated the orthodox idea of a "working lifetime" at both ends, for his wage earning days began at the age of 7. It does not seem to have harmed him.

He was born on a farm in Sweden in 1875 and he got his first job when he was hired out to a neighboring farmer as a shepherd boy, an experience thru which he learned, as one biographer says, "his first lessons in biology."

Desiring to learn more, and having heard of the opportunities that America offered to lads who had the stamina to make the most of them, he followed his brother Gust to Chicago in 1891. Age: 16.

"When I landed," Carlson told this writer recently, "I knew just three words of English. One was 'yes,' one was 'no,' and you can't print the other."

But he told us what it was, and we said sharply:

"That makes six."

For it was not a word but an epithet made of four words. He was right about not printing it. Scribners could print it. Harpers could. Many of the slick paper magazines do. And writers like Ernest Hemingway would be inarticulate without it. But this is the Graphic. And anyway the phrase, while emotionally expressive, was based on a scientifically unsound assumption concerning the parentage of persons you don't like. Knowing physiology as he now does, Dr. Carlson would be prompt to repudiate the whole idea as worse than sciolism.

So he had a vocabulary of six words, and only two of them "yes" and "no," were useful. Especially the "no." For "no" is what the scientist must always be saying when he is asked to accept the unproved, which is practically all the time. "No" is the scholar's shield against error; "yes" is the word he must tenderly preserve for the too infrequent hours of his triumph.

"What is the method of science?" Carlson once said in a lecture. "In essence it is this—the rejection in toto of all nonobservational and nonexperimental authority in the field of experience."

That is why he never became a clergyman. He once intended to, but changed his course when he found it was leading into a region of the "nonobservational and nonexperimental."

"A scientist must always ask for the evidence," he said, and described himself as "a man without belief." Others may be content with opinion or find a feeling of security in faith. But a scientist, Carlson holds, must keep his feet on the ground, must be content with small progress, proving as he goes.

In one way his early days in America were like those of Thoreau, who used manual drudgery to escape from manual drudgery. He worked for a year as a carpenter and saved his wages so that he could cease being a carpenter and give full time to the wooing of that bleak and austere mistress, Truth.

So he was 17 years old when, with the wages of carpentry jingling in his pockets, he entered Augustana college, Rock Island. That was in 1892. He took his B. S. degree in 1898 and his M. S.

Dr. Carlson numbers every rat used in his experiments.

one year later. In 1903 he won his Ph. D. in biology at Stanford. He returned to the University of Chicago in 1904 and has been there ever since, a matter of 40 years, save for an interruption in World War I. (ending as a lieutenant colonel) and in Herbert Hoover's food rehabilitation group. Even these interruptions were in reality a continuation of his normal work, for most of the problems he tackled were related directly to physiology in one phase or another.

On the campus his students, who feared him and loved him—and occasionally tried to hate him for making them come to lectures at 7 o'clock in the morning—gave him the name of Ajax. Some said this name was a buildup based on the initials A. J. But two of Carlson's colleagues, Prof. R. W. Gerard and Prof. A. C. Ivy, jointly signed a magazine article saying:

"We know better. The name had to come, for was not Ajax the only heroic figure from the past who never called on God for aid, but always fought his own way out of trouble?"

Sometimes in his defense of truth against the sneak attacks of error Ajax Carlson has shown the quick wit of a cross-examining lawyer or a shrewd detective. There was the time—mentioned by Gerard and Ivy—when a "mental telepathy" enthusiast told him:

"One night when I was in Kansas I received a telepathic message that my mother needed me in New York. I looked at my watch. It was exactly 9 o'clock. Later I learned that on that very night at exactly 9 my mother had fallen downstairs. Now what do you think of that?"

"Well," said Carlson, "my first thought is of the one hour difference between Eastern and Standard time."

Early in this century, just before starting work for the University of Chicago, Carlson was pursuing his investigations at the Woods Hole (Mass.) marine laboratories, where scientists were arguing about the origin of the heart's beat, whether it started in the heart muscles or in the nerves. Carlson, weary of guesswork, experimented with the horseshoe crab. He proved that the beat began in the nerves. But he did not present a verdict going beyond the evidence.

"It begins in the nerves," he said, "in the horseshoe crab."

For the brilliancy and thoroness of his proof, plus his scrupulous abstention from overstating the proof, he won the respect and admiration of all biologists. The incident led to his call to Chicago.

Here the special kind of happiness that men of science need was waiting for him, the happiness of opportunity—opportunity to be both student and teacher at the same time, to work with adequate equipment, to try an idea in the test tube of his colleagues' collective intelligence.

DR. ANTON JULIUS CARLSON

In addition he was favored presently with a stroke of luck. The word "luck" is his own, for this special occasion only, since no true scientist would hitch reliance to such a variable. But—

"Luck came to me," says Carlson, "in the person of 'Mr. V,' as the students came to call him. His full name was Fred Vlcek."

The value of "Mr. V," from the point of view of science, lay in the fact that he had a hole in his stomach, a "window" opening directly from the external abdominal wall into Mr. V's midregion, a window thru which the lens of science could look and learn.

Carlson had long known of another famous case of the stomach window, dating back a century. That was a Canadian trapper named Alexis St. Martin, whose usefulness to science was caused by a bullet wound which failed to heal, so that he had to plug the hole when he wished to eat and digest a dinner. Between meals the plug was removed so that his physician, Dr. William Beaumont, could study his insides. Beaumont discovered the gastric juices and the hydrochloric acid of the stomach that way, earning fame for himself, and a place in the encyclopedia.

But there were a number of secrets that Beaumont did not uncover, and so Carlson had often wished that he might have an opportunity like Beaumont's.

When it came to him it was even better. For Mr. V had not only a stomach window but a closed esophagus, the result of a boyhood accident, the swallowing of a caustic solution. With the esophagus closed, the prospect would have been death by starvation had not surgery come to the rescue by cutting the "window" thru which food could be received and thru which science, fortunately could observe.

Mr. V was an adult when he was brought to Carlson, who proposed a mutually advantageous arrangement. He was to live at the university, to receive wages for light work, to be cared for, to be kept in comfort, and, in return, permit himself to be studied. The university trustees after some hesitation approved the bargain and Mr. V was a familiar figure about the laboratory of the physiology department for 13 years, until he died of cancer.

The subject that Carlson was investigating especially at that time was hunger. Mr. V was ideal for the purpose because the blocked

"I'M AN anti-tank gunner taking my training in Texas, a long way from home. Since I left last August I have had only one letter from my girl. We were going steady when I left and everything was strictly on the ball. She said she would wait and be true, but she hasn't. Several of the gang from school have written to me, and from what they say I'm a closed chapter in her life.

"To my knowledge I haven't done anything wrong—she just didn't want to tend to her knittin' like a good little kitten. She is now all wrapped up in some civilian Joe.

"I'm not the only fellow in my company who has gotten the same kind of deal. None of us mind leaving our homes and friends at the tender age of 18 for the service, but we don't like to be tossed over while we're away without even an explanation."

"If you like the girl and enjoy being with her, courtesy and consideration will come naturally."

Some gals have queer ideas about loyalty, good sportsmanship, and the right and wrong of holding hands with strange Joes while their ever-lovin' boys are away in service. In most cases this breach of friendship isn't totally the girl's fault. Sometimes they are disloyal simply because they are lonely, and sometimes they honestly don't have that glow any more and can think of no better way out.

In an occasional case the girl may be working on the theory that a boy in the hand is worth two in the service and was only marking time anyway. More often a girl has just never experienced separation before and may be almost as surprised as the fellow involved when she turns out to be an off-the-cob character in regard to keeping her promises.

But if a girl does give her boy in service the brush-off it is probably better to have things straightened out now.

"I'm 17 and a senior in high school. During my first three years in high school I never dated girls, because I don't know how to dance, and I have never been exposed to dating ethics. However, I did know a lot of girls whom I considered good friends. I only recently realized what it means to a fellow to have a girl.

"A good friend of mine has asked me on many occasions to go on a double date with him, but I refused because I wasn't up on the times—that is, I didn't know what to do on a date. This year I met a girl at school whom I like very much, and I'm reasonably sure that she likes me. I have walked home with her after school but have never asked her for a date. I should like to, but am not quite sure how to go about it."

You have known the girl since the beginning of school, you've walked home with her many times, you're sure she likes you, and still you haven't asked her for a date—how long can a girl go on dreaming? Don't let another Friday night go by.

For a first evening you might arrange to double-date with your boy friend and his honey chile, as he suggested. Just say to your girl: "Joe and I are going to a movie on Friday night. I'd like to have you come with us." No need to be formal.

There are no black and white "dating ethics" to worry about. If you like the girl and enjoy being with her, courtesy and consideration will come naturally. You'll be surprised at the fun you can have!

"For the past eight months I have been going steady, and for the last three months of that time the boy has kissed me good night when he took me home. Then about a month ago he took me to a dance, we had a coke together afterward, and then he walked home with me. The next day at school he stopped speaking to me, and that week-end he went to a movie with another girl, a very good friend of mine.

"Now he takes her out frequently and the only time he ever speaks to me or acts as if he knows me is when he sees me at my job after school. I have tried to stay friendly toward him and have not changed my attitude toward my girl friend, but cannot find out what happened."

And probably you never will know just what happened. Fellows can be unpredictable. This boy may have contemplated moving out of the steady twosome group for some time, or maybe the idea just struck him on that last evening. He may have decided that he was too young for the ever-lovin' department, or he may have decided, as boys frequently do, that it was just time for a change.

If you are a smart character you will continue to do just as you are doing—be friendly to your ex-joy boy and don't ask your girl friend any questions. Some day he may come 'round your way again.

"I am a junior in high school and have about one date a week; sometimes I don't have any. Last year about this time I seemed to be much more popular and usually had two dates a week at least. The man power shortage is not too desperate for my age group, and I cannot understand why I am not dating as much as I used to. I get along very well with both fellows and girls (as far as I can judge).

"About three weeks ago I had a date with a boy who used to go steady with one of my girl friends. I had a lot of fun with him, and he asked me out for the following Saturday night. During the week I decided to ask him if he would like to go to a dance the night of our date, and he accepted. I bought the bid, because the dance was a turnabout.

"After that evening Bob promised me he would call me during the week. I waited, but he never called. I was heartbroken, but there was nothing I could do about it. There is a big dance coming up—do you think I would be foolish to ask Bob if he called me before that time?"

Don't rush the boy. If he does call again (and he probably will—maybe young Joe doesn't go out every week!), if he does ask you for a date, and if you both have fun, then you might suggest the big dance. But don't overdo the business of meeting him half way—give him a chance to make a few plans himself.

A tip-off on something extra they're showing now.

Dress parade model in soot black velveteen has for decorative swank the all-over scarlet braid pattern. This braid in effective motifs decorates the sweetheart neckline and the lower hip line of the gathered full skirt. It is from a Chicago shop dedicated to youthful clothes with a decorative lift to the contrast trim.

THE COOTIE CAPTURES ECHOES OF HARLEM

Cootie Williams . . . the kid from Alabama.

HIS folks named him Charles Melvin Williams, but jazz fans know him as Cootie. He's an Alabama boy, from down Mobile way; he's 36, and a hot angel on that trumpet. You've heard him with Goodman and Hampton and the Duke—maybe you remember him with Henderson and the late Chick Webb. Cootie is waxing for HIT records now with his own sextet, and they've given him an album, titled after his own "Echoes of Harlem."

The name disk is like a slow summer evening north of Central park. Highly reminiscent of "Summertime," it seems to talk of things close to the Harlemite's heart. Cootie's trumpet expostulates now and then with its clear silver tones, and a vocal antiphonal heightens the conversational effect. It is backed by another slow, slightly sadder number, "My Old Flame." The other six sides illustrate Cootie's penchant for letting good side men take their turn. "Floogie Boo," for example, is fast and neat, with some superb piano work by E. Powell and elegant sax from E. Vincon, alto, and E. Davis, tenor. "I Don't Know" is a slow but sure exploration of variations on the melodic line; "Do Some War Work, Baby" is notable chiefly for Cootie's gravelly vocal; "Talk a Little Trash" has some beautifully sharp ensemble work, and Cootie's trumpet growls and glows in turn. "Honeysuckle Rose" is a fast turn, with Powell's piano appearing to advantage; "Sweet Loraine" duplicates it in a slow mood.

Apologies to Gene Krupa for that type which made him "Jam" two weeks ago. And a hing ains laurel to Peggy Lou Griggs for the best letter of the week.—W. D.

In case you missed them: Will Bradley's COLUMBIA pressing of "Request for a Rumba" is a rhythm delight, paced by Ray McKinley's drumming, which remains just discreetly enough in the background. It has a cumulative effect, broken adroitly by sax and trumpet interludes. It is backed by "Fry Me Cookie with a Can of Lard," which is just about what you'd expect. McKinley vocals it.

VICTOR gives Glen Miller fans a soft and easy "Helpless" that is very good Miller. The B side has the Modernaires and Marion Hutton vocalizing "When Johnny Comes Marching Home."

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Mae: Do you think you could devote a column about Roddy McDowall so that the public would know more about him? I know your space is limited, but I know your fans would appreciate it. There is no one else in the whole of Hollywood who could take the parts he has taken, he is such a natural. And please don't forget to print his picture. CLAUDIA CHRISTON.

Roddy McDowall

Dear Claudia: You're right about the space, but here are a few facts and a picture to make you happy. Roddy was born in London, England, on Sept. 17, 1929; weighs 80 pounds, stands 4 feet 9 inches, and has brown eyes and hair. If you'd ever met Roddy you'd find that those big brown eyes are as sparkling as his personality. Roddy came to America with his mother, father, and sister at the beginning of the war. Mrs. McDowall, knowing the talent Roddy possessed, especially after his successes in London, toured the studios until she landed her favorite son a part. Stamp collecting is Roddy's hobby.

Dear Miss Tinée: With regard to the song sung by Grace Moore in the balcony scene in "One Night of Love," this was the aria "Sempre Libera" from "La Traviata." The "Ciribiribin" song was sung in the cafe. I've never heard Miss Moore sing the "Italian Street Song," and I'm sure it was never in that movie. This is just for the record. E. F.

Dear E. F.: Thanks for the correction. Well, at least I had the song right, if not the scene. Vera and Phyllis, the girls who asked the questions, should be entirely clear on the subject now.

Dear Miss Tinée: Have just had the pleasure of speaking to Allan Jones of the movies. While passing thru the arcade of the Palmer House I had the audacity to speak to him. I was treated to a very cold, snobbish acknowledgment of the salutation. Could it be because I am fat and 40 and there was not a camera man or publicity man in sight? Up to the present moment I have been one of his ardent admirers and often wondered why he did not become more of a star. I had the privilege of seeing a sample of his attitude toward the general public. M. G.

Dear M. G.: Could be that Mr. Jones was unhappy, in a hurry, or had any number of things on his mind and just wasn't attentive. Why don't you give him another chance?

Dear Miss Tinée: After reading your review of "Going My Way" I definitely decided I like you. You're swell, tops, or any other adjective that can describe an admirer of that only indispensable man—Bing Crosby.

Dixie Lee Crosby

Would it be asking too much for you to print a picture of Dixie Crosby? I have long yearned for a glimpse of the lovely wife of my favorite actor. Come on, Mae, don't let me down after all those nice things I said about you. Give me a squint at that print.

ONE OF 130,000,000 CROSBY FANS.

Dear Fans: After all those big words how could any one resist a little request like that? Here is the photo of Dixie Lee Crosby with a big smile just for you.

Christmas Ava

AVA GARDNER complains that she's never had a birthday present because she was born on Dec. 24, 1923. It's always been Christmas presents since.

But Ava has had some very fine presents that didn't come at Christmas time. For instance, one day while she was modeling for a New York photographer he urged her to try for the movies. She laughed. She laughed again several days later when some one on the phone said he wanted her to come down to the M-G-M offices for an interview. She thought it was a gag and hung up. But the man persisted, and Ava eventually got a contract.

Two days after she had reached Hollywood she met Mickey Rooney. He helped her with her first screen role in "We Were Dancing," and in January of 1942 they were married. The tall Ava and the short Mickey were divorced in 1943.

Ava was born in Smithfield, N. C. She attended Atlantic Christian college in Wilson, N. C. She's 5 feet 5½ inches tall, weighs 113. She appeared recently in "Maisie Goes to Reno."

"SHOP EARLY" Is a Beauty Hint

The woman who does her shopping early can look forward to an unworried, uncluttered holiday.

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

THERE'LL ALWAYS be a Christmas—maybe not always a white Christmas, but a season in which the spirit of giving is signified by gifts which bring happiness.

This year particularly should the spirit of altruism abound, for our privilege in being able to share and to give. But there must be sanity in gift making.

There will be countless service husbands, fathers, sons, and beaux home for a holiday respite. What will these service men crave more than attractiveness in contrast to the sordidness of war? Personal loveliness in their women is the answer. Yes, the home-coming boys will welcome greetings from pretty, smiling women whose persons reflect well groomed serenity.

So get yourself prepared for an unworried, uncluttered holiday with your man. Get your shopping done early; plan that holiday time so that you're not caught short on calm, poise, serenity. Don't leave your personal grooming jobs till the eve of his arrival. Have that all planned out well ahead. It's little enough to do for him, you know.

It is said that so strong is the service man's urge for beauty that many a boy who in other times would have practical gifts in mind will be buying his loved one gifts that will prettify. And by the same token, women and girls, with their men always in their thoughts, will gravitate, too, toward the gift items which will make wives, mothers, sisters, aunts, and even grandmothers lovelier while and after the boys are home.

For a bride's Christmas almost the whole range of toiletries may be included—that lovely big bottle of perfume she craves, a special makeup ensemble, a manicure set, luscious bath preparations, exquisite sachets, big bars of bath soap, and little guest cakes in favorite odors.

For a best girl's Christmas: Perfume—always the favorite gift. If she's the casual outdoors type, tweedy or fresh floral odors. A bottle of cologne, big box of dusting powder, bath salts are heart winners, too.

For a mother's Christmas: Treatment preparations most welcome, as a large jar of special face or throat cream, an astringent, any kit that provides skin reviving treatments. Hand lotions, too. A box of fine face powder she'd probably never buy herself, a soft colored lipstick, bottle of scent, or a permanent.

For a sister's Christmas: Sets of small lipsticks in various shades will intrigue her, as will several colors of nail polish for experimentation, her own manicure set, bath or makeup ensemble, packaged so box can be used in dresser table drawer.

For a grandmother's Christmas: Sachets first on the list, with lilac, lavender, or rose geranium odors. Colognes, too, and smelling salts are welcome.

He's a Great Finder Outer

esophagus made it possible to study hunger as distinguished from appetite. Appetite may be stimulated by the sight of tempting food, by the smell of it, or even by the memory of it. But does a blocked off stomach see or smell or remember?

Carlson found that the answer was: No. The stomach, he found, is an independent organ, uncontroled by the brain or the central nervous system. When the stomach is empty it contracts periodically.

So many truths were learned thru the "window" of Mr. V that Carlson was enabled to write his most important book, "The Control of Hunger in Health and Disease." It is a classic of medical and physiological history and has been the starting point for the work of other scientists, who owe to it much of their knowledge of such problems as gastric ulcers, infant feeding, etc.

Nobody knows how many lives have been saved by these discoveries, how many invalids restored to health and usefulness.

Much as Carlson owes, however, to the "luck" that brought him his Mr. V, he has had other "guinea pigs," volunteers, including himself. He measured the contractions of his own stomach by swallowing a balloon with a tube attached. He inflated the balloon to fool his stomach into the idea that it had something to eat, and he measured the contractions by attaching the tube to a recording machine.

He starved himself for various periods, short and long, studied the effect of the deprivation. His students lent themselves to similar investigations, providing a basis for comparison in more than one age group. Experimental animals were also used, and the knowledge gained from them has been a permanent enrichment of science.

Physiologists from all directions have come to Chicago to learn what they could not learn elsewhere. And Carlson's graduates have carried enlightenment everywhere. They have to be sound or they don't graduate. Once he flunked more than half of a senior class for failing in a surprise examination.

There is a story, too, of a practical joke he once played on a laboratory group. He wished to test, he said, their accuracy of observation. So he placed on a table a beaker filled with a nauseous, ill-smelling solution. He dipped in a finger, put his finger to his tongue, and his facial expression betrayed no reaction.

"Now each of you will do exactly as I did," he directed.

They all obeyed. They all registered distress. And—

"Gentlemen, you failed to observe," said Carlson, "that the finger I placed in the solution was not the finger I placed in my mouth. Hereafter please observe more closely."

Dr. Carlson checks the weight of one of his white rats.

Carlson is a warrior, enlisted in the cause of science and scientists. For many years he has led the forces of defense against politicians who, caring more for human votes than for human welfare, start crusades against vivisection, a subject on which their ignorance, he holds, is not only abysmal but voluntary. These fights are always being won and always being revived.

There has been a tiff or two between Carlson and the university's president, Robert M. Hutchins, who seems less impressed than Carlson thinks he should be with the importance of scientific education.

"Three centuries ago Hutchins would have been a monk in a monastery," Carlson says. And there is an anecdote concerning a faculty meeting at which Hutchins, being accused of not giving some of the teachers a proper security in their jobs, defended his course by saying "it keeps them on their toes."

"On their knees, you mean," retorted Carlson.

Sometimes, summer or winter, Carlson gives himself a semi-holiday by withdrawing to a log cabin in the Michigan woods. He and his two sons (he also has daughter) made the cabin by felling forest trees and sawing and hewing the logs. It is near a lake, on which he sails his sloop, named after Noah. And he likes to bathe there, winter and summer—cutting a hole in the ice when necessary.

Carlson does not like the New Deal nor any other system of regimentation or dictatorship. "I am an incurable democrat," he says, "in the original Greek sense of the word. I don't like dictators, particularly in the country I live in."

He has called Franklin D. Roosevelt a "slippery liberal" and a "menace" to the kind of democracy he (Carlson) approves. He says Roosevelt "appeals mainly to emotion and conducts campaigns on a basis of hate instead of reason."

And if a Roosevelt apologist protests the epithet "dictator" Carlson retorts:

"No dictator calls himself one."

In 1940, before Pearl Harbor, Carlson defined his personal attitude toward the problems which then were boiling in the public mind.

"I am not a pacifist," he said. "But in the long range policy of any country, or the human race, somehow, somewhere, the policy of peace and coöperation has got to replace the machinery of war. A scientist cannot be an isolationist. I am not. But the intervention I am interested in, and the intervention that will utimately have to be used, is not guns and bombs but the greater understanding and cooperation, and somehow the working out of an emerging justice . . . The trouble is not with the people but with their leaders. . . . Internationally the democratic way of life would seem to embody the principle of Lincoln, 'malice toward none, charity for all.' . . ."

He measures a solution for one of his experiments.

Often he applies his special knowledge to current problems, such, for instance, as rationing. When that was started in America he charged that as a nation we were wasting a third of our food, "some in the kitchen, some at the table." He said we ought to "become "omnivorous—eat everything that is edible." We should deliberately cultivate the practice, he said, of eating things we find distasteful. And he renewed his recommendation, first made many years earlier, for an occasional period of going without food entirely.

Going without food is one thing, however, in his philosophy, while going without work is quite another; and he is strongly opposed to the principle of retirement from active life and active employment at a prescribed age, whether that age be 65 or any other.

"We are not," he says, "worth 100 per cent today and worth zero tomorrow on our 65th or 70th birthday." He holds that the growth of efficiency and inefficiency are not matters of specified date but are gradual, over periods of years. The fact that he became a wage earner at the age of 7 and is still working hard as he approaches 70 seems to him natural and right, at least in his case. Instead of forced retirement because of age he favors a well considered change of work. He would have the old work less than the young, according to their strength, but would not have them stop short.

"Kismet"

1 On one of his nightly rounds Hajj (Ronald Colman), a beggar magician of Bagdad, meets a Young Man in tatters (James Craig). Hajj tells him he has a rendezvous with a beautiful lady. The Young Man says he, too, has one.

2 The Young Man's rendezvous is with Hajj's beautiful daughter, Marsinah (Joy Ann Page). Her father has boasted she'll marry a prince, but she loves this lad she thinks is the son of the palace gardener.

3 Hajj's rendezvous is with a beautiful and mysterious lady, Jamilla (Marlene Dietrich).

4 By day Hajj is a beggar magician. But by night he poses as the prince of Hassir, ruler of a desolate and remote kingdom. His princely attire is stolen goods.

5 Hajj's thefts, however, finally catch up with him and he is arrested after his most recent depredation.

6 Mansur, the grand vizier (Edward Arnold), has ordered Hajj's hands cut off as punishment, but when Hajj offers to kill the young caliph, making Mansur the new caliph, Mansur agrees. Especially since Hajj has promised Mansur his daughter in marriage.

7 Mansur takes Hajj into his harem to see the dancing girls, and there is Jamilla, Mansur's No. 1 favorite!

8 Hajj is puzzled by Marsinah's unwillingness to marry the grand vizier. She prefers her "gardener's son." Then Hajj is haled again into court—this time by the young caliph.

9 Of course the caliph is really the "gardener's son." He asks for Marsinah's hand, makes Hajj the real prince of Hassir. So what can Hajj do but kill Mansur, unite his daughter and the caliph, and take Jamilla off to his remote new realm? (THE END)

Romantic Figures of American History

The illustration above, by Clare Fargo Thomas and Alexander Varnak, is another of the series appearing currently in this section with biographical sketches.

REGARDLESS of the fact that he was the commander of the Confederate forces in the Civil war and thus the principal enemy of the army of the United States, Robert E. Lee today is held in highest esteem not only in the south but in the north as well. His nobility of character, his skill as a military leader, and his numerous other exceptional qualities have made him a notable figure in the pages of history.

He was born at Stratford, Va., Jan. 19, 1807, a son of Henry Lee, famous in the Revolutionary war as Light Horse Harry. Being graduated with honors from West Point in 1829, he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the corps of engineers. Two years later he married Mary Custis, great-granddaughter of Martha Washington.

Serving with distinction in the Mexican war, he was chosen superintendent of West Point, later elevated to colonel, and still later placed in command of troops in the Comanche Indian territory. It was Lee who in 1859 headed the force that captured John Brown and his raiders at Harpers Ferry.

At the outbreak of the Civil war Lee was offered the command of the Federal field forces. He declined to accept, however, preferring to remain loyal to his own state. Altho he regarded slavery as an evil and already had freed his own slaves, he thought it wrong to try to eradicate slavery by force of arms. Furthermore, altho he believed in the advantages of the union of states, he felt that any state that desired to secede had a legitimate right to do so.

In the first months of the war he served as military adviser to Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy. When Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, ranking officer of the south, was wounded at the battle of Seven Pines, Lee succeeded to the command of the Army of Northern Virginia, the principal fighting force of the Confederate states. It was his generalship that forced the Union General McClellan to retreat and abandon his plan to take Richmond, capital of the Confederacy.

With the assistance of able subordinates, particularly Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson, Lee was able in many instances to outgeneral his Union opponents. It was the battle of Seven Days in which he saved Richmond from McClellan. On Aug. 29-30, 1862, he defeated General Pope at the second battle of Bull Run. Less than a month later he fought McClellan in the bloody action at Antietam and was able to withstand the piecemeal attacks launched against him at five different points at five different times. In December of 1862 he defeated the Union Army of the Potomac under General Burnside at Fredericksburg, and early in May, 1863, he won a great victory over the same Union army under General Hooker at Chancellorsville.

After this Lee determined to carry the war into the north. With his victorious army of three corps he advanced into Pennsylvania. At Gettysburg on July 1 to 3 he met defeat at the hands of General Meade. But Meade failed to follow up his advantage by pursuing and destroying Lee's army.

When in March, 1864, General Grant was placed in supreme command of the Union forces, Lee at last was confronted by an opponent of first rank. Grant, realizing that Lee's Army of Northern Virginia was the backbone of Confederate resistance, decided to go after it, hang on to it, and force it to fight whenever possible. Following this plan, the Union general struck Lee in the Wilderness and pushed on toward Richmond. At Spotsylvania Courthouse not long afterward another sanguinary engagement took place. Lee had to fight at North Anna on May 23 and at Cold Harbor on June 3. All the while, altho Lee fought gallantly, he was losing men he could ill afford to lose.

The siege of Petersburg dragged thru the winter of 1864 and into the spring of 1865, Grant constantly extending his lines and forcing Lee to do likewise. Early in April (1865) Lee abandoned the defense of Richmond in the hope of uniting with Johnston in North Carolina. Grant's masterly pursuit of the weakened Confederate army succeeded in running it down at Appomattox Courthouse, where Lee surrendered on April 9.

After the war Lee accepted the presidency of Washington college (later Washington and Lee university), where he spent his last years. He died Oct. 12, 1870.

MIXES MAKE IT EASY!

By MARY MEADE

PREPARED mixes on the cupboard shelf are insurance against being caught with company coming and "not a thing to eat in the house." They're great time savers, too, and a blessing for the woman who isn't experienced in baking.

Most mixes work like this: You add a cup of lukewarm water to the packaged mix, put it in the pan, and bake it. Couldn't be simpler! We won't see many of the cake mixes until after the war, for their manufacture takes too much precious sugar. But gingerbread mix is generally available, and muffin and waffle mixes will stay with us. There are dozens of tricks with these packaged time savers. You don't always have to make muffins or pancakes or waffles or gingerbread.

F'instance, you can make cookies with the gingerbread mix. Use only ¼ cup water instead of the full cup and you'll get a stiff dough that can be rolled out and cut into cookies. For drop cookies you use ⅔ cup of water and get a softer dough than for rolled cookies but a stiffer mixture than you'd use for regular gingerbread.

There are all sorts of variations to the gingerbread, too. You can add raisins and frost it, you can serve it with a fruit sauce as a pudding, you can bake it in muffin pans or a loaf, serve it warm or cold.

Waffle mix will make fancy pancakes as well as waffles. Crepes suzette or Swedish style pancakes, or Russian ones, filled with cottage cheese.

The pancakes pictured are Russian pancakes, made by thinning waffle mix batter to the consistency of thick cream to make pan-size thin pancakes. These are spread with cottage cheese and rolled, to be served with spiced fruit, tart jelly, and sour cream. Delicious!

When you use waffle mix for breakfast or luncheon waffles it pays to observe proper waffle baking technique, for while the mix is a perfect one, there's more to waffle making than just the batter.

The waffle iron must be in good condition, hot enough, and the batter must be poured quickly, before the iron can cool more than a couple of degrees.

Never use soap and water on your waffle iron. Use a stiff brush to clean the grids, and reseason them occasionally so that waffles won't stick. To reseason, grease the well brushed grids with unsalted oil and heat the iron to baking temperature. Cool and wipe off excess grease—or, if you're using the iron, bake a waffle and discard it—the next one should be perfect.

Fully prepared muffin mix will make any kind of plain or fancy muffins you like, or cinnamon rolls or fruit and nut bread. To make cinnamon rolls you cut down on the water to make a stiff dough which can be rolled. On the rolled dough you spread margarine, sprinkle brown sugar, cinnamon, and raisins or nuts. Then you roll the dough jelly-roll fashion, slice it, and bake on a greased pan.

To make fruit and nut bread you mix the batter as you would for muffins and add 1½ cups of any favorite fruit and nut combination. Then you bake the mixture in a bread pan for an hour. Presto, a party bread!

Like any quick bread which contains fruit and nuts, this party loaf is better for standing a day before cutting. It won't tear or crumble if allowed to ripen 24 hours.

Russian pancakes, filled with cottage cheese and served with spiced fruit and sour cream, are made from a prepared waffle mix.

$5 PRIZE RECIPE

CRANBERRY CAKE DESSERT

(Serves six)

2 cups cranberries or other fresh fruit in season
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon flour
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup flour
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks
1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine
½ cup milk
2 egg whites
4 tablespoons sugar

Grease an 8 inch casserole; cover bottom of casserole with cranberries, ¾ cup sugar, cinnamon and flour mixed together. Dot with 2 tablespoons butter. Sift flour, sugar, baking powder, and salt together. Add slightly beaten yolks, melted butter, and milk which have been blended together. Mix well. Cover the fruit with batter. Bake in a 350 degree oven about 30 minutes. Turn cake upside down on a serving dish (heatproof) and top with meringue made with egg whites and 4 tablespoons sugar. Return to 350 degree oven for about 15 minutes, or until meringue is browned. —MRS. ETHEL WERNECKE, 1557 Florence av., Evanston, Ill.

Send in your Favorite Recipe now. Five dollar prize daily.

When using any ready prepared mix it is well to read the directions on the package carefully. They are usually given explicitly. While most good mixes are almost foolproof, it would be possible to err in the amount of water required for best results. If you aren't a very good cook, or if you're a good cook who occasionally wants quick breads in a hurry, you'll enjoy keeping a package or two of prepared muffin, gingerbread, or waffle mix at hand for any emergency.

A ready made muffin mix was used to make this quick fruit and nut bread. Mix, water, fruit, and nuts—bake, and that's all!

What a Merry Christmas when you know about "Marriage"!

OF COURSE it's a merrier Christmas than ever when you know about our marriage—because it's a special kind of marriage that makes your baking easier and faster, and above all helps make your results more certain. And if that isn't important when you're using all those precious ingredients, we'd like to know what is!

OUR MARRIAGE is a blending of fine soft cake flour plus baking powder plus salt. But it's a superblending: the three ingredients are cascaded through the air 75 times a minute until they're so thoroughly mixed they're "made as one." Marriage is the only word for it!

NO WORRIES about the right kind or the right amount of baking powder with Presto Cake Flour; the baking powder's right in the Presto flour. And you save precious holiday-season time because you handle only one ingredient instead of the usual three.

ONE OF THE BIG TRICKS in successful baking is the thorough mixing of the flour, baking powder and salt. If you sifted 100 times in your own kitchen you probably couldn't equal the wonderful mixing job that Presto does!

SUCCESS CAN BE YOURS time after time if you let Presto Cake Flour help you. Presto's wonderful for lighter, fluffier cakes, for feathery biscuits, tender muffins, delicious cookies to grace the Christmas table!

ASK your grocer for Presto, and your Christmas baking's off to a successful start! Try the nine luscious-good recipes on the box, or use Presto for your favorite cake flour recipes. (Just omit baking powder and salt when you use Presto.) Try it today—and see how much Presto does for you!

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS BY BOB BECKER

WITH Christmas only a few weeks away, families again are giving consideration to dogs as Christmas presents for children. Because puppies make such amusing, live gifts, this month always focuses special attention on the value of dogs as companions and guards in the home. In normal years upward of 500,000 puppies were moved from kennels into homes around Christmas. We wish Santa Claus would precede the arrival of the little dog with some advice to the prospective owners. All too often the enthusiasm that goes with the ownership of a pup is not matched in the home by knowledge of how to care for it. When that happens the pup does not get a square deal.

Realizing what dogs mean to us and seeing the deep bond of affection between pets and children, we can think of no Christmas gift more wonderful for a child than a pup. But if we had our way Santa Claus would send every prospective puppy owner into a library or a book store right now to get one or more books on how to raise a dog. In fact, we can't think of a more suitable early Christmas gift for most any dog owner than a book on feeding, training, and general care of dogs.

The following note from a mother in Davenport, Ia., is typical: "I have just become the possessor of an 8-week-old cocker spaniel, and, frankly, his carrying-on has me completely stymied. I do so want him to be a well trained dog. Would you suggest some worthwhile booklets on dog care, training, etc?"

There are many well written, practical books that give complete instructions on how to raise a pup into a well behaved, healthy family pet. For example, we can recommend "How to Raise a Dog," by J. R. Kinney and Ann Honeycutt, which is on sale in any book store or may be found in most any library. (Kinney is a veterinarian.) An inexpensive but profusely illustrated handbook which covers everything from feeding to simple lessons in good manners is "How to Raise and Train Your Puppy," which costs $1 in any book store.

"Feeding the Dog" and "Training the Dog," two concise handbooks published by this department, also are beautifully illustrated. These compact handbooks discuss both subjects thoroly and from the viewpoint of the average dog owner. They are very inexpensive, each costing but 30 cents by mail. Orders with remittances may be mailed to the Public Service Office of The Chicago Tribune, 1 S. Dearborn st., Chicago. In the training book the sequences on how to teach a pup to come when called, sit on command, and other routines are illustrated by photographs made at several training kennels. "Care of the Dog" is another helpful book for the amateur dog owner. If a sportsman has a setter, pointer, Labrador, or other hunting breed and wonders when he can start to train and how to proceed, he'll find the book "How to Train Hunting Dogs" has many useful tips.

This beagle hound, Broadview Jane, is more than just a useful dog for hunting rabbits. It's one of the pack of beagles being used by the reconditioning hospital at Camp Ellis, Ill., where wounded soldiers find healthful exercise and amusement hunting behind musical little beagles. This hospital is the first in the country to provide a kennel of beagles for the men in service.

Youth on the Campus

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Bennington, Vt.

WE WONDER how many colleges which undertook war garden projects in the worried spring of 1942 could match the record of Bennington. That year Bennington decided to farm almost a hundred of the fertile acres that lay idle on its grounds, its object being not only the production of food but the practical education of the members of its community. With faculty as overseers, Bennington students are required to farm at least five hours a week during their resident terms. This experiment has been such a complete success that the farm has produced something of an embarrassment of riches.

Consumption of foodstuffs raised by the college has trailed production. Bennington is now largely self-supporting in meats, poultry, vegetables, apples, and potatoes. In fact, its quick-freeze lockers and its root cellar, the latter built largely by the students, are packed to the rafters, and last year's crops are not yet consumed. From now on Bennington is obliged to farm at a slower tempo!

Bennington's schedule fits nicely into its farming and fuel-saving program. At this progressive college students live and work on the campus for two terms, from the end of August until the middle of December and from early April until the end of July. During the winter months the plant is closed; students spend their nonresident term—January, February, and March—working or studying in their field or a related one in a locality that best suits their professional or personal convenience.

Here the conventional educational pattern is not followed. The student's interests and abilities and the college's analysis of her educational needs determine her curriculum and the manner in which it is pursued. There are no competitive examinations, and thru her four years at Bennington, guided by a counselor or tutor, her chosen work creates its own academic discipline. The degree of bachelor of arts is given not by comprehensive final examinations but at the discretion of the faculty, which weighs her individual competence from term to term.

Bennington is a "different" college, and a uniquely beautiful one. Its atmosphere is one of rather studied casualness.

Elinor Waite, a junior, from Brookline, Mass.

There are no rules governing dress, and it is the choice of the students that this be as informal as possible. Slacks or jeans and sports shirts are almost a uniform, interestingly enough, with these students, who consider conventional college garb too much of a uniform to adopt!

But in all justice it must be said that Bennington's is such a completely "country" campus that students find the temptation to wear trousers from morning until night almost irresistible. There are no compulsory sports here, but physical activity is an ever-present factor, what with the farm, the popularity of the dance, and the lure of the Vermont countryside.

The college campus has the austere beauty and the charming communal quality of a New England village. Snow-white residence houses flank two sides of a broad green which opens on one end to a magnificent view of the near-by Green mountains and is dominated on the other by the Commons—meeting place, eating place, and postoffice for the 300 students and the faculty. The campus was evolved from what was once a private estate with a farm adjoining, and almost all of the old buildings have been cleverly and attractively put to academic use. Center of academic life, for example, is the Barn, a red frame structure which was once exactly what its name implies and now serves as library, classrooms, and administration offices.

There is no college community quite like Bennington, either academically or physically, and its success as an institution just a little more than a decade old has been spectacular.

lery, for instance, and vice versa. Hodges thinks the American artillery is the best in the world; and apparently the Germans think so, too, for they are trying to copy our fire control technique.

So when Hodges took command of the 1st army he at once made a place at his own mess for the army's artillery officer. The air force is artillery, too, in a sense—flying artillery.

Once during the early fighting in June the general, wishing to watch a particular attack, was taken to an advanced observation post on a ridge between Carentan and Isigny. There was a canal below, and on the slopes of an opposite ridge the enemy could be seen moving. At that moment the Germans let go with one of their electrically controled rocket mortars. Hodges, peering thru a telescope, saw the flash. A young artillery officer called his battalion and adjusted its fire with a few smoke shells from one gun.

"Then," said Hodges, "he ordered fire for effect. And wham! The whole battalion's fire lit on that hillside. We heard nothing more from that mortar."

Hodges does his thinking with a cold brain. His opinions are real opinions, not a mixture of opinion and feeling. He will tell you that the American soldier is better than the German soldier, a better fighter and better equipped. But you won't catch him underestimating the German, and you won't hear him say that all German blunders are a result of personal orders from Hitler.

He thinks the German decision to counter-attack the Americans at Mortain, when the 1st army was spread thin and the 3d army was rolling south, was a stupid decision. The attack was repelled.

"But even if the Germans had succeeded in breaking thru to the coast," says Hodges, "what would they have gained? They'd have been right between the jaws of a nutcracker and we'd have slaughtered them."

One of Hodges' most pleasing memories is of the time when Germans seemed to lose track of the American 1st army completely. That was when the army swung around Paris, crossed the Seine, and headed east. The Germans apparently thought the American plan was to drive for the Verdun gateway. Instead Hodges changed the direction of his movement a couple of times and suddenly appeared right athwart the German escape route between Mons and Maubeuge. The error cost the Germans 25,000 men killed or captured.

HODGES

Hodges would rather listen than talk. He would rather do his job than be praised for doing it. He has none of the instincts of a poseur, and he won't be happy when the autograph hunters catch up with him, if they ever do. It has been only in recent weeks that his aides have been able to persuade him that his present position as commander of our hottest field army makes him to some extent public property and that our civilians at home are entitled to know something about him, because he controls the destinies of so many of our soldiers.

Mrs. Hodges . . . "hide and seek?"

He won't make speeches, and he keeps the personal pronoun out of his conversation. At his staff conferences he listens, asks questions, weighs one factor against another, makes a decision, and announces it—tersely.

He has worked so long with General Bradley that the two men know each other's mind. Given the same set of facts, they think alike. The facts are the main thing. The rest is applying principle to fact.

Hodges has converted a part of his headquarters into a mobile outfit that travels in a trailer which can go where the facts are. He and his staff work long hours. Normally he is up at 8 o'clock, has breakfast at 8:30, then starts work. In the course of the day he may fly in a Cub plane to visit his corps or go by jeep with his chauffeur at the wheel. The chauffeur is Sgt. William Spratt, Toledo, O., former racing car driver.

At the end of a strenuous day Hodges and his staff like to change from field clothes into regulation uniforms and enjoy a good dinner—with a white tablecloth, if you please!—at about 7:30. There are two good chefs. One is Sgt. Luigi Bosi, 240 E. 28th st., New York City; the other Technician 4 Costas (Gus) Savva, 2 Manhattan av., New York. Luigi used to cook at Leon and Eddy's and Gus at Diamond Jim's in New York. Both men have been cooking as a team in the army for three years.

Dinner does not end the day, for it is followed by conferences that last until midnight or later. Plans are discussed, information assembled, and there are telephone consultations with corps commanders.

In peace time Hodges was fond of hunting. But before he left Washington he disposed of most of his hunting guns, foreseeing that he would be too busy to use them in any predictable future.

But when the war is over he hopes to have some fun hunting again. His wife likes the sport as well as he does, and they would like to follow the hunting seasons over North America, with occasional side trips to Indo-China and Africa.

Mrs. Hodges, whom he married 15 years ago, now lives at Atlanta, Ga., where Sylvan's wife also lives. Hodges tries to write at least two letters a week to his wife.

Recently his wife sent him a clipping of a news picture showing Hodges, Bradley, Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, and others beside a haystack, kneeling in a circle and studying a map. Mrs. Hodges had scribbled on the picture: "What were you doing? Shooting craps or playing hide and seek?"

The war flows through her switchboard

—and it moves fast

SHE'S right in the middle of the hurry calls of war and she's doing a great job in keeping things moving.

When your Long Distance call is to a war-busy center, she may say—"Please limit your call to 5 minutes."

"Want some new ideas? Look at that gorgeous Tutti-Frutti Mold—a new, exciting combination of colorful Jell-O and creamy Jell-O Pudding! A party dish that measures up to your loveliest linen and choicest silver!

"And, for that afternoon when your children 'have the gang over,' how about the little ice-skating snowman . . . or the cunning green tree . . . or the peanut brittle 'candy pudding'? All so easy . . . so simple . . . so quick!

"That's the wonderful thing about Jell-O and Jell-O Puddings—their rich, extra-special flavors make them taste so luxurious that you'll serve 'em proudly to fastidious grownups. Yet they're so simple and wholesome that they're your favorite family standbys, too."

TUTTI-FRUTTI MOLD

1 package Jell-O Pudding (Vanilla or Butterscotch)
1¾ cups milk
1 package Jell-O (any flavor)
1½ cups hot water
½ cup coarsely cut dates
½ cup raisins
2 to 4 tablespoons rum with Vanilla Pudding or ½ to 1 teaspoon rum extract with Butterscotch Pudding
½ cup maraschino cherries, cut in fourths
½ cup broken walnut meats

Prepare pudding as directed on package, using 1¼ cups milk. Chill, stirring frequently.

Dissolve Jell-O in hot water. Chill until slightly thickened. Place in bowl of ice and water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Add chilled pudding gradually, beating constantly; blend. Add rum. Fold in fruit and nuts. Turn into 1½-quart mold or individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Note: To make a very large mold (3-quart size) double recipe, but use only 3 cups milk in pudding. Chill mold overnight.

Set a little marshmallow snowman in thickened red Jell-O for a dessert to surprise the family!

Crumbled peanut brittle folded into Jell-O Butterscotch Pudding is dee-licious. Sprinkle more on top!

Jell-O Vanilla Pudding makes a background for this shimmering Christmas tree cut from Lime Jell-O!

Here's "Merry Christmas" in red and green Jell-O flakes with a fluff of hard sauce between!

Umm-um! Some's Chocolate, some's Vanilla Jell-O Pudding marbled together in a tender pastry tart!

What makes Jell-O taste better?

That exclusive "locked-in" goodness! There's no wartime letdown in Jell-O's superior quality and flavor!

Yes! . . . for many and many a Christmas the gift of a Waterman's pen has been as much a part of the picture as holly and mistletoe and lights on the tree.

This year . . . more than ever before . . . Waterman's belongs on your gift list. No other pen combines the beauty . . . writing pleasure . . . and convenience we've built into these new Waterman's. Each point, for example, is 14 kt. gold, hand-ground to give you a new conception of writing smoothness. The Inkquaduct Feed is designed for instant writing, any time, any place. The One-Stroke Filler saves time, saves trouble. And all these—plus many other features are yours to enjoy—or give—from the moment your Waterman's is first used.

You'll find Waterman's at good stores everywhere. But frankly we haven't been able to give our dealers all the pens you'll want to buy. If your dealer hasn't the exact style or color you wanted—such as the 100-Year Pen above—take one of those he has. For remember this: all Waterman's, from $5 up, are made with the same quality of workmanship and materials.

In 40 Years Brach Candies have made Millions of Friends!

A word of appreciation to you who like fine candy!

When my sons and I opened our first candy store 40 years ago, we didn't dream that our "Palace of Sweets" would grow into one of the largest candy-kitchens in the world.

We've grown because you liked our candies and wanted more and more each year. In return, E. J. Brach & Sons has remained a family business and through the years each Brach candy has been the personal creation of the Brach family of candy-makers.

Today, I would like to express our appreciation to you whose preference for Brach candies has made possible 40 years of continued growth.

EXCLUSIVE TO THE TRIBUNE:

PARIS FASHIONS OF THE HOUR

These color sketches, rushed by air mail from the French capital, visualize new and authentic fashions originated in famous Parisian salons. The sketches were made under the direction of Scaioni, celebrated Paris photographer, who covered the fashion front in France for The Tribune before the war, and who now has been commissioned to resume his camera reports.

The liberation of Paris touched off a prolonged round of festive fashion shows in the distinguished salons of the French capital: these were climaxed by presentation of a series of costumes symbolically red, white, and blue. At the right is one of these tri-color series, a trio of evening gowns originated by Martial et Armand.

Left: An unusual new evening gown designed by Lucien Lelong and Christened "Arabella." The Scotch plaid is used for the train and puffed shoulders: the front is black.

Exciting new French hats designed by Rose Valois feature amusing inspirations, such as the chanticleer in realistic feathers on the head band of the high green tam above. The very high hat is called "Tambour" by reason of the clever simulated drum motif trimmed with red and purple felt.

"Who the heck is Avco, anyhow?..."

That's a good question to ask right now—especially as you will hear a lot of the name AVCO after the war . . .

To begin with, AVCO is a trade name for The Aviation Corporation—a group of American companies whose names you'll find at the bottom of this page . . .

Right now, AVCO's plants are making war goods—mostly aviation equipment like propellers, precision parts, and the famous Lycoming engines . . .

After the war, we hope and plan to hold AVCO's fine place among America's aviation companies... But we also plan on something else . . .

We will then put AVCO's aviation "know-how"—the special skills and ingenuity and careful workmanship that aircraft demand—to making new AVCO household equipment . . .

The result will be some really great new AVCO kitchen stoves, and heating units, and many other super-efficient modern home conveniences...

And the result will also be some good jobs in AVCO plants for America's postwar workers—jobs that otherwise might not exist at all!

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

by MILTON CANIFF

OH, WILLOW BELINDA, YOU'RE AN AWFUL LIAR... BUT IT MUST BE FAIR TO LIE TO THE ENEMY IN A WAR...

BECAUSE I HAD TRIED ON WAC SERGEANT JANE ALLEN'S UNIFORM, THESE JAPANESE POSING AS INDIAN NATIVES KIDNAPPED ME TO LEARN THE DETAILS OF A COMING AMERICAN OPERATION THE REAL SGT. ALLEN KNOWS ABOUT BECAUSE SHE IS SECRETARY TO A COLONEL... I HAD TO TELL THEM SOMETHING OR BE TORTURED...

...SO I DESCRIBED JOSHUA'S CONQUEST OF JERICHO, FROM THE BIBLE, AS IF IT WERE TO BE AN AMERICAN DRIVE! NOW, I DON'T KNOW WHETHER I'M MORE FRIGHTENED OF THE JAPS LEARNING OF MY DECEPTION — OR OF MY USING THE BIBLE FOR SUCH A WHOPPER...

MEANWHILE...

GEE, CHARLIE, NO WONDER THE COPS CAN'T FIND WILLOW BELINDA IN SUCH A MAZE AS THIS CITY!

FOR ONCE, TERRY, ME LAD, EVEN OL' HOTSHOT CHAZZ IS UP A SMALL STUMP... BUT FRET NOT — WE BOSTON CHARLESES NEVER DESIST!

THE ROADS FROM HERE ARE SO CLOSELY PATROLLED, I AGREE WITH THE POLICE THAT SHE MUST STILL BE IN THE CITY — IF SHE'S ALIVE...

THE MINIONS OF THE LAW WILL SURELY REJOICE THAT YOU FAVOR THEIR CONCLUSIONS! ...HEY!

WHY THE OLD COLLEGE TRY, HOTSHOT?

BEHOLD! THIS GANGES COWBOY WAS WEARING A WAC CHAPEAU! EXAMINE IT WHILE I HOLD THE SQUIRMER FOR QUESTIONING!

YEE-OW, HOTSHOT, IT'S JANE ALLEN'S CAP — WHICH WILLOW BELINDA WORE WHEN SHE DISAPPEARED! WHERE DID THE GUY GET THIS? DOES HE SPEAK ENGLISH?

AHEM!... TERRY, DO YOU HAVE A FEELING THAT WE ARE NOT ENTIRELY ALONE?

EVER'BODY I ASK SAYS MELVIN IS A SUPER GRADE 1-A FOUL BALL! BUT NOBODY SAYS WHY THEY DON'T LIKE MELVIN...

GREAT DAY IN THE MORNING!... NEWS FROM MELVIN, THE DEARLY BELOVED SON OF MRS. BLEATING-HART! HER BOY! HER DARLING! HER LITTLE LAMB!

SHUCKS! HIS MOTHER IS ENOUGH TO QUEER ANY KID WITH TH' GANG! MELVIN CAN'T BE AS BAD AS THEY SAY!

I'M SORRY FOR KIDS, WHEN EVER'BODY IS DOWN ON 'EM... IF EVER I SEE HIM, I'M GOIN' TO BE NICE TO HIM!

OH, ANNIE! LISTEN TO MELVIN'S LETTAH! "MOTHAH! WIRE ONE HUNDRED! MUST HAVE!... MELVIN"... HA! HA! THE DEAH LAMB... ISN'T THAT CUTE? SO FORTHRIGHT!

YESSUM...

PROBABLY HE'S BEEN IN SOME CHILDISH ESCAPADE WITH HIS LITTLE COMRADES... BUT HE ALWAYS TURNS TO MOTHAH...

HE'S SUCH A DEAH BOY! HIGH-SPIRITED AND FULL OF PRANKS... BUT HE'LL ALWAYS BE HIS MOTHAH'S DAHLING!

OH! THE DOAH BELL! NOW, WHO...?

YESSUM! I'M GOING!

IT'S ANOTHER SPECIAL D'LIVERY LETTER FROM BURPINGTON-ON-HUDSON SCHOOL FOR BOYS...

MY... MY! ANOTHER ONE FROM MELVIN?

OH! OH! OH! WHY, THAT... THAT... THAT IMBECILE! NOT EVEN A HEAD MASTAH CAN SPEAK THAT WAY ABOUT MELVIN!

WHAT DOES HE WANT HIS PUPILS TO BE? CLODS? HE SAYS THE OTHAH BOYS ARE GENTLEMANLY AND COURTEOUS... BAH! I CAN JUST SEE THE LITTLE MONSTERS...

...BEING TAUGHT TO GROW UP JUST LIKE THEAH FAWTHAHS! TO BE HORRID BUSINESS MEN... BANKAHS... FACTORY OWNAHS! BAH! SUCH PEOPLE!

MELVIN IS INTELLECTUAL! HE'S A FOHWAHD THINKAH! BUT THAT IDIOTIC SCHOOLTEACHAH IS TOO DULL TO UNDAHSTAND MY MELVIN!

HE'D CRUSH THE BEAUTIFUL SPAHK... BLUNT THE SPIRIT OF MY DEAH LITTLE LAMB!

ANNIE! SEE THAT MELVIN'S ROOM IS IN ORDAH! HE'LL BE HOME TOMORROW!

YESSUM! I'LL DO IT, RIGHT AWAY!

MOON MULLINS

by Frank Willard

OWA! OWA! OWA!

MOON, WHAT DO YOU THINK THE DOCTOR'S DIAGNOSIS WILL BE?

HE'LL JEST TELL YOU WHERE TH' FREE LUNCH FER YER LADIES' CLUB WENT TO, EMMY.

TELL ME, DOCTOR- I WILL BE BRAVE!

OH, KAYO WILL BE ALL RIGHT. I LEFT SOME DIRECTIONS FOR HIM TO FOLLOW.

WELL, KAYO- I HOPE THIS HAS LEARNED YOU A LESSON.

I'LL SAY IT HAS.

MY STUMMICK ACHES OKAY, NOW, IN FACK, I THINK I'LL GO GET ME SOMETHIN' MORE TO EAT.

OH, NO, YOU DON'T

YOU AIN'T GOING TO EAT NOTHING BUT WHAT THE DOCTOR PRESCRIBED FOR YOU FOR TWO DAYS.

WHEN DO WE EAT, EMMY?

WELL, GIRLS, I REALLY HAD A LOVELY LUNCHEON PREPARED- BUT I MUST OFFER YOU ALL A APOLOGY

JUST OFFER US SOME FOOD, INSTEAD.

I'M FAMISHED.

HOWEVER, I DID DIG UP A HAM WHICH I AM SURE YOU WILL ALL ENJOY.

WHO'S THAT OUT THERE?

KERASH!

JEST ME, EMMY. I'M TAKIN' MY MEDICINE.

TH' DOCTOR TOLD YA I HADDA HAVE A MUSTARD PLASTER FOR MY STUMMICK, DIDN'T HE?

WELL, IT WAS TOO DOGGONE HOT BY ITSELF AND I NEVER COULDA GOT IT DOWN IF I HADN'TA HAD THAT HAM TO GO WITH IT.

A NIGHT IN A TIN CAN

THE Teenie Weenies had finished their supper. The Cook was putting away the last of his cooking pans and the General and the Doctor had begun their regular evening game of Teenie Weenie checkers.

"It's going to be stormy soon," remarked the Old Soldier as he came puffing in with several extra logs for the fire.

"Much cold. Maybe much snow," grunted the Indian who had dropped in from his little birch bark hut near the Teenie Weenie village.

"Well, let it snow," said the Old Soldier. "We have plenty of wood and——" The Old Soldier never finished the sentence, for at that moment there was a loud knocking at the front door. The Sailor opened the door and a mouse stood on the porch. The mouse began squeaking so fast the Teenie Weenies could hardly make out what it said, but finally they understood that the mouse's brother had been badly wounded in a fight with another mouse and that the Doctor was wanted.

The Doctor took his little medicine case, put on his caterpillar fur lined coat and started to follow the mouse. The Policeman thought he had better go with the Doctor and the Indian made signs that he would go along, too.

It was a mighty good thing that the Indian decided to go along for it was a long way to the mouse's house and thru a dense woods where the Indian could easily lead the way.

After the Doctor had treated the mouse who had been badly chewed up in the fight the little men set off for home. Soon big, soft snowflakes began to fall and the Indian pointed toward a tin can that lay under a bush. "We camp there. Much too dangerous to be walking in woods in storm. Me build fire."

The Doctor and the Policeman stepped into the shelter of the can while the Indian gathered some very fine twigs, some dried pine needles and taking a tiny box from his shirt pocket he took out a bit of dry thistle down. Then with his tiny piece of flint and a bit of steel he quickly struck a spark which set fire to the thistle down and that in turn kindled the pine needles and twigs. Soon he had a fine fire roaring in front of the can.

The Teenie Weenies spent the night in the can, and very comfortably, too, thanks to the wood's wise Indian. The storm was over by daylight and the three Teenie Weenies set off for the village where they arrived just in time to sit down to a fine breakfast of corn cakes and fried frog ham.

Royal Christmas Wreath Salad

1 package Royal Gelatin Dessert (lemon flavor) 1 cup boiling water
1 cup cold water 1 pimiento
1 green pepper
½ cup chopped celery
1 cup cubed grapefruit sections

Dissolve tangy Royal Lemon Gelatin Dessert in boiling water; add cold water. Chill until it begins to thicken. Pour a thin layer of the slightly thickened gelatin into a ring mold. Cut pimiento into a long, thin strip and use to make a bow in bottom of mold. Cut green pepper and remaining pimiento into pieces to resemble holly leaves and berries. Arrange in wreath design on top of thickened gelatin. Add celery and grapefruit cubes to remaining gelatin and spoon carefully into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold and serve on lettuce. Makes 6 servings.

Royal Holiday Butterscotch Pudding

1 package Royal Butterscotch Pudding
2 cups milk
1 egg white
2 tablespoons sugar
4 Christmas candies

Prepare smooth, luscious Royal Butterscotch Pudding with milk, as directed on the package. Remove from heat. Cool slightly and pour into sherbet glasses; chill. Before serving, beat egg white until stiff; gradually beat in sugar. Drop a spoonful of meringue on top of each pudding and garnish with a Christmas candy. Makes 4 servings.

TANGY ROYAL GELATIN DESSERTS ARE BIG FAVORITES, TOO!

Try them—see why more women use

ROYAL PUDDINGS

than any other kind!

—says MARY WOODS of the Royal Kitchens

"TRY any flavor—delicate Vanilla . . . dark, delightful Chocolate . . . or the glorious, golden Butterscotch pictured here. Notice how lusciously smooth, how flavorful. Yet they take only a few short minutes to prepare.

"There are other prepared puddings—good ones, too. But surely Royal Puddings must be extra good, or why do more women buy them than any other kind? Try Royal Gelatin Desserts, too—flavor-sealed, richer, tangier!"

GILBERT CHEMISTRY SETS

The kind that make boy chemists famous

No. 6 DOUBLE FEATURE DOUBLE FUN LABORATORY

Big two-door wooden cabinet crammed with chemicals and apparatus. Two big manuals. Puts over 400 spectacular experiments at your finger tips.

MORE boys have won fame and big awards with Gilbert Chemistry Sets than any other kind. Because they are far more than "toy" sets. Range of chemicals and apparatus are based on real laboratory technique. You can write messages in invisible ink—make a chemical weather flag—turn a lemon into an electric cell and perform hundreds of other spectacular experiments in organic, inorganic and electro chemistry.

HERE are Charles Luther and Raymond Leatzaw —top-ranking boy chemists for 1944—who won $100.00 for their sensational experiments. The door is wide open for you to do the same. Mr. Gilbert will award $100.00 to the boy doing what he considers the most important research in chemistry in 1945—and $10.00 each to the ten boys doing the next most important research. Write for details. Gilbert Hall of Science, 23A, Erector Square, New Haven, Conn.

The NEW ERECTOR JUNIOR

Sure is Keen

It's a snap to build thrilling action models with the new Erector Junior . . . big bridges that open and close . . . cranes that swivel and hoist . . . sensational airplane ride and dozens of others. Fascinating array of punched strips, wheels, axles and other exciting parts are made of wood—like famous mosquito bomber. Parts fasten together with big, easy-to-grip pin-pegs. You don't need a screw driver. Any boy who can tie his own shoes can build colossal working models.

See Nature's secret colors with a GILBERT POLARIZING MICROSCOPE

You open the door to a new wonderland of Nature's hidden colors with a Gilbert Polarizing Microscope. Objects appear 150 times larger. They blaze forth in startling colors never seen with the naked eye or with ordinary microscopes. Sugar crystals look like brilliant jewels. Insect wings and other specimens reveal gorgeous, weird colors.

When the Lights Are On Again

We'd heard all about it
That we'd see with delight
The big twinkling carpet
Of a city a-light!

So long we've waited
Still in the dark
Seen only the blackness . .
And heard the guns bark.

But Christmas is coming
And with it the thrill
The Message of Peace
And to all men Good Will.

For one night will come
When all men are free
As the whole city twinkles
For sister and me.

Dedicated by NOMA to millions of younger children in war torn countries who missed the thrill of seeing a lighted city.

LOYOLA TAKES FORWARD LOOK IN NEW PERIOD

Winter Study to Aid Post-War Era.

With a program tailored to prepare students for post-war opportunities at home and abroad Loyola university's downtown school, 28 N. Franklin st., will start the winter session Dec. 11.

Registration is open in public service courses, war contract settlement, and in Latin American shipping and finance, which are offered by the Loyola institute of inter-American affairs.

A three day war contract termination course, covering general termination procedures, will be given weekly from 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. Monday thru Wednesday. This course will be repeated as long as the demand exists except for the period of Dec. 25 thru Jan. 1.

Limit Enrollment to 60.

Weekly enrollment in this program will be limited to 60, according to Henry T. Chamberlin, dean of the college of commerce.

Clinical employment may be had by those students registered in the public service courses, so that they may blend theory with the actual carrying out of their job assignments as employes of the government and government related agencies. The courses are drawn from government, economics, sociology, history, and psychology, and are so flexible that they will meet the needs of those already in public service who seek a complementary education, as well as those training for a particular agency.

Study Religious Problems.

Institute courses in Latin American shipping and finance are to be conducted by Sebastian Rivera, Chicago attorney and specialist in inter-American law and commerce. Evening classes in Pan-American Spanish and Brazilian Portuguese also will be available.

The religious problems in the Americas form the basis for a series of classes offered by the Rev. Alphonso Castiello, visiting professor and dean of Centro Cultural universiterie, Mexico City. Father Constiello is teaching at Loyola thru coöperation of the department of state.

Kilmer American Legion Will Dedicate Memorial

The Joyce Kilmer American Legion post will dedicate a memorial plaque to Pvt. David Martin Riordon Jr. at 3 p. m. today at Hoyne and Birchwood avs. Colors will be presented by the post and the Sullivan High school R. O. T. C. drum and bugle corps. Pvt. Riordon was a former captain of the Sullivan R. O. T. C. and lived at 2118 Birchwood av.

Paragraphs About People You May Know

IN the recent conference on war and peace at the University of Iowa, in which students from 17 colleges participated, Edith Bannon of Evanston received the highest rating in a discussion of the Dumbarton Oaks plan for world government. She also was the only contestant to be marked superior for after-dinner speaking.

Edith Bannon.

A junior in Northwestern university, Miss Bannon is a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority and Phi Beta, honorary speech and music sorority. The women's and men's debate groups of Northwestern were the only undefeated teams at the conference.

Dorothy Jean Mendelson, 6531 N. Francisco av., is one of 85 students to receive honors for her first two years' work in the University of Wisconsin.

PHILIP K. OXMAN, 181 Lake Shore dr., had a prominent role in "Arms and the Man," a play produced last week by the University of Chicago drama department. A fourth year student in the college of the university, he has held a full tuition scholarship two years and is assistant resident head of Snell hall.

Philip K. Oxman.

Two north side freshmen in Loyola university are winners in the Carter H. Harrison oratorical contest, held annually at the university since 1890. Richard C. Leach, Golf, won second place, and John P. Houlihan, 1341 Elmdale av., won third.

An open house for 110 guests recently marked the 50th wedding of Mr. and Mrs. George Zonsius, 4924 N. Oakley av., and the 75th birthday of Mr. Zonsius. The couple has one son, Irving, and a daughter, Mrs. Robert Kullander, both of the Oakley av. address. A grandson, Pvt. Glen Kullander, is stationed at Fort Bliss, Tex., and another grandson, Donald R. Kullander, seaman 2d class, was killed in action off the coast of Sicily. Mr. and Mrs. Zonsius have lived in their present home 40 years.

'That's My Pop,' 27 N. U. Students Can Say About Faculty Members

His team—that's the way Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, professor of physiology in the Northwestern university medical school, thinks of his sons in uniform. Shown with their father are Pvt. William H. (left), Pvt. Andrew C., both sophomores, and Pvt. John H. (right), a senior in the medical school. A fourth son, Horace, is a member of the V-12 program on the Evanston campus. The boys are among the 27 sons and daughters of faculty members registered at Northwestern this year.

"Colds and other air borne diseases can be curbed by conditioning the air with an invisible antiseptic vapor manufactured by this machine," says Burgess Jennings, professor of mechanical engineering at the Technological institute, to son, Robert, pre-medic student. Prof. Jennings and Dr. Edward Biggs, associate in medicine, developed the new gas, which is being used in army and navy hospitals.

Now that dad, Phares R. Hershey, teaches romance languages in the downtown school, Anne Hershey rarely has a chance to walk with him on the Evanston campus, but there are days when he has business in the Evanston school, and they get together. Anne is a liberal arts sophomore and hopes to study medicine. She and her father are shown in the picture at the left. Madonna Freeland and her father, R. C. Freeland, associate professor of botany, come to school and leave together.

Life with Pop on Faculty No Bed of Roses

BY GENEVIEVE FLAVIN.

"I quake in my boots," confessed Ovid W. Eshbach, dean of the Technological institute at Northwestern university, referring to the possible quarterly grades of his daughter, Frances. One of 27 students whose parents are faculty members, Frances enrolled in the school of liberal arts this fall.

The dean continued, "As far as I can learn, she is majoring in Chi Omega sorority, and, as extracurricular activity, is taking a course in liberal arts."

Blonde, blue eyed Frances, however, retorts: "You can't be too dignified when it is discovered the math room hasn't been unlocked, and you are delegated to go and collect the keys from your parents." A precedent was established for Frances, however, by her brother John, an ensign in the navy, who was graduated from the university last fall. He tutored her in the right answers.

"That Was No Boy Friend."

The majority of faculty children entering Northwestern attempt to keep their parents' identification with the faculty a secret. When Marjorie Olson Kimbrough was subjected to a new version of the old gag, "Who is that man you come to school with every morning — your boy friend?" she decided to disclose that he was her father, Kenneth E. Olson, dean of the Medill school of journalism.

Robert Jennings, too, tried to keep secret that he belonged to Burgess Jennings, professor of mechanical engineering at the Technological institute. Reason? "It makes a fellow self-conscious. Folks think they ought to think you're pretty smart—even if you aren't." Bob and his father attend all the football games together, so the truth was bound to break some day. The elder Jennings recently perfected a vapor for the prevention of the spreading of colds. The process is being applied in several army and navy hospitals. In the realm of medical scientific research he and his son, a pre-medical student, meet on common ground.

Four Sons in School.

Then there are the Ivy boys—Privates Williams, Andrew, and John of the army, all studying at the downtown medical school, and Horace, a pre-medical student in the V-12 program on the Evanston campus. The Ivys are the only faculty children actually taking classes under their father. That's because he is the only one teaching required courses in physiology.

"We Ivy's have our moments, too," Andy said. "Our fraternity brothers keep an eye on us to see if we go in for heavy studying believing that might be a sign that Dad is planning a test."

The boys' favorite story concerns a lecture given by their father denouncing the necessity of taking five minutes for roll call, ending with a dissertation against tardiness. The room was silent. Then in walked Bill and Andy Ivy, five minutes late. . . . "And there's the one about the fraternities, too," Bill remembered. "Dad is a member of Alpha Kappa Kappa. When he came to the university he thought Andy and I would join up—but Jack was a Nu Sigma Nu. During rush week Dad was recruited to speak at his fraternity and he said something like this: 'Give me any boy for five minutes and he'll go Alpha Kappa

Dean Ovid W. Eshbach of the Technological institute explains the operation of a photostat machine to daughter, Frances, a freshman in the college of liberal arts. The dean confessed that he quakes in his boots when he anticipates his daughter's quarterly grades because, at present, she seems to be majoring in sorority activities.

When Marjorie Olson Kimbrough first came to Northwestern as a student in the college of liberal arts, she arrived each morning in the company of her father, Kenneth E. Olson, dean of the Medill school of journalism. However, she had not made public their relationship until some one asked, "Who is that man I see you with each morning—your boy friend?" Then Marjorie admitted being a faculty child.

William Nethercot, freshman in liberal arts, sits in on a conference between his dad, Arthur H. Nethercot Sr., professor of English, and sister-in-law, Mrs. Arthur Nethercot Jr.

N. SIDE CHURCH WILL MARK 25 YEARS' SERVICE

Will Observe Month Long Jubilee.

The 25th anniversary of the Assyrian Congregational church, 4447 Hazel av., together with that of its pastor and founder, the Rev. Paul S. Newey, will be celebrated this month with a series of special services.

The church, first established in a hall on Clark st. near Erie st., was organized Christmas day, 1919, with 21 charter members. The church has changed locations eight times, steadily moving northward. Today the congregation of more than 300 meets in the building purchased in 1937 from the Sheridan Road Methodist church.

Open Jubilee This Morning.

The Rev. J. F. Matthiesen, pastor of St. Thomas Eastern Orthodox church, will open the jubilee with a sermon at 11:30 a. m. today. Dr. Niel F. Hansen, general director of the Chicago Congregational union, will preside Dec. 10, and Dr. Albert Palmer, president of the Congregational seminary at the University of Chicago, will conduct services Dec. 17.

Communion and reception of new members will make up the ritual Dec. 24, with service men's and women's memorial devotions Dec. 31. During this period messages from 65 members of the congregation in service will be read.

The Rev. Mr. Newey, founder of what is believed the only Assyrian Congregational church in the world, has not confined his activities to his church duties. He has acted as a pastor at large to the entire Assyrian colony in Chicago, and to those countrymen who make up colonies in Knox, Ind., and Gary, Ind.

Tutors Countrymen.

He has tutored hundreds of Assyrian immigrants, and has helped more than a thousand to pass naturalization examinations. When Assyrians were being denied citizenship in 1924, the Rev. Mr. Newey fought the test case of the Rev. Samuel David, resident Roman Catholic priest for the Assyrian Chaldeans, in Cook county Superior court. The United States Supreme court upheld the lower court's decision to allow citizenship.

Arriving in this country from Persia at the age of 20, the Rev. Mr. Newey then entered the seminary at the University of Chicago. He was graduated in 1913, and assigned to the Plymouth Congregational church, Duluth, Minn. He later served at the Minnehaha Congregational church, Minneapolis, Minn.

In 1916 he returned to Chicago and began publication of the Assyrian American Herald, which gained world-wide circulation. After founding the Assyrian Congregational church, he abandoned the newspaper in 1921.

Goudy PTA.

Eighth grade pupils and their teacher, Francesca Urbancek, will be guests of the Goudy PTA at a Christmas party at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday.

BISHOP HAINES TO GET DEGREE FROM SEABURY

The Rt. Rev. Elwood Lindsay Haines, Episcopal bishop of Iowa, will receive an honorary doctor of divinity degree from Seabury Western Theological seminary, Evanston, in a special convocation at 5:30 p. m. Thursday.

The degree will be conferred by the Very Rev. Alden Drew Kelly, president and dean of Seabury Western.

Bishop Haines was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania and the Philadelphia Divinity school, and is a former missionary to Liberia. He has served as dean of Christ Church cathedral, Louisville, Ky.

ASCENSION CHURCH WILL HONOR PASTOR WITH TWO SERVICES

A high mass at 11 a. m. today and a choral evensong service at 7:30 p. m. next Sunday will mark the 35th anniversary of the Rev. William Brewster Stoskopf as pastor of the Anglo-Catholic Church of the Ascension, Elm and La Salle sts. Dr. Stoskopf will say the mass and the choir, directed by Willard L. Groom, organist and choirmaster, will sing.

The Rev. W. B. Stoskopf. [Tribune Photo.]

"Psalm One," a selection written by Clinton Seeley especially for the occasion will be sung at the evensong service with Robert G. Heffner as soloist. Ruthe Schildt and Dorothy Erickson will play a double violin concerto. Dorothy Fahey, flutist, and Crystal Porter, organist, will appear in solos. Lewis Mahlmann will sing.

A reception in the parish house will follow the service. Father Stoskopf came to his present pastorate from Trinity church, Bridgeport, Conn. He is an alumnus of Yale university and General Theological seminary of New York.

N. SIDE CHURCH TO HOLD YULE BAZAR FRIDAY

Everything from toys to those hard-to-get knit and crocheted articles will be on sale at a Christmas bazar to be held in the auditorium of St. Francis Episcopal church, 2514 Thorndale av., at 2 p. m. Friday.

The program includes surprise entertainment, supervised by Kenyon Bowes and Andrew Canterbury and a cafeteria supper with Mrs. Nels Meline and members of the Canterbury club as hostesses.

Mrs. Guy Strafer is chairman of the bazar and Mrs. James Dingle co-chairman. Father David Reid is vicar of St. Francis' church.

Boone PTA.

The Rev. Royald Caldwell will speak at the Boone PTA Christmas party Friday night in the Indian Boundary fieldhouse.

ST. AUGUSTINE'S GUILDS TO HOLD WILMETTE FETE

The four auxiliary guilds of St. Augustine's Episcopal church, Wilmette, will hold the annual parish festival from 2 to 11 p. m. Thursday in the Wilmette Woman's club.

A puppet show for children will be given, and dinner will be served from 5:30 to 7 p. m. with an auction sale following.

A square dance called by Dorothy Wilkenning will form the evening's entertainment. Mrs. Moxie George is festival chairman, assisted by Mrs. Harry B. Johnston, president of the woman's auxiliary.

Theta Sigma Phi Alumnae Will Hear Kenneth Horan

Kenneth Horan, Evanston novelist, will discuss her experiences as an author in the middle west and Hollywood at a luncheon given by north shore alumnae of Theta Sigma Phi, journalism sorority, Tuesday in the Carson Pirie Scott & Co. tearoom.

Clinton PTA.

A playlet presented by the Red Cross, group singing, and a display of art work by pupils will compose the Christmas program of the Clinton PTA at 1:15 p. m. Thursday. Martha Jeppson will supervise the art display.

ROAST BEEF! WHERE? WHY, AT THE BAZAR

A roast beef dinner is one of the features scheduled by the Woman's guild of the Wellington Avenue Congregational church, 615 Wellington av., at its annual bazar Thursday and Friday.

Dinner will be served between 5:30 and 7:30 p. m. Friday. Afternoon tea and tea leaf readings will be offered both days. The bazar will include the sale of surprise packages, bakery, and food stuffs.

Mrs. Horace Manchester is chairman with Mrs. Harry O. Hanson, social chairman.

Pat Perspiration and Underarm Odor
Safely Away!
With Dainty New Perfumed Pad

Every day more women are discovering this new "pat-a-pad" way to really end perspiration worries. It's easy—instant—safe—and pleasant to use.

For all you do is pat a dainty perfumed pad to your underarms (then throw pad away). Perspiration is controlled, underarm odor prevented.

Here at last is a method that can be used with safety for even your most delicate silks and rayons—simply follow easy directions. More economical, too. Each jar holds generous supply of 35 pads—lasts many 100 days or more.

FREE: Send for generous trial supply. No obligation. Send name and address to Associated Distributors, Inc., Dept. 45, Chicago 18, Ill.

PARTIES TO AID 6TH LOAN DRIVE ON NORTH SIDE

Dinner Free for $1,000 Bond Purchasers.

Parties to stimulate the sale of bonds in the 6th war loan drive are being planned for the week of Dec. 10-16 by north side OCD workers. Admission price will be the purchase of a war bond.

On Wednesday evening, Dec. 13, persons residing in central uptown who can show purchase of a $1,000 bond during the current drive will be admitted to a dinner given by the Sheridan Plaza hotel management in the grand ballroom. Speakers will be Francis M. Knight, 6th war loan chairman for Chicago and Cook county; Frank C. Rathje, division chairman of house to house canvass, and Lee Ross, OCD division director.

Plan Two Theater Parties.

Two theater parties are scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 14. Two movies and a stage show will be presented at the Uptown theater, 4816 Broadway. The Lincoln-Fullerton 110 piece OCD drum and bugle corps will participate in the program.

The Sheridan theater, working with the Sheridan Center OCD, will also issue free tickets on Dec. 14 to persons presenting a receipt showing the purchase of at least one bond.

A new feature has been introduced into the drive by members of the Milk Wagon Drivers union. James Kennedy, president, and the Milk Dealers association. They responded to the appeal of Mayor Kelly and Mr. Rathje to circulate 250,000 appeals for volunteer workers thru their customers.

Milk Bottles Carry Appeal.

This appeal is in the form of a card with a cut-out fitting the neck of the milk bottle. To this is added a detachable post card upon which the recipient is asked to give up some time to the drive, and to send the card to the central office of the OCD with his name and address and the hours he will donate. Upon receipt of the cards the central office will redistribute them, sending them to proper community offices.

This plan is expected to augment greatly the force of volunteers participating in the drive.

"Buy a bond for a Christmas present" has been adopted as an official slogan by the north side OCD, and canvassers hope to complete the drive by Christmas.

GLENVIEW PLAYERS WILL GIVE COMEDY ON FRIDAY, SATURDAY

The Glenview Players will present "Heaven Can Wait," a comedy fantasy by Harry Segall, Friday and Saturday nights in the Glenview public school gymnasium. Directed by D. C. Nygaard, the play is the fourth production of the two year old little theater group.

D. C. Nygaard.

Jack Byrne has the leading role of a prizefighter who returns to earth from heaven. Others actors are Tom Harper, Laurene Paulson, Steve Tompkins, Yvonne Singer, Sue Douglass, Ralph Arnold, Walter Thiessen, Carol Frische, Tom Dougherty, Verna Lang, Nita Ramsay, Inez Reno, Phil Bowman, Les Meyers, and Ken Ramsay.

Bowman is production manager, assisted by Marie Schneider, Dottie Mead, Frank Poston, Cal Norton, Adeline Blaesing, Fran Harper, Karl Lang, Vic Davis, Barbara Scheuer, Lou Egner, and Irene Mueller.

LIFE WITH POP ON FACULTY NO BED OF ROSES

Keep It Dark, Advise N. U. Offspring.

Kappa.' Then it broke that Andy and I had gone Nu Sigma Nu."

"Get Another Prof!"

Madonna Freeland believes faculty members' boys and girls shy away from being identified as such because they may be put in the "prof and preachers' children bracket, which means you have two strikes against being considered human."

Madonna, aughter of R. O. Freeland, associate professor of botany, advises: "If you have to take the subject your dad teaches, make sure you take it from some one else." She collects tidbits of gossip in Scott Hall grill, then uses them as dinner conversation when strategic, beginning, "I heard something funny today about you, Dad."

Anne Hershey's father, Phares H. Hershey, is professor of romance languages at the downtown campus, so Anne sailed blissfully incognito thru the first half of her freshman year. But you can't get into the a capella choir and go in for student activities without your names being made public.

Arthur H. Nethercot, professor of English in the school of liberal arts, has a son, William, and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Arthur Nethercot Jr., studying at the university. Bill's project is to become a prize winner like his brother Art, who was graduated from Northwestern last fall. When Mrs. Arthur Nethercot Jr. [as Phyllis Scrifres] entered the university she was assigned Prof. Nethercot as official adviser. "But," said the professor, "the one bit of advice I didn't give her was to marry my son. They thought that one up themselves."

Few Emulate Fathers.

Aside from the four Ivy boys, none of the sons and daughters of faculty members interviewed were following their father's specialization.

In addition to the 27 sons and daughters of Northwestern faculty members, 30 other students at the university are sons or daughters of college professors from various parts of the United States. Included in this group are children of two college deans and two college presidents.

Sixty-six students are the children of high school teachers, principals, or superintendents of schools.

MUSIC TEACHERS TO STAGE CLINIC SATURDAY AT N.U.

High School Students to Participate.

Students and faculty members of six north shore high schools will participate, with students and teachers of other Chicagoland schools, in the conference, clinic, and festival of the Illinois Music Educators' association Saturday on the Northwestern university campus.

George Howerton.

Dean John W. Beattie of the Northwestern music school will be host, assisted by Harold Finch, Highland Park, and Traugott Rohner, Evanston. The program will open at 8 a. m. with registration in the music administration building, will include luncheon and dinner meetings, and a performance by the university choir and orchestra. It will close with a discussion of plans at 10 p. m. in Scott hall.

Students to Participate.

Students selected by committees for their musical ability will be organized into a band, symphony orchestra, mixed chorus, girls' chorus, junor boys group, and elementary music classes. Chairmen of these units include Rohner, orchestra; Finch, band, and Marian Cotton of New Trier Township High school, and high school chorus.

Clarence Sawhill, band director at the University of Illinois, will conduct the band and Nicolai Malko, widely known orchestra conductor and educator, will lead the orchestra.

Plan Day of Classes.

Elementary and high school music classes will be directed during the day in Lutkin hall and the Technology auditorium by George Howerton, director of choral activities at Northwestern; Walter Ashenbrenner, director of the Chicago Symphonic choir and the Waukegan Philharmonic chorus; Robert Sheehan, Riverside, and Dean Beattie.

Capt. Lorraine E. Watters, acting chief of the army special services athletic and recreation branch of the 6th service command, will speak on "School Music in the World Scheme" at the luncheon at 12:15 p. m. in the First Methodist church. He is a vice president of the Music Educators' National conference.

Plan Quiz at Dinner.

Dr. Hazel B. Nohaven, head of the University of Minnesota music department and president of the north central division of the conference, will discuss "Music Education and You" at the 5:45 p. m. dinner. A quiz program will follow with Howerton, Aschenbrenner, Sawhill, Malko, Rohner, Dr. Nohavec, Ann Trimingham, Dean Beattie, and George Dasch, director of the Chicago Business Men's orchestra, participating.

Prof. Howerton will direct the university a cappella choir and Dasch will direct the symphony orchestra in a program at 8 p. m. in the Technology auditorium. Other north shore music educators taking part will be Fred Krueger and Sadie Rafferty, Evanston; John Maloney, Lake Forest; Sam Mages and Frances Anderson, New Trier; Clara Krause, Niles, and Otto Graham, Waukegan.

Engagement Told

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence M. Eilert, 904 Castlewood terr., have annouced the engagement of their daughter, Virginia, to Ensign Harold S. Wandling Jr., whose parents reside in Terre Haute, Ind. Both are graduates of the University of Illinois.

CELEBRATE 18TH SEASON OF JACK AND JILL TROUPE

"You'll never know how happy I was in the Jack and Jill theater," is the oft repeated comment of former students of Marie Agnes Foley, who founded the little theater for children on the north side 18 years ago.

Since that November day in 1926, when the door to the playshop by and for children opened, more than a thousand children have trooped thru the stage entrance of the Jack and Jill, and many thousands more have attended the Saturday matinees. The theater has continued without interruption to produce at least one new play each month, with the yearly repertoire sometimes reaching 50 productions.

Actors Start Young.

Both actors and audience come to the theater as young as 3 years of age. Many remain as members until they enter college, and more recently, until they enter service. The service flag of the Jack and Jill has 60 stars—four of gold. Many represented by the the stars grew up with the theater, and keep up regular correspondence with its director.

In founding the theater for children, the plan was not merely to make actors and actresses of the members, but to help them to develop poise, leadership, and clear thinking. By learning thru doing, pupils are forced to depend upon their own judgment and initiative. A few members have gone to Hollywood for pictures, many are performing in radio serials, and a number has gone into the legitimate theater.

Play Winnetka Regularly.

The Jack and Jill troupes have played for 13 years in Winnetka; four times each year they appear in Wilmette, Highland Park, Glencoe, and Lake Forest. They appear during the summer opera season at Ravinia, and play at the outdoor children's theater in Milwaukee. Several years ago they made a good will tour to Canada at the request of the Canadian government.

In addition to their weekly performances in their own theater at 180 E. Delaware pl., the Jack and Jill players are appearing now before returned service men at Great Lakes Naval Training center and are scheduled at the downtown U. S. O. centers.

Canterbury Club.

The Canterbury club will meet at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday in the Edgewater Beach hotel with Mrs. George McCarthy, president, presiding. Mrs. Paul O. Young will be in charge of the social hour and bridge after the business meeting.

SONS AND DADS OF KENILWORTH TO DINE FRIDAY

Boys of Sears school, Kenilworth, will dine with their dads Friday night when the 17th Fathers and Sons football banquet is held at the Kenilworth club. More than 500 are expected to attend.

One hundred sixty-two letter awards will be made to members of Sears' 12 athletic teams, with Robert Townley, athletic director, acting as master of ceremonies.

VOLUNTEERS AID SALE OF SEALS ON NORTH SIDE

Launch Tubercular Fund Campaign.

The 38th Christmas seal campaign, sponsored by the Tuberculosis Institute of Chicago and Cook County, which began recently, continue thru Christmas with 25 residents in north side suburbs serving as chairman for their communities.

"These residents are donating their services, devoting their energies to distributing the seals, and collecting the proceeds, which are used to finance a year-around educational, preventative, and clinical battle against tuberculosis," said Mrs. Theodore B. Sachs, secretary of the institute.

Sold in Sheets of 100.

The seals are sold for one dollar per sheet of 100 and are sent thru the mail to city dwellers in addition to being sold by volunteer workers in department and drug stores, motion picture houses, banks and other business institutions.

The sale provides funds to carry on case findings by means of tuberculin tests and chest x-rays, helps to maintain close coöperation between private physicians thru the institute's nursing and medical staff, and supports an average of 21 chest clinics each month thruout Cook county.

Tell of Program.

The Christmas seal fund has made possible an educational program in the schools and industries concerning tuberculosis. This program includes the distribution of literature, motion pictures, and lectures by institute staff members.

North side volunteer chairmen are Mrs. Frank L. Rector, 823 Case st., Evanston; Mrs. M. M. Tolaksen, Morton Grove; Mrs. Charles Emery, Northbrook; Mrs. W. G. Griffin, Skokie; Mrs. Hamilton Allport, Mrs. L. J. Felsenthal, Mrs. Herbert Phillipborn, and Mrs. William Simon of Glencoe.

List Volunteer Chairmen.

Mrs. Herbert De Young and Mrs. Herbert Kochs, Kenilworth; Mrs. Merrill C. Stowe, Mrs. Norman Waite, and Mrs. William E. Walling of Northfield; Mrs. Arthur L. Fuller, Mrs. William T. Morgan, Mrs. Glen S. Roberts, Mrs. Fred Rye, and Mrs. J. Benton Schaub of Wilmette.

The Rev. Thomas J. Burke of SS. Faith, Hope and Charity church, Winnetka; Mrs. Robert Doepel, Mrs. Jay N. Garner, Mrs. R. C. McNamara, and Miss Mary Williams, Winnetka; Mrs. James Wilson, Glenview, and the Rev. Msgr. Reynold Hillenbrand, Sacred Heart church, Hubbard Woods.

This year's Christmas seal has been taken from a painting by Spence Wildey, art editor of the Woman's Home Companion magazine.

DAY TIME RADIO PROGRAMS SHOW MORE VARIETY

(Radio programs on page 8.)

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. session with radio's day time programs is easier on the ears than it was a few years ago. There are still solid phalanxes of soap operas on NBC and CBS, but W-G-N-Mutual and the Blue network do not have so many. In place of the vanished day time serials we found more of the night time type variety programs: service programs with information of many kinds; more music, mostly recorded, and more news.

The Breakfast club, with Don McNeill and gang, is a diverting half hour which gets the cast up before dawn—and studio, guests, too. But it's better entertainment than some of the most ballyhooed and expensive night time shows. Breakfast at Sardi's, with Tom Breneman, is another worth tuning in if you like comedy in the morning.

Mostly for Women.

June Baker and Elizabeth Hart usually conduct interesting interviews. Their guests include returning heroes, experts and authorities in many fields, and some times visiting celebrities. Bernardine Flynn, so long with Vic and Sade, has many a humorous and escapist note in her news commentary. Ida Bailey Allen continues her superior program for home makers. Lorraine Hall and Ann Hunter are others who must appeal to the day time feminine audience.

Among the other programs we found interesting were Jane Cowl's anecdotes, WLS Dinnerbell Time, W-G-N's Words and Rhythm in which listeners try to stump a panel of experts. On the particular day we listened we got a bonus in the form of a talk by Harold Smith, Chicago Tribune war correspondent and veteran of ten invasions, on the war in the Pacific. What a relief he was from the war commentators and analysts who pontificate from Washington, New York and London.

Hal Tate's Variety show is still going on two years after his entry into military service. His wife conducts the show.

Good Music Available.

For serious music in the day time we can recommend the WAAF Symphonic Hour and the WCFL Music Lovers' Matinee. And there are a lot of other worthwhile musical programs on the FM stations. For light music you might try Morton Downey, Johnny Betts and the Musical Milkwagon. It was a surprise to find programs built around band leaders long since in the service. Alvino Rey, Glen Miller and Dick Stabile among them. The numerous war workers' programs, some piped thru factory loudspeaker systems, seem to avoid swing and sway stuff and concentrate on familiar [nondance] music.

News and More News.

There seems to be a news report about every 15 minutes of the day. As near as we could make out, John Holbrook and Julian Bentley get the heaviest workout.

No Sinatra record program appeared on the list, perhaps because the bobby sock brigade is in school during the day time hours. But there were plenty of Bing Crosby records available.

FLIES 50TH MISSION AS BOMBARDIER OF FORTRESS IN ITALY

First Lt. Frederick J. Steinmiller, 27, of 7326 N. Damen av., recently flew his 50th mission as bombardier of a Flying Fortress based in Italy. The lieutenant began his combat flying with a raid on the Ploesti oil fields last June and made his 50th flight when his unit attacked enemy installations at Salzburg, Germany. The flyer's mother is Mrs. Rose Steinmiller, 2149 Touhy av., and his wife, Mrs. Mary Nell Steinmiller, lives at the Damen av. address. Lt. Steinmiller was graduated from Loyola university and employed in civil life as a passenger agent at Municipal airport.

CITIZENS SHOW PLANS A SALUTE TO FLOWER HIGH

Two Senior Girls Will Be Honored.

Students of Flower Technical High school, appearing on The Chicago Tribune's 150th Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast on W-G-N at 10 a. m. Saturday, will swell to a total of more than a quarter million the number of midwest students who have been honored by the program. The recording for the broadcast will be made at 2 p. m. Wednesday in the school assembly hall, 3545 Fulton blvd.

Herman D. Smith.

Philip Maxwell, master of ceremonies, will be introduced by Dr. Sophie A. Theilgaard, principal of the school which serves all Chicago. The Flower choir, directed by Lydia F. Cleaver and accompanied by John A. Wiederhirn, will sing two numbers.

Girl to Play Accordion.

Susan Madala will play an accordion arrangement of Metallo's "Sharpshooter's March." Hermon Dunlap Smith, grandson of Mrs. Lucy Flower, after whom the school was named, will speak.

The names of Lois Vivian Green, Flower High senior, and June Yolton, Bloomington [Ill.] High school senior, will be added to the program's honor roll. Miss Green is on the staff of the school paper, a librarian, and church worker, and hopes to be a singer.

Girls to Lead Cheers.

News about other high school activities will be read by Margaret Gilmer, 3250 N. Monticello av., a senior who has played leading roles in school dramas. Cheer leaders for the program will be Marilyn Czosek, Elenore Dixon, and Phyllis Le Velle.

Prior to Wednesday's recording the colors will be posted by Florene D'Alexander, Elaine De Luca, Betty Hawkins, Louise Janowik, Gloria Russell, and June Stockton.

'WALTZ DREAM' NEXT OPERETTA FOR AIR THEATER

Oscar Straus' Viennese operetta, "A Waltz Dream," will be given its radio premiere on the Chicago Theater of the Air Saturday before an audience of more than 4,500 persons in Medinah temple. The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the coast-to-coast Mutual network from 9 to 10 p. m.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Chicago Tribune, will speak on the program.

Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the series, will be starred. Gilbert Russell, tenor, will be heard as Lt. Nikki. Supporting roles will be sung by Earle Wilkie, baritone, and Ruth Slater, contralto.

Strauss' music for the production will be played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and the chorus coached by Robert Trendler.

Mozart's 36th Symphony on W-G-N on Tuesday

Henry Weber will conduct the W-G-N Symphony orchestra in Mozart's Symphony No. 36 [Linzer] on the Symphony hall program over W-G-N, WGNB Tuesday night at 8:30. The program will include Barber's "Essay for Orchestra" and Liszt's "Les Preludes."

$556,000,000.00
For Douglas War and Postwar Planes!

Douglas now has a $416,000,000 backlog order for war planes . . . and $140,000,000 in postwar orders from major airlines, including huge contracts for C-54 Combat transports. The C-54 is the transport companion to the B-29 Super Fortress which is now starting to bomb Japan into oblivion. The C-54 is the world's largest 4-motor transport in volume production and has the cabin dimensions of a standard railroad box car. Adapted for postwar airline use, it will be designated the DC-4. This is the plane used by President Roosevelt in his flights to Casablanca, Terheran, and Cairo. Now it is carrying munitions and men to the fighting front and wounded back to safety. After the war it will carry millions of airline passengers. This plane is built in the Douglas Chicago plant. You are needed to build it.

DON'T LET OPPORTUNITY PASS YOU BY!

HELP BUILD GIANT C-54's
Vitally Needed in the Pacific . . Start Your Postwar Future Today

After the war, aviation will be one of the major industries in the Chicago area. Airlines, aircargo carriers, maintenance and operations shops, and aircraft plants will have good jobs for workers who are properly trained. Prepare for your career in aviation NOW by working in the Chicago plant of Douglas Aircraft Company. No "cutbacks" or "layoffs" in sight here. Douglas employes will work at full capacity building vitally needed military transport planes until Japan is defeated. Then they will build planes for the airlines on orders already booked this far ahead.

You can get expert training here in aircraft skills that could well qualify you for profitable employment building peacetime airplanes or in the huge maintenance and operations plants which the airlines and aircargo enterprises will set up all over the country after the war. And you can be trained in working with the lighter metals such as aluminum and magnesium which will be used in the manufacture of so many postwar consumer goods.

Meanwhile you will be well paid for enjoyable work. Experienced or inexperienced . . . we train you so that you are bound to make good in fabrication, shop, assembly and installation work . . . what we term "beating on the airplanes." As interesting work as you'll ever find. If you want to serve your country, learn a new business, make good money and really enjoy your job, don't delay. If not already engaged in essential industry, come to:

Recreation Exposition Will Show Artcraft Work of South Side Parks

Under supervision of Betty Kreuzer, artcraft instructor, Carol Carlson, 9, 7149 Champlain av., puts the finishing touches on some paintings that will be displayed at the Chicago park district's 2d annual recreation exposition Thursday and Friday at Calumet park, 98th st. and Lake Michigan. Marie Weinert, 11, 7728 Langley av., looks on. The children are members of the Grand Crossing park children's art and sketch group.

In preparation for the Calumet park exhibit, Sam Di Santo, 12, 9603 Avenue M, saws a figure on a power driven jig saw. Watching him are William Sands, instructor, and Patrick Devoy, 13, 9469 Ewing av., who holds a deer he has just made. The boys are members of the woodworking class which makes toys and other small wooden articles out of scrap plywood and lumber.

MILLION MUMS WILL BEAUTIFY AREA ON S. SIDE

Will Give Prizes for Best Blooms.

A project to beautify Woodlawn so it will be recognized as "the chrysanthemum community" was announced last week by the Woodlawn Property Owners' league in conjunction with the Woodlawn Business Men's association and the University of Chicago.

The plan, which calls for planting a million mums over five years, is a part of the Woodlawn conservation project, a survey soon to be released by the Chicago plan commission.

Donate 5,000 Plants.

Beginning this summer, the league will give to 1,000 Woodlawn residents, five chrysanthemum plants. Each recipient will be eligible for cash prizes totaling $1,000 offered by the Business Men's association for the most brilliant displays to be developed over the five year term.

The flowers to be planted are of the hardy, frost-resisting type developed over a period of years by the department of botany of the University of Chicago, under direction of Dr. Ezra J. Kraus.

Two fields, one at 61st st. and University av., and one at 60th st. and Dorchester av., totaling 20,000 square feet, have been converted into flower boxes into which have been dumped 30,000 cubic feet of earth and 10,000 cubic feet of fertilizer. In May 6,000 chrysanthemum cuttings will be set out to be distributed by the league about Sept. 1. The league will provide each participant with complete instructions for planting and care of the plants.

Award Prizes in 1950.

Additional strains will be developed and distributed, making 25 types which will be growing by the fall of 1950 when prizes will be awarded.

Chrysanthemums, native to China, have been grown in America nearly a century, but it was only recently that these early, more fragile blooms have been crossed successfully with Siberian and Korean species to produce an almost new flower which defies frost, blooming until late in November.

Serving on the Woodlawn project committee are Albert H. Chapman, E. Hector Coates Jr., Emsley A. Cleeton, John Hayes, Leo T. Held, Lyndon H. Lesch, Frank J. O'Brien, John L. Sharpe, and Roger Swift.

Application blanks are available at headquarters of the league, 1230 E. 63d st., and at stores of Woodlawn merchants who have contributed to the prize fund.

Christian Service Groups to Meet at St. Stephen's

CREWMAN ON FORT WOUNDED IN BOMB RUN OVER GERMANY

Staff Sgt. John P. Durkin, whose wife, Mary, lives at 7641 Evans av., a radio operator on an 8th air force Flying Fortress, has been decorated with the Purple Heart for wounds received during a recent bombing attack on Lauta, Germany. He has since recovered from the wounds. A veteran of more than a score of combat missions against enemy installations, he holds the air medal and two clusters. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Durkin, live at 3641 64th pl.

Sgt. John P. Durkin.

60, HE WALKS ALONE TO KEEP A SUNDAY DATE

Altho the recent strike on the Chicago North Shore and Milwaukee railroad inconvenienced thousands of north siders who use the road for transportation, it didn't deter A. L. Nixon, 60, 1742 E. 68th st., from keeping his Sunday date with the North Shore Hiking club.

When he couldn't ride the railroad to keep his weekly rendezvous with the club at the Winnetka village hall, he solved the problem by arising an hour earlier, riding the elevated to the end of the line in Wilmette and then walking to Winnetka, four miles away. He rested during the ride to the woods along the Des Plaines river where the club usually hikes. Following a six to eight mile hike thru the woods, he had another chance to relax during the drive back to Winnetka. Getting out of the car refreshed, he walked four miles back to Wilmette, boarded the elevated again and rode home.

Nixon, who has been hiking for 10 years because it gives him a chance to get out in the fresh air, joined the North Shore Hiking club two years ago.

SCHOOL BOARD NAMES EIGHTH DISTRICT HEAD

Appointee Is Active with R. O. T. C.

Thaddeus J. Lubera, veteran of 21 years in the Chicago public school system, has been named superintendent of the 8th elementary school district. The district, which includes 39 schools, 29,000 pupils, and more than 700 teachers, is bounded by 60th and 85th sts., Lake Michigan, and the west city limits.

Lubera assumed direction after a two year term as principal of Marshall High school. He relieves Angela M. Cylkowski, 6153 S. Fairfield av., who held the post almost six years. The shift was necessitated when Miss Cylkowski reached the retirement age of 65.

Working on Doctor's Degree.

The new superintendent holds a master's degree in education from De Paul university. He holds a bachelor's degree from Lewis institute and attended Chicago Teachers' college and Armour Institute of Technology. He has completed most of his work on a doctor's degree at the University of Chicago.

A native Chicagoan, Lubera attended public schools here and was graduated from Senn High school, where he was a baseball and track man and business manager of the school paper. He was in the first reserve officers training corps there and rose to the rank of major during his four years of training.

He has maintained his interest in both sports and the R. O. T. C. At Hirsch High scohol, where Lubera was principal before going to Marshall, he was credited with helping to build the corps to honor rating. At Marshall, where for years the R. O. T. C. ranked lowest in the city, he again instituted measures which brought an honor rating for the first time in 28 years.

Knows His R. O. T. C.

The superintendent explained that his devotion to the corps results not only from knowledge that thousands of high school trainees now hold commissions in the army and navy, but also from observance of improvement in the students' deportment and neatness.

The duties of the district superintendent as Lubera sees them are to increase the effectiveness of the learning program, to direct the in-service training of principals and teachers, supervise research and development of new materials of instruction, and evaluate results of educational practices.

District headquarters are in the Sexton school, 641 E. 60th st. Lubera, who is married and has two sons, resides at 3719 N. Sawyer av.

6 SOUTH SIDERS WIN D. F. C.'S ON BOMBING RAIDS

One Attacks Targets as Plane's Tail Burns.

Six south siders, four serving with the 8th air force in England and two with the 15th air force in Italy, have been awarded distinguished flying crosses. They are Lt. Russell W. Kaczmarek, 8620 Kingston av.; Staff Sgt. Kenneth H. Walker, 7008 Harper av.; Lt. Robert C. Evans, 6141 Woodlawn av.; Lt. Walter T. Prebis, 9618 Essex av., with the 8th air force, and Tech. Sgt. Leo F. O'Brien Jr., 7422 Rhodes av., and Capt. William G. Scavone, 7845 Calumet av., with the 15th air force.

Capt. W. G Scavone.

Bombardier on a Liberator bomber, Capt. Scavone has completed 44 combat missions. His first mission was an attack on an aircraft factory at Regensburg, Germany, and his latest was against communication lines in northern Italy. A former student at Northwestern university, he enlisted in the army in March, 1942. He also holds the air medal with three clusters. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony T. Scavone, reside at the Calumet av. address.

Completes 50 Missions.

Sgt. O'Brien has completed 50 combat missions as a radio operator and gunner on a Liberator bomber. On a recent mission over Vienna, Austria, his plane was attacked by 15 enemy fighter planes before its bombs could be released. Altho his plane was severely damaged, it kept formation to bomb its targets. Subsequent fighter attacks smashed the plexi-glass nose and upper turrets, exposing the gunners to subzero blasts. While a fire blazed in the tail turret, three enemy planes were shot down. The plane returned safely to its home base.

Lt. Kaczmarek is co-pilot on a Flying Fortress. He took part in the first shuttle mission to Russia, when an oil refinery in Berlin was bombed, and in six other attacks against Berlin. He has bombed oil refineries at Brux, Madgeburg, Leipzig, and Zeitz, a ball bearing plant at Schweinfurt, aircraft plants at Posen and Rostok, marshaling yards at Cologne and Munster, and he saw action on D-day. He holds the air medal and three clusters. He is the son of Mrs. Lillian Kaczmarek who lives at the Kingston av. address.

Has Air Medal, Clusters.

Ball turret gunner on a Flying Fortress, Sgt. Walker has participated on 27 raids against enemy held positions in Europe. He arrived overseas May 1 and holds the air medal and three clusters. His wife, Ruth, lives at the Harper av. address.

Lt. Evans, pilot of a Flying Fortress, has completed more than 25 missions against such targets as Munich, Leipzig, Merseburg, Cologne, and objectives in France and Holland. A former Hyde Park High school student, he enlisted in October, 1942. He also holds the air medal with three clusters. He is the son of Charles D. Evans of the Woodlawn av. address.

Lt. Prebis has completed more than a score of missions as a Flying Fortress bombardier. He is a member of the 92d bombardment group, oldest Fortress unit in the 8th air force. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Prebis, reside at the Essex av. address.

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

First Lt. Norman H. Armour is the commander of an anti-aircraft division platoon fighting in Germany which recently captured six Nazi soldiers. A graduate of Morgan Park Junior college, he was working for a meat packing company when he entered the army three years ago. His wife, Betty, is living in Savannah, Ga., and his parents live at 6856 Paxton av.

Lt. Norman Armour.

The air medal has been presented 2d Lt. Hannibal M. Cox Jr., whose wife, Vera, lives at 616 E. 67th st. Lt. Cox is a Mustang fighter pilot with the 15th air force in Italy. During strafing attacks on enemy airdromes in western Hungary he destroyed four planes on the ground.

Radioman and gunner on a Liberator bomber based in England, Tech. Sgt. John F. Cahill has been awarded the air medal. He enlisted in the air force Nov. 29, 1941, and has been overseas five months. He has completed 12 missions. Prior to entering the service he lived with his brother, Michael J. Cahill, 7128 Merrill av.

Sgt. John F. Cahill.

Second Lt. Lloyd W. Woodruff, 4520 Woodlawn av., a member of the 81st [Wildcat] division, has been awarded the Purple Heart for wounds received in action against the Japanese on Angaur Island.

Three south siders have completed combat orientation courses in England. They are Flight Officer Robert F. Crilly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Crilly, 8937 Houston av.; Corp. Peter J. Tiardovich, son of Mrs. Mary Tiardovich, 3229 Wentworth av., and Flight Officer Alan M. Israel, son of Mrs. V. E. Israel, 1115 Hyde Park blvd.

Pvt. Louis H. Armstrong, whose wife, Mary, lives at 7235 Dobson av., is recovering at an army hospital in England from shrapnel wounds in his right arm which he received while hunting snipers in a small French village near St. Lo.

A third cluster to the air medal has been awarded to 2d Lt. William E. Holladay, bombardier of an 8th air force Flying Fortress based in England. His wife, Hermione, lives in Los Angeles, Cal., and his mother, Mrs. Mary E. Holladay, lives at 4545 Woodlawn av.

While serving as bombardier aboard an 8th air force Flying Fortress based in England, 1st Lt. Bernard L. Klotz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Klotz, 5428 Drexel av., has been awarded the air medal and three oak leaf clusters for meritorious achievement.

Walter F. Holland Jr., whose parents live at 7541 Cornell av., recently graduated from the merchant marine academy at King's Point, N. Y., with the rank of ensign and rating of 3d mate. Now serving aboard a Victory ship on the Pacific, he previously served in the Atlantic and Mediterranean war zones.

Two south siders serving in France with the 36th division of the 7th army were promoted recently. They are Tech. Sgt. Irving Levinsohn, son of Mrs. Edith Levinsohn, 4631 Drexel bldv., and Corp. Edward C. McGillen, son of Mrs. Ann McGillen, 7703 Dobson av.

Sgt. Milo L. Colby, son of Samuel G. Colby, 5728 Blackstone av., is a member of a 12th air force signal company in Italy. He recently completed his first year of service overseas. His wife, Margaret, also resides at the Blackstone av. address.

Sgt. Milo Colby.

The bronze star medal has been awarded Tech. Sgt. Robert B. Koch, son of Mrs. Olive Koch, Calumet City, who is with the 85th division of the 5th army in Italy.

Second Lt. Earl W. Hendry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Hendry, 2105 E. 93d st., was graduated recently as a Liberator bomber pilot from the Fort Worth, Tex., army air field.

Lt. Earl Hendry.

Charles W. Harroun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Harroun, 1028 E. 41st pl., has completed six months' training as a cadet midshipman aboard a merchant ship carrying war supplies. He has been assigned to the merchant marine academy at King's Point, N. Y., for advanced training. He is a graduate of Tilden High school.

Lt. Francis R. Kelly, son of Mrs. Anna Kelly, 7029 Merrill av., has completed a course in advanced bombing techniques and teaching methods at the bombardier's school at Midland army air field, Midland, Tex. Holder of the distinguished flying cross and the air medal with three oak leaf clusters, Lt. Kelly has completed 26 missions in the European theater.

After spending one and a half years in the Pacific where he participated in invasions of Guadalcanal, Bougainville, Timan, Tarawa, Guam, and Truk, Coast Guardsman James D. Kiely, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Kiely, 8113 Merrill av., returned home on leave recently. He was a chief petty officer aboard an attack ship. He is a graduate of Mount Carmel High school and Centennary college, Shreveport, La., where he played football and basketball. He was an engineer for the board of education before enlisting in 1941.

The bronze star medal has been awarded Staff Sgt. Carl E. Boettcher, 1535 E. 80th st., who is serving with an engineers battalion in France.

Sgt. William Pacelli, 2642 Wells st., has been awarded the bronze star medal for service in support of combat operations against the enemy in France. A graduate of De La Salle High school, he has been in the army two years.

The Purple Heart has been awarded Sgt. Jay S. Merriman, son of Mrs. Henrietta Merriman, 7504 Colfax av., ball turret gunner of an 8th air force Flying Fortress based in England. Holder of the air medal and one cluster, he has returned to active duty.

PHYSICIAN TAKES NEW TECHNIQUES TO S.W. PACIFIC

New surgical techniques in the treatment of fractures have been introduced in the Southwest Pacific by Dr. Sidney Sideman, Chicagoan, according to friends who have letters from the physician. Among the latter is Jerome Bomash, 1460 E. 55th st.

Several letters from the Chicago doctor indicate that he is serving in a 1,000 bed hospital in the Pacific theater of war. In a letter to Bomash, the psysician said, "It is worth every sacrifice I have made to be able to put my experience to such good use."

Uses Splints for Fractures.

Dr. Sideman indicated he is using tin splints with unusual success in bone fracture cases. His letters told friends he is almost exclusively treating marines whose arms or legs have been shattered.

Dr. Sideman, when he enlisted early in 1942, lived at 1219 Madison Park, with his wife, Faye, and children, Susan, 10, and Michael, 3. The family now resides in Los Angeles, Cal. The surgeon lived 10 years on the south side, and maintained an office in the loop.

The doctor also referred in his letters to the "pin" method of treating fractures.

Pin Method Is a Sensation.

In one letter he wrote: "I have seven other orthopedic surgeons helping me. I treated all the severe fractures with the pin method [that's mechanical external fixation] without the use of casts or weights or pulleys. That created quite a sensation out here. This is probably the only place outside of the United States where we are undertaking this kind of work."

Dr. Sideman is a navy physician, with the rank of lieutenant commander.

JACKSON PARK LEGION SEEKS GIFTS FOR VETS

Stanley Van Dyk, 6945 Oglesby av., of the Jackson Park American Legion post, is Cook county chairman of a state-wide drive being launched by the Legion, its auxiliary, and subsidiary organizations to collect Christmas gifts for the 18,000 incapacitated service men and women in Illinois.

The gifts will be collected thru bureaus established by local posts and will be distributed to patients in federal and state hospitals on Christmas day. Community business men's organizations, church groups, and schools are among the civic bodies coöperating with the Legion.

The Legion has asked that the purchase value of gifts be kept between one and five dollars. Gifts most popular with hospitalized fighters include writing kits, lighters, wallets, cologne, toiletries, manicuring sets, books, handkerchiefs, shaving kits, playing cards, games, sweaters, and cigarets, a survey revealed. Hospital authorities have requested that no razor blades, candy, or food be included in the packages.

American Women at War

Margaret V. Weaver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noel P. Weaver, 5444 Ellis av., was graduated recently from officer candidate school at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and commissioned a second lieutenant. She was the 1941 national wet fly casting champion and is the only woman to cast a perfect score in the national indoor tournament. A graduate of Hyde Park High school and the American College of Physical Education, she was the casting and recreation instructor of the park district for a time. Since joining the WAC she has been stationed at Miami Beach, Fla., and Greensboro, N. C. Her brother, Noel M. Weaver, is a captain with the field artillery in the South Pacific.

Lt. Margaret Weaver.

Alma Vera Bavery, 7711 Luella av., a seaman 2d class in the WAVES, has completed basic training and indoctrination at the naval training school in New York City. She has been ordered to report to Cleveland, O.

Ann Heiser, daughter of Charles Heiser, 5481 Drexel av., and head nurse of the surgery ward at a station hospital in England, recently was promoted to first lieutenant. Supervisor of a staff of enlisted technicians, she was a surgical nurse at Billings hospital prior to entering the army nurse corps.

Elaine Light, 6751 Clyde av., is serving with the WAVES in Washington, D. C.

Patricia Jean Minahan, daughter of Lt. and Mrs. Mark A. Minahan, 8000 Vernon av., has enlisted in the WAVES and soon will report to Hunter college, New York City, for basic training. She is a graduate of Mercy High school. Her father is stationed in the South Pacific, training crews for L. C. I. ships.

WOODLAWN POST WILL SEE FLIGHT TRAINING OF CAP

The Mount Carmel High school civil air patrol unit will display a series of flight training and war action pictures at the Woodlawn American Legion post at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow in the clubrooms, 6308 Woodlawn av.

New members will be inducted by the post's ritual team headed by John Norris, 6447 Kimbark av.

The post is preparing an honor roll containing the names of Woodlawn service men who have been killed in the war. Families of such service men are requested to notify the post adjutant, John S. Brill, 5743 Maryland av.

The post also is participating in the state-wide Legion drive to collect Christmas gifts for 18,000 hospitalized Illinois service men and women. The post will concentrate on Hines hospital, and is being aided in its campaign by members of the auxiliary, civic groups, and merchants.

Past Comdr. Bruno Zingrone, 6531 Drexel av., heads the committee which will distribute gifts on Christmas day.

Fredric March Visits Hall of Fame Today

Fredric March, Victor Borge, and Georgia Gibbs are scheduled to appear as guests on the Radio Hall of Fame over WENR-Blue at 5 p. m. today. March is to be featured in a preview of the forthcoming film, "A Bell for Adano." Paul Whiteman and his orchestra, program regulars, will highspot a medley of Stephen Foster songs.

ON SHORT WAVES

LONDON.

The North American service of the BBC from London includes the following programs today. The frequencies (in megacycles) employed after 4:15 p. m. are: 11.93, 9.58, 9.52, 6.11, 7.26, 9.51. 4:45 p. m.—News. 6:30 p. m.—Radio Newsreel. 8:15 p. m.—Sunday Service. 9:10 p. m.—Tomorrow's London Papers. 11:30 p. m.—News reports.

DAY TIME RADIO PROGRAMS SHOW MORE VARIETY

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. session with radio's day time programs is easier on the ears than it was a few years ago. There are still solid phalanxes of soap operas on NBC and CBS, but W-G-N-Mutual and the Blue network do not have so many. In place of the vanished day time serials we found more of the night time type variety programs: service programs with information of many kinds; more music, mostly recorded, and more news.

The Breakfast club, with Don McNeill and gang, is a diverting half hour which gets the cast up before dawn—and studio, guests, too. But it's better entertainment than some of the most ballyhooed and expensive night time shows. Breakfast at Sardi's, with Tom Breneman, is another worth tuning in if you like comedy in the morning.

Mostly for Women.

June Baker and Elizabeth Hart usually conduct interesting interviews. Their guests include returning heroes, experts and authorities in many fields, and some times visiting celebrities. Bernardine Flynn, so long with Vic and Sade, has many a humorous and escapist note in her news commentary. Ida Bailey Allen continues her superior program for home makers. Lorraine Hall and Ann Hunter are others who must appeal to the day time feminine audience.

Among the other programs we found interesting were Jane Cowl's anecdotes, WLS Dinnerbell Time, W-G-N's Words and Rhythm in which listeners try to stump a panel of experts. On the particular day we listened we got a bonus in the form of a talk by Harold Smith, Chicago Tribune war correspondent and veteran of ten invasions, on the war in the Pacific. What a relief he was from the war commentators and analysts who pontificate from Washington, New York and London.

Good Music Available.

For serious music in the day time we can recommend the WAAF Symphonic Hour and the WCFL Music Lovers' Matinee. And there are a lot of other worthwhile musical programs on the FM stations. For light music you might try Morton Downey, Johnny Betts and the Musical Milkwagon. It was a surprise to find programs built around band leaders long since in the service, Alvino Rey, Glen Miller and Dick Stabile among them. The numerous war workers' programs, some piped thru factory loudspeaker systems, seem to avoid swing and sway stuff and concentrate on familiar [nondance] music.

Hal Tate's Variety show is still going on two years after his entry into military service. His wife conducts the show.

News and More News.

There seems to be a news report about every 15 minutes of the day. As near as we could make out, John Holbrook and Julian Bentley get the heaviest workout.

No Sinatra record program appeared on the list, perhaps because the bobby sock brigade is in school during the day time hours. But there were plenty of Bing Crosby records available.

We found numerous other diverting periods. And we also encountered something we never have in the evening: A program that consists entirely of commercials. After surviving this ordeal we reached the conclusion that, while day time radio is making progress, there is still room for improvement.

Air Beethoven's Fifth Symphony Over W-G-N

Beethoven's Fifth Symphony in C minor, widely known as the "Victory" Symphony, will be featured by the Cleveland Symphony orchestra on W-G-N at 11 o'clock tonight. The orchestra, under the direction of Rudolph Ringwall.

At Navy Pier

Joe Kelly and the Quiz Kids will broadcast from Navy pier before an audience of bond buyers at 6:30 o'clock tonight over WENR-Blue

'WALTZ DREAM' NEXT OPERETTA FOR AIR THEATER

Oscar Straus' Viennese operetta, "A Waltz Dream," will be given its radio premiere on the Chicago Theater of the Air Saturday before an audience of more than 4,500 persons in Medinah temple. The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the coast-to-coast Mutual network from 9 to 10 p. m.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Chicago Tribune, will speak on the program.

Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the series, will be starred. Gilbert Russell, tenor, will be heard as Lt. Nikki. Supporting roles will be sung by Earle Wilkie, baritone, and Ruth Slater, contralto.

Strauss' music for the production will be played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and the chorus coached by Robert Trendler.

Mozart's 36th Symphony on W-G-N on Tuesday

Henry Weber will conduct the W-G-N Symphony orchestra in Mozart's Symphony No. 36 [Linzer] on the Symphony hall program over W-G-N, WGNB Tuesday night at 8:30. The program will include Barber's "Essay for Orchestra" and Liszt's "Les Preludes."

CITIZENS SHOW PLANS A SALUTE TO FLOWER HIGH

Students of Flower Technical High school, appearing on The Chicago Tribune's 150th Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast on W-G-N at 10 a. m. Saturday, will swell to a total of more than a quarter million the number of midwest students who have been honored by the program. The recording for the broadcast will be made at 2 p. m. Wednesday in the school assembly hall, 3545 Fulton blvd.

Herman D. Smith.

Phillip Maxwell, master of ceremonies, will be introduced by Dr. Sophie A. Theilgaard, principal of the school which serves all Chicago. The Flower choir, directed by Lydia F. Cleaver and accompanied by John A. Wiederhirn, will sing two numbers.

Girl to Play Accordion.

Susan Madala will play an accordion arrangement of Metallo's "Sharpshooter's March." Hermon Dunlap Smith, grandson of Mrs. Lucy Flower, after whom the school was named, will speak.

The names of Lois Vivian Green, Flower High senior, and June Yolton, Bloomington [Ill.] High school senior, will be added to the program's honor roll. Miss Green is on the staff of the school paper, a librarian, and church worker, and hopes to be a singer.

Girls to Lead Cheers.

News about other high school activities will be read by Margaret Gilmer, 3250 N. Monticello av., a senior who has played leading roles in school dramas. Cheer leaders for the program will be Marilyn Czosek, Elenore Dixon, and Phyllis Le Velle.

Prior to Wednesday's recording the colors will be posted by Florene D'Alexander, Elaine De Luca, Betty Hawkins, Louise Janowik, Gloria Russell, and June Stockton.

NBC Symphony.

The NBC Symphony orchestra, conducted by Arturo Toscanini, will present Beethoven's Septet in E flat and his Symphony No. 2 in D major over WMAQ-NBC at 4 p. m. today.

Discuss Taxes, Jobs on Review Stand Today

"Federal Taxes and Post-War Jobs" is the subject slated for discussion on the Northwestern Reviewing Stand to be broadcast over W-G-N-Mutual at 10:30 a. m. today. John L. Connolly, Neil Jacoby, and Harry Guthmann will participate.

OPEN THURSDAY, SATURDAY EVES.

NOW—A "Pat with a Pad" Ends Fear of Underarm Perspiration and Odor

Women say, "Why didn't somebody think of it before—this safe—sure—instant way to really stop my perspiration worries?" 5-Day is not a deodorant cream, not a liquid—just tiny dainty pads you pat under your arms.
Results are astounding! Underarm perspiration is controlled, perspiration odor prevented for days! (1 to 5 days, depending on you.) Simply use 5-Day according to directions and you need have no fear about even your finest silks and rayons.
This safe, gentle "pat with a pad" way won't irritate skin, and is so much nicer to use, it instantly appeals to dainty women. Economical, too. The generous 35-pad supply in each jar lasts many women 3 to 5 months.
FREE: Send for generous trial supply. No obligation. Send name and address to Associated Distributors, Inc., Dept. 53, Chicago 10, Ill.

Roger N. Emmertz, son of Mrs. Nelson A. Emmertz, La Grange, and husband of Mrs. Vera Emmertz of Peoria, Ill., has been promoted to lieutenant colonel at an air base of the 15th air force service command in Italy. Col. Emmertz, a group executive officer, was graduated from Lyons Township High school and Knox college, Galesburg, Ill. Prior to his enlistment in the army in July, 1941, he was a salesman.

Lt. Col. Roger Emmertz.

Pvt. Bernard Barkau, 3147 Roosevelt rd., was a member of a .30 caliber machine gun crew which recently forced surrender of a German machine gun crew 600 yards away on the 5th army front in Italy.

Sgt. Edward J. Pekol, 2114 23d pl., has reported for duty at the air technical service command, Wright field, Dayton, O., and has been assigned to radio and radar work.

Gordon T. Hart, boatswain's mate 2d class, son of Mrs. Laura Hart, Cicero, recently hitchhiked from New Guinea to the United States and has been named company commander in the navy academic refresher unit at Colgate university, Hamilton, N. Y. By hitchhiking on planes and ships, Hart made the trip, which ordinarily would have taken about two months, in five and a half days. A graduate of Morton High school, Cicero, he attended Morton Junior college and was employed by the Western Electric company before he joined the navy. He is one of 86 men recently assigned to the Colgate unit from the fleet.

Gordon T. Hart.

Lt. Judd G. Vear, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard R. Vear, Wheaton, is a member of a P-51 Mustang group stationed in England. He is a graduate of Wheaton Community High school and attended Purdue university. Lt. Vear was commissioned a lieutenant in the army air forces last March and now participates in heavy bomber escort, strafing and dive bombing missions supporting the allied forces on the western front. A brother, Charles T. Vear, recently joined the navy.

Lt. Judd Vear.

Pvt. Robert A. Luckey, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Luckey, 2011 Roosevelt rd., has received a commendation from the commanding officer at Fort Sheridan for a "display of initiative and courage" in locating and capturing an escaped prisoner. Pvt. Luckey, assigned to a military police company, was cited for an incident on Oct. 22 when a garrison prisoner broke away from his guard while on a work detail. He was captured by civilian police Officers to be seated are Marie Mandl, president; Bessie Vanicek and Agnes Justin, vice presidents; Emma Mazanec, recording secretary; Bessie Zundalek, financial secretary; Mary Moravec, corresponding secretary; Rose North, treasurer, and Bessie Cepelak, custodian.

YULE CONCERT WILL BE GIVEN AT CONCORDIA

The music and arts departments of Concordia Teachers college will present a Christmas concert at 8:15 p. m. next Sunday at the college gymnasium in River Forest.

The program will include the college band, directed by Richard T. Rohlfing, which will play accompaniment for a series of tableaux on Christmas; "Rejoice Beloved Christians," sung by the Concordia High school choir, under the direction of Victor Hildner, and community singing of "Adeste Fideles."

The concert will be held under the auspices of the student affairs committee of the college and the extracurricular committee of the high school.

Dr. J. C. Irwin to Speak at Congress Park Church

Dr. John C. Irwin of the faculty of Garrett Biblical institute will be guest tonight at a homecoming tea at the Congress Park Community church. Dr. Irwin, native of La Grange, served as student pastor at the Congress Park church. He will speak on "Foxhole Religion."

Choice Yule Gift Will Speed to 3 Yanks

One of the finest gifts in Santa Claus' pack is in prospect for nine fighting men overseas who will receive pictures of their new-born babies. V-mail photos are furnished the service men's wives by the Metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE to be sent to battle fronts all over the world.

Lt. [j. g.] Charles Howell Gedge, whose wife, Jone, told him to look in the mirror if he wanted to see his son, Charles Howell Jr., soon will have a more accurate picture. Lt. Gedge has been on destroyer duty in the Pacific since last January. Charles Howell Jr., born June 1, lives with his mother and maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Karl H. Rehnberg, at 1319 Ashland av., River Forest.

In a letter to his wife, Beatrice, Pvt. Gilbert G. Meyer said he could hardly wait to see his daughter, Pamella, born Aug. 4. Pamella's picture soon will be on its way to her father who is on duty in the European theater of operations. Pamella and her mother live at 4113 S. Maple av., Berwyn. Pvt. Meyer, overseas since last June, formerly was employed in the auditing department of THE TRIBUNE.

Sgt. Michael J. Sylvestro already has made plans to spoil his daughter, Joyce Marie, born July 11, when he comes home. Mrs. Camille Sylvestro and her daughter live at 1452 Lexington st.

St. Ignatius Mothers Will Hold Tea Tuesday

The monthly meeting and the annual Christmas tea and pantry shower of the St. Ignatius Mothers' club will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in Damen hall, 1076 Roosevelt rd. Mrs. Emmett Moroney, chairman, will be assisted by Mrs. Roger Wright, program chairman, who will present the a cappella choir from Mercy High school. Mrs. Owen Cooke is president of the club and the Rev. Bernard Foote, S. J., is moderator.

PLAN LARGEST SCOUT TURNOUT IN W. SUBURBS

Program Tuesday Marks 25th Year.

The largest turnout for any program in the 25 year history of the West Suburban Boy Scout council is expected Tuesday night at an anniversary program when Angelo Patri will speak on "Education—a Coöperative Enterprise" in the auditorium of Lyons Township High school, La Grange.

Special announcements of the meeting have been carried by each district chairman to church and school organizations and to service clubs in the area from Berwyn to Downers Grove and from Westchester to Summit and Argo. Mr. Patri was obtained for the meeting thru arrangements started nine months ago by John Rowe of Western Springs.

Interesting Program Planned.

While Mr. Patri's address will be the highlight of the evening, other interesting events have been arranged by the program chairman, Carl Smith of La Grange, and his committee.

The program will open with an organ prelude by H. R. Luttenbacher, a member of the council's executive board. The Rev. Emerson O. Houser, minister of the First Presbyterian church of La Grange, will give the invocation. The color ceremony will be directed by J. D. Kirkpatrick, Scoutmaster of troop 39, La Grange.

Carl D. Smith, chairman of the La Grange Scout district, will extend greetings. N. M. Symonds of Hinsdale, president of the council, will speak on "The Silver Anniversary of the Council."

Will Present Tableau.

Mr. Symonds also will present the top award of the Scoutmaster Key to one of the council's ablest leaders whose name will be withheld until time of the presentation. Also scheduled for special recognition are two men who will receive the Silver Beaver awards from C. J. Carlson, Scout executive of region 7.

Phases of Scouting and cubbing will be portrayed in a tableau given by five units under direction of R. L. Dougherty, La Grange district commissioner. Mr. Patri's address will follow.

Previously, the annual council meeting in December has combined dinner, business meeting, and program. This year the dinner and business meeting will be held apart

YORK STUDENTS MAKE PLANS FOR ROMAN BANQUET

Rationing No Problem —It's Only a Play.

If expectations of Eckhart Richter, taking the role of paterfamilias, come true, the Roman banquet to be held Wednesday night at York High school will be a greater success than ever.

In making claim that revival of the ancient feast of Caesar's day originated at York, Mark Stephenson, a student, goes back to 1921 when Mrs. J. H. Crann, then Latin teacher, wished to present a play, "A Roman Wedding," with food served as an added attraction.

Play Dropped in 1925.

In 1925, the play was dropped from the program and other entertainment substituted. Miss Lois Ashton and Miss Dorothy Howe, faculty advisers of the Latin club, are sponsoring this year's banquet.

The scene of the banquet, depicting a Roman atrium, will be decorated with plants, candles, statues of Roman figures, and a water fountain. After an invocation to Jupiter, freshmen boys dressed as slaves will bring trays of food to the toga bedecked guests.

Next, according to ancient custom, dice will be thrown to see who will be favored by Venus to act as master of drinking. A Roman quality will be maintained thruout the program, even in the entertainment.

Name Vestal Virgins.

Those who will perform their ancient rites as vestal virgins are Susan Graybill, Marilyn Hill, Jane Sykora, Hazel Wilson, Marjory Crosley, Laura Lee Grant, Marcia Metcalf, Rogerta Dickinson, and Diane Krohn.

Water carriers will be Dorothy Swanson, Joann Gilmer, Joanne Wallace, June Galbraith, Doris Lewis, Nancy Lee Aldridge, Millicent Kelly, Nola Santi, Carol McNulty, Carol Freeman, Marilou Cosgrove, and Mary Lou Challacombe.

Freshmen servants who will head the slaves are Charles Tilly and Oliver Burrows. Assistants will be Don Fischer, Howard Collicott, Lowell McCauley, August Zahatako, Gordon Bednorz, and Fred Hintze.

35 to Be Slaves.

Reagan Bowman will give a demonstration of sleight of hand. Robert Elworthy, trumpeter, and Laura Lee Grant, flutist, will provide music. Robert also will play the piano for the dances. Credit for arranging and supervising the program is given Sara Jane Irvin, president of the Latin club.

AUSTIN LEGION WOMEN AIDING WORK OF VETS

Mrs. Alma Vandercook, 114 N. Parkside av., is craftshop chairman of the Austin Legion auxiliary which is active in assisting veterans to rehabilitate themselves by disposing of their handicraft.

OAK PARK OPENS FINANCIAL DRIVE FOR VET CENTER

Service Men Are Already Using Service.

Robert F. McMasters, president of Oak Park, and civic leaders last week launched a drive for funds to support the newly opened Veterans Information center, 1033 South blvd., Oak Park.

The center is one of the first permanent offices of its kind in Cook county. It is designed to aid returning service men and women in their readjustment to civilian life. McMasters has urged citizens to support the center "as vigorously as you support other home front efforts."

Many Clients Already.

Mrs. V. E. Lindeberg, in charge of the center, said that scores of men and women who have returned from service have visited the center to seek aid or information pertaining to the G. I. bill of rights.

Not only discharged veterans but also many service men home on leave have visited the center for information on the benefits the government has guaranteed them.

Plan Complete Files.

A project of the veterans' commission of Oak Park, the center will have one of the most complete information files on veterans' interests and problems in the area.

The center will evaluate the veteran's problem, whether it be employment, reëmployment, claims, pensions, insurance, marital, or domestic, and channel the problem to the proper agency.

York High Concert.

The concert band of York High school will present a program Friday night in the school auditorium.

Oak Park Center Aids Vet

At the new veterans information center, 1033 South blvd., Oak Park, Mrs. V. E. Lindeberg (left), in charge of the center, tells Sgt. William W. Smith and his bride, the former Kathryn McBeth of Franklin Park, how G. I. benefits will help them finance the new home they have selected in Schiller Park.

DU PAGE LEGION GROUPS TO SEEK GIFTS TO YANKS

The Du Page county American Legion executive committee has joined with the American Legion, its auxiliary, the 40 and 8 and the 8 and 40 thruout the county in a "Christmas Gifts for Yanks Who Gave" party. The announcement is made by N. C. Knapp, Glen Ellyn, commander of Du Page county.

To correlate efforts of the posts as much as possible a committee has been appointed, members of which are Jack De Rosa, William Tronvig, Howard Shurtleff, Thorwald Jacobsen, Les Meyer, and Knapp.

"Every one is urged to join in this Christmas homage to our fighting men in hospitals thruout the country," said Knapp. "When you do your gift shopping, first on the list should be a gift for one of our sick, wounded, or disabled men or women in a government hospital."

The quota for Du Page county is 5,000 gifts.

OLD ST. IGNATIUS ALUMNI TO BACK CONCERT TODAY

St. Ignatius alumni thruout the city have joined to plan an unique concert to be given at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Orchestra hall. The musical will be presented by the Trapp family, 10 Austrian singers who were forced to surrender their home to Hitler's hordes. It is a prelude to the 75th anniversary of old St. Ignatius college, founded at 1076 Roosevelt rd., where St. Ignatius High school now stands.

The committee which planned the concert is headed by the Rev. Joseph P. Bilstein, alumni moderator. Diamond jubilee ceremonies are being arranged for next spring.

Music by Bach, Mozart, Purcell, and William Byrd will be played on the instruments for which they wrote. Members of the Trapp family will play the long-neglected member of the woodwind family, the blockflute or recorder.

Among Chicagoans serving on the concert committee are Carter H. Harrison, collector of internal revenue; Thomas R. Heaney, J. Albert Woll, United States district attorney; Chuck Collins, who played end on the Notre Dame team of the Four Horsemen era, and Willard Woll, Alumni association president.

West siders on the committee include: Sarsfield Dunne and Daniel Laughlin, both of 5916 Washington blvd.; Paul Breen, 5311 Adams st.; Bernard McDevitt, 21 N. Menard av.; Joseph B. SUBURBS START FIGHT AGAINST WHITE PLAGUE

Stamps Picture Postman Who Founded Plan.

Fifteen west suburbanites are serving as chairmen in their communities during the 38th Christmas seal campaign being conducted by the Tuberculosis institute of Chicago and Cook county. The drive will continue thru Christmas, Mrs. Theodore B. Sachs, executive secretary, has announced.

"These chairmen are donating their services during the seal campain to insure the continuance of the year round educational, preventive, and clinical battle against tuberculosis," Mrs. Sachs said. The workers will be responsible for distributing the seals and collecting proceeds in suburban areas.

Volunteers Sell Seals.

The seals sell for a penny each and in addition to being sold by volunteer workers at booths in stores, theaters, and banks, they are sent by mail to residents thruout Chicago.

This year's seal, designed by Spence Wildey, art editor of the Woman's Home Companion, is a tribute to the originator of the Christmas sale idea. The picture on the stamp features "everybody's postman" in honor of Einar Holboell, who was a postal clerk in Copenhagen, Denmark, in 1907 when his seal sale idea was started.

List Suburban Chairmen.

West suburban chairmen who will direct the drive until its completion Christmas day include Mrs. Lucille Scheve, Melrose Park; Mrs. W. J. Buckley, Berwyn; Mrs. T. G. Sheahan, Broadview; Mrs. A. E. Abnet, Cicero; Mrs. H. W. Welsh, Maywood, for Hillside; Mrs. G. W. Wheatman, Hollywood, and Mrs. Alvina Reuss, Lyons.

Others are Mrs. Harold F. Hammond, Maywood; Col. Robert Wigglesworth, Melrose Park; Mrs. E. E. Wanders, North Lake Village; Mrs. Charles J. Weigel, River Forest; Mrs. Orville A. Brouer, Western Springs; Mrs. Loren C. Batson, Westchester; Mrs. Paul G. Dick, La Grange, and Mrs. Herman G. Hoffman, Brookfield.

DU PAGE COUNTY SALE

Sale of Christmas seals to finance the 1945 health campaign of the Du Page County Tuberculosis association which began recently will continue until Christmas, according to the Rev. Robert B. Stewart, association president.

Among projects which the association will continue to sponsor in the community is the tuberculin testing program, an annual procedure in all of the county's nine high schools and five colleges.

The association's records show that there have been no deaths among tubercular boys and girls whose disease was revealed as a result of school case finding programs. The periodic search for cases among apparently healthy persons is responsible, according to the Rev. Mr. Stewart, because persons suffering from the disease in an early stage respond readily to treatment.

Other projects planned for the association's 1945 county wide program are tuberculin testing of factory workers and children who will be enrolled to enter the county's schools next fall, an educational program of health movies and health talks, exhibits, distribution of literature to the general public, scientific bulletins for professional workers, and special educational material for tuberculosis patients.

Five per cent of the total returns from the sale of Christmas seals will be contributed to the support of the work of the National Tuberculosis association. One of the major projects is continuous medical research in the field of the disease which last year took 56,000 lives in the United States.

YULE GREETINGS TO BE SENT G. I.S BY GLEN ELLYN

Residents of Glen Ellyn will join in the village's V-mail Greeting week which starts tomorrow. With twice as many service men and women from the community overseas as a year ago, the committee expects to double the 5,000 greetings sent last Christmas. Some service men probably will receive as many as a dozen greetings.

Members of the committee are Homer Crulkshank and Al Herman, American Legion; Mrs. Tatge Pruce, American Legion auxiliary; N. C. Knapp, Rotary club; Carl Borgeson, Lions club; Luther L. Ellsworth, Mrs. Margaret Callarman, Mrs. Laura Templin, Mrs. Frank Hanson, Mrs. Bernice Boss, Mrs. Edna Bond, Miss Cora Lou Grant, Miss Patricia Maxwell, Mrs. Margaret Clarke, Miss Margaret Clarke, Mrs. John Gilbert, Mrs. Carl Tillman, service clubs of the churches; Lee Roblee, Glenbard students, and Frank Duggan, publicity.

Junior high students are sending out 200 greetings.

from and preceding the main program.

Members of the official council will meet at 6 p. m. for a dinner at the La Grange Presbyterian church. Mr. Symonds will preside at the business meeting which will feature a report of the nominating committee headed by Marshall Mathews of Berwyn, and the election of officers.

The council's affairs and activities are directed by a corps of more than 800 men as volunteer leaders and a full time executive staff consisting of James M. Swofford, Scout executive, and William T. Herbert and E. A. Van De Vusse, Scout field executives. Mr. Symonds has been president of the council since 1942.

but broke away again and after procuring civilian clothing, seized a truck in Glencoe. Pvt. Luckey heard a radio call reporting the stolen truck and a short time later saw the truck and chased it, capturing the prisoner three hours after his escape.

Maj. Edwin M. Collis Jr., 28, has earned an award rarely given to airmen, the soldier's medal "for gallantry in action on the ground." He also has won the air medal, the distinguished flying cross, and a recommendation for the bronze star for his achievements as a fighter pilot. Maj. Collis, whose father lives in Riverside, was awarded the soldier's medal for rescuing a pilot from a burning plane which was shot down during a daylight raid by Japs on a base in China last May. He enlisted as an air cadet in July, 1940, and has been overseas since June, 1943.

Maj. E. M. Collis Jr.

Otto R. Vasak, husband of Mrs. Eleanor G. Vasak and son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Vasak, all of Berwyn, has been promoted to major at an 8th air force bomber station in England. Maj. Vasak is in charge of supply and maintenance functions at the base. He was graduated from Morton High school and the University of Wisconsin where he majored in chemical engineering. A brother, Pvt. Francis J. Vasak, is with the army engineers in France.

Maj. Otto Vasak.

Lt. William J. Masoner Jr., 27, navy ace who shot down three Japanese planes near Formosa on Oct. 12 and six more near the Philippine Islands on Oct. 24, is back in action aboard his carrier after being forced down at sea, he has written his parents who reside in Riverside. Lt. Masoner heard that a shipmate wrote Mr. and Mrs. Masoner that he failed to return to his ship after a mission. He landed near an American destroyer which picked him up in five minutes, he wrote, and was returned to his carrier two days later "without a scratch." Lt. Masoner received the distinguished flying cross for the action on Oct. 12 and the navy cross for action on Oct. 24.

Lt. W. J. Masoner Jr.

Lt. Arthur S. O'Connor, 23, copilot on an 8th air force Flying Fortress, recently was awarded the air medal. The husband of Mrs. Phyllis V. O'Connor, 544 Cuyler av., Oak Park, Lt. O'Connor was employed as a machinist prior to joining the army air forces in January, 1943.

Pvt. Thomas R. Frachalla, son of Mrs. Marie Frachalla, 903 S. Marshfield av., a veteran of 31 months in the Southwest Pacific, recently returned to the United States under the troop rotation policy. Wearer of the combat infantry man badge, Pvt. Frachalla has been in service three years.

Corp. Daniel I. Bloom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bloom, 3642 Polk st., has been awarded the good conduct medal at a 15th air force station in Italy. Corp. Bloom entered the army in July, 1942, and has been overseas since December, 1943. He is a medical technician.

Lt. August L. Lolli, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guido Lolli, 2318 S. Leavitt st., recently was awarded the air medal. Lt. Lolli, bombardier on a B-24 Liberator, is a graduate of Harrison Technical High school and Loyola university. He joined the army air forces in June, 1942, and is now a member of a veteran bomber group based in Italy.

DAY TIME RADIO PROGRAMS SHOW MORE VARIETY

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. session with radio's day time programs is easier on the ears than it was a few years ago. There are still solid phalanxes of soap operas on NBC and CBS, but W-G-N-Mutual and the Blue network do not have so many. In place of the vanished day time serials we found more of the night time type variety programs: service programs with information of many kinds; more music, mostly recorded, and more news.

The Breakfast club, with Don McNeill and gang, is a diverting half hour which gets the cast up before dawn—and studio, guests, too. But it's better entertainment than some of the most ballyhooed and expensive night time shows. Breakfast at Sardi's, with Tom Breneman, is another worth tuning in if you like comedy in the morning.

Mostly for Women.

June Baker and Elizabeth Hart usually conduct interesting interviews. Their guests include returning heroes, experts and authorities in many fields, and some times visiting celebrities. Bernardine Flynn, so long with Vic and Sade, has many a humorous and escapist note in her news commentary. Ida Bailey Allen continues her superior program for home makers. Lorraine Hall and Ann Hunter are others who must appeal to the day time feminine audience.

Among the other programs we found interesting were Jane Cowl's anecdotes, WLS Dinnerbell Time, W-G-N's Words and Rhythm in which listeners try to stump a panel of experts. On the particular day we listened we got a bonus in the form of a talk by Harold Smith, Chicago Tribune war correspondent and veteran of ten invasions, on the war in the Pacific. What a relief he was from the war commentators and analysts who pontificate from Washington, New York and London.

Good Music Available.

For serious music in the day time we can recommend the WAAF Symphonic Hour and the WCFL Music Lovers' Matinee. And there are a lot of other worthwhile musical programs on the FM stations. For light music you might try Morton Downey, Johnny Betts and the Musical Milkwagon. It was a surprise to find programs built around band leaders long since in the service. Alvino Rey, Glen Miller and Dick Stabile among them. The numerous war workers' programs, some piped thru factory loudspeaker systems, seem to avoid swing and sway stuff and concentrate on familiar [nondance] music.

Hal Tate's Variety show is still going on two years after his entry into military service. His wife conducts the show.

News and More News.

There seems to be a news report about every 15 minutes of the day. As near as we could make out, John Holbrook and Julian Bentley get the heaviest workout.

No Sinatra record program appeared on the list, perhaps because the bobby sock brigade is in school during the day time hours. But there were plenty of Bing Crosby records available.

We found numerous other diverting periods. And we also encountered something we never have in the evening: A program that consists entirely of commercials. After surviving this ordeal we reached the conclusion that, while day time radio is making progress, there is still room for improvement.

At Navy Pier

Joe Kelly and the Quiz Kids will broadcast from Navy pier before an audience of bond buyers at 6:30 o'clock tonight over WENR-Blue.

Philharmonic Offers Williams Symphony

Vaughan Williams' Fifth Symphony will be given its American radio premiere by the New York Philharmonic orchestra, under the direction of Artur Rodzinski, over WBBM-CBS at 2 p. m. today. Another feature of the program will be a presentation of William Walton's "Belshazzar's Feast," with Metropolitan opera tenor John Brownlee as soloist.

Air Beethoven's Fifth Symphony Over W-G-N

Beethoven's Fifth Symphony in C minor, widely known as the "Victory" Symphony, will be featured by the Cleveland Symphony orchestra on W-G-N at 11 o'clock tonight. The orchestra, under the direction of Rudolph Ringwall, also will offer Bach's Prelude and Fugue in G minor and Barrymore's "In Memoriam."

Quiz Kids Broadcast Show from Navy Pier

Navy pier will be the origination point for the Quiz Kids show over WENR-Blue at 6:30 o'clock tonight. Quiz Kids Patrick Conlon, Joel Kupperman, Maureen Buckley, Harve Fischman, and Richard Williams will broadcast before an audience of bond buyers. Joe Kelly is quiz master of ceremonies.

Discuss Taxes, Jobs on Review Stand Today

"Federal Taxes and Post-War Jobs" is the subject slated for discussion on the Northwestern Reviewing Stand to be broadcast over W-G-N-Mutual at 10:30 a. m. today. John L. Connolly, Neil Jacoby, and Harry Guthmann will participate.

Present "Jane Eyre."

A radio adaptation of "Jane Eyre," starring Victor Jory, will be presented on Matinee Theater at 1 p. m. today over WBBM-CBS.

CITIZENS SHOW PLANS A SALUTE TO FLOWER HIGH

Students of Flower Technical High school, appearing on THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S 150th Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast on W-G-N at 10 a. m. Saturday, will swell to a total of more than a quarter million the number of midwest students who have been honored by the program. The recording for the broadcast will be made at 2 p. m. Wednesday in the school assembly hall, 3545 Fulton blvd.

Herman D. Smith.

Philip Maxwell, master of ceremonies, will be introduced by Dr. Sophie A. Theilgaard, principal of the school which serves all Chicago. The Flower choir, directed by Lydia F. Cleaver and accompanied by John A. Wiederhirn, will sing two numbers.

Girl to Play Accordion.

Susan Madala will play an accordion arrangement of Metallo's "Sharpshooter's March." Hermon Dunlap Smith, grandson of Mrs. Lucy Flower, after whom the school was named, will speak.

The names of Lois Vivian Green, Flower High senior, and June Yolton, Bloomington [Ill.] High school senior, will be added to the program's honor roll. Miss Green is on the staff of the school paper, a librarian, and church worker, and hopes to be a singer.

Girls to Lead Cheers.

News about other high school activities will be read by Margaret Gilmer, 3250 N. Monticello av., a senior who has played leading roles in school dramas. Cheer leaders for the program will be Marilyn Czosek, Elenore Dixon, and Phyllis Le Velle.

Prior to Wednesday's recording the colors will be posted by Florene D'Alexander, Elaine De Luca, Betty Hawkins, Louise Janowik, Gloria Russell, and June Stockton.

'WALTZ DREAM' NEXT OPERETTA FOR AIR THEATER

Oscar Straus' Viennese operetta, "A Waltz Dream," will be given its radio premiere on the Chicago Theater of the Air Saturday before an audience of more than 4,500 persons in Medinah temple. The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the coast-to-coast Mutual network from 9 to 10 p. m.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak on the program.

Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the series, will be starred. Gilbert Russell, tenor, will be heard as Lt. Nikki. Supporting roles will be sung by Earle Wilkie, baritone, and Ruth Slater, contralto.

Strauss' music for the production will be played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and the chorus coached by Robert Trendler.

"Seven New TVA's" Round Table Topic

"Seven New TVA's?" will be the topic of the University of Chicago Round Table over WMAQ-NBC at 12:30 p. m. today. Sen. Murray [D., Mont.]; Sen. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.], and C. Herman Pritchett, assistant professor of political science at the University of Chicago, will participate in the discussion of President Roosevelt's proposal for seven projects patterned after the Tennessee valley authority.

OPEN 2 CHILD CARE CENTERS FOR N. W. SIDE

Mothers Working in War to Benefit.

Two new child care centers were opened on the northwest side last week by the board of education in answer to a growing demand for this service by mothers working in the expanding war industry of Chicago.

The new centers, for older children, are at the Prussing school, 4650 N. Menard av., and the Mitchell school, 2233 Ohio st. Two other centers were opened last week on the north side. One is for pre-school children, the other for older children. Both are at the Julia Lathrop nursery, 2704 N. Hoyne av.

The service will continue to be expanded for the benefit of women working or seeking work in war plants in response to the military demand for increased supplies to the battle lines, said Vernon L. Bowyer, director of the service. A new center is opened whenever the demand is believed sufficient to warrant it. If a daily attendance of 30 children is assured, he said, a new center will be established.

Cost $2.50 Per Week.

The centers are of two kinds, it is explained by Joseph E. Roche, director of personnel. One is for children from 2 to 5 and the other for children from 6 to 13.

The war time child care centers operate with fees of $2.50 a week paid by parents for nursery care, or $2 a week for older children, each dollar of which is matched by federal funds. The care is for five days a week in most instances, with six day care provided in a few nurseries.

Besides the fees and the federal funds, the project is supported by contributions and donations of services, the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial Fund assisting. The last grant of the government, to cover a period ending Jan. 1, 1945, was $194,000.

Started as Nurseries.

Begun in May, 1943, with a nucleus of 10 WPA nursery schools, the service is operated now in 34 centers for school children and 22 centers for pre-school children. The service is for children whose parents are employed. Women seeking work may enroll their children in a center for two weeks while hunting a job.

A health examination by a registered nurse is required before a child is accepted. After enrollment, every child is examined each morning for symptoms of cold or infection. At some centers breakfast is provided for an extra charge. Otherwise, the regular fee includes lunch and an afternoon snack.

The children play out of doors in good weather. Sometimes play is roganized, and sometimes the children devise their own entertainment, but always under supervision. A child is free to read a book, or choose any other activity, such as art work or construction. Luncheon is arranged from a menu provided by the McCormick fund, and a copy of the menu is provided the parents. In enrolling a child, the service learns of his tastes and habits, so that care can be adjusted to the individual.

Nap Periods Provided.

Pre-school children have a nap period, and both groups have an afternoon snack of fruit juice, cocoa, sandwiches, and crackers. Five nurses assigned to watch over the health of the young charges pay regular visits to the centers. A review committee, composed of four representatives of the school board and representatives of the OCD child care committee, passes on all persons employed as directors and aids. Directors are required to have a teachers' certificate or degree, according to Mrs. Jean Livers, technical supervisor.

Parents wishing to enroll children or obtain information about the centers should call at the nearest center, or telephone Dearborn 7801.

Allez Oop! A Trainer Teaches Dog Not to Bite Hand That Feeds It

Rover, a Doberman Pinscher owned by Mrs. Adolph Wubbenhorst, 4855 N. Bell av., has a new lease on life after two months training by Ludwig Gessner, operator of kennels at 7418 Higgins rd. Rover had bitten his owner and might have been destroyed had he not responded to training. Demonstrating what proper training will do for a dog, Gessner has Rover at heel to his left, walks in circles with Rover tagging along, crosses in back of the dog in an effort to confuse it, and finally commands Rover to sit and wait for him to return.

Trainer Makes Pets of Pests in Short Order

BY JANET PECK.

If you have a lurking suspicion that you are not the master of your own dog, here is a little advice offered by Ludwig Gessner, dog trainer.

It is Gessner's opinion that a dog wants to please his master, but must be taught how. He believes that animals respond to attention and a little of the right kind can make Fido a pet rather than a pest. "The master need not look for his own dog," said the trainer. "His dog should look for him. Make friends with the dog, but show him who is boss. That is the basis of all training."

Dogs Obey Orders.

As if in demonstration, three sleek Dobermanns licked his hands and danced around him as he spoke:

"My dogs like me; now watch them obey my orders."

Choosing a Dobermann belonging to Mrs. Adolph Wubbenhorst, 4855 N. Bell av., for demonstration Gessner gave the command, "Walk at heel." Obediently the dog placed himself at the trainer's left side. The custom has been for a dog to walk at the left since the days when man led his horse with his right hand. Gessner tried to confuse Rover, but it was no go; the dog had been taught which side was left and refused to change position.

"Don't be afraid to show your pet what you want him to do," Gessner said. Demonstrating, he showed how he had taught Rover to sit. Rover, a veteran of two months' training, sat and waited until released from the command.

Slow, But Firm.

Gessner advised, "A dog, like a child, can absorb only so much training at a time. Therefore, the training period should not be too long, but should be held daily. Teaching any dog takes patience, altho some tricks are easier for the dog to learn. This is one of the simplest to teach." He tossed an imitation bone across the field and Rover galloped off to show just what the "fetch and carry" trick was.

"When your dog does something wrong, punish him immediately," the trainer advised. "If you wait until later he won't realize what is wrong. Rover was unusually bad about chasing cats. In fact he bit his owner who tried to keep him from going after one."

The trainer then placed a kitten before the dog. Rover was interested, even slightly nervous, but sat quite still as the cat made its way out the door.

Came from Germany.

In his kennels at 7418 Higgins rd., Gessner has been training dogs as pets, show dogs, and protectors for 20 years. He learned his occupation in Germany, coming to the United States to help a friend start his kennel. Gessner liked America so well he decided to stay, and eventually bought his friend's business.

His favorite dogs are Dobermann-Pinschers and boxers which he breeds, and his own three Dobermanns have won many prizes. The three dogs enjoy nothing more than going thru a regular stage routine with their master.

Mr. and Mrs. Gessner's oldest son, Werner, has his dad's talent for handling animals and is attached to the K-9 corps in India.

According to Gessner, Daney, Great Dane owned by Miss Dorothy Wrigley, 1500 Lake Shore dr., is one of the few dogs of this breed which will jump thru a hoop. A winter boarder at the kennels, Daney was taught this trick after Miss Wrigley's father jokingly suggested it. As a challenge, Gessner took him up on it and was successful.

Sonia, Gessner's 3 year old Doberman, has been taught to attack on command. George Gessner, 17, wearing a protective arm, makes like "dis is a stickup," while his father and Sonia struggle to capture him. At a word from his master Sonia drops his role as a snarling, angry animal to become her friendly self again. Gessner has trained dogs for the Illinois state highway police.

PARK WORKERS MAKE HAY FOR CROWD IS AWAY

Mend Trees, Shrubs Thru Winter.

"Trees in the Chicago park district are better maintained, even with the lack of labor, material, and equipment, than those in any other municipality in the United States," Roy O. Walker, landscape construction supervisor, said recently. Walker directs landscape construction of all city parks and boulevards.

Walker's forces are busy removing dead trees and shrubs, and pruning, spraying, and attending injuries of living plants. Trees are moved from one location to another, and new trees set out, all during the winter months.

22,000 Trees on N. W. Side.

On the northwest side there are more than 22,000 trees, and thousands of shrubs in the parks and along the boulevards. A recent survey revealed that there are 7,932 trees in Humboldt park alone, one-fourth of them elms. Riis park is second, with 2,477 trees, and 4,236 trees adorn the boulevards in this section. Elms are predominant among the trees, followed closely by hawthorns. Maple, willow, crabapple, poplar, locust, ash, mulberry, linden, birch, and plum are other varieties studding the parkways. Work of caring for the plantations is divided between Harold G. Evans and Ephraim Soderberg, both general foremen of plantation.

A large project is underway in Portage park, 4100 Long av., under supervision of Evans. Changes are being made in the park to permit enlarged athletic activities, and landscape workers are engaged in hauling mulch, watering, and burlapping trees and clearing paths for their removal. Most of the 96 trees being transplanted are 12 to 18 inches in diameter, and all are elms. Spraying of trees and shrubs to offset scale diseases is being done with mulsified oil.

Elm Trees Predominant.

Riis park, 6100 Fullerton av., was completely relandscaped a few years ago, and planted with only native varieties. Here again elm trees outnumber all others, and hawthorns are second.

One of the largest tree surgery projects in the park district was completed a few weeks ago in the northwest section of Gompers park, 4222 Foster av. An unusually large tree was split by high winds, and 17 feet of concrete filling were required to mend the cavity. The job was handled by Earl Reed, tree surgeon for the north section.

"It is difficult to single out one tree or one group of trees for their perfection or beauty," park officials admit, "but one large elm in Gompers park is noted for its symmetry of line and stateliness. This tree is located in the southern part of the park."

Apropos of the coming Yuletide is the permanent Christmas tree in Edison Park. This was planted in front of the fieldhouse, 6755 Northwest hwy., last year, as a permanent community Christmas tree. It is a Douglas fir, 25 feet in height.

THIS PILOT GETS HOME THE HARD WAY, VIA D-DAY

As far as Lt. Robert V. Brulle, 3141 N. Kenneth av., is concerned, the allied invasion of Belgium was a program planned especially so he could visit his home town, Oordegem. Last spring, after he had won his wings and been stationed in England, Lt. Brulle hoped for an allied push which would make it possible for him to visit his uncles, and aunts, and cousins in the country he left 16 years ago.

Lt. Brulle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Urbain Brulle, 3141 N. Kenneth av. He can speak Flemish fluently, and since that is the language used around Oordegem he got along famously on his recent visit there.

Letter Describes Visit.

An account of that visit was received in a letter he wrote recently to his parents. It reads, in part:

"Well, I finally got to Oordegem and Wetterns, and found every one is still O. K. I went first to Oordegem to the old house. I found it O. K. and relatives were standing out in front. I recognized them, but they didn't know me till I told them who I was. Boy, the whole town came over to see me! . . . I don't know all the people I saw, but you know the whole town of Oordegem and Wetterns send you their regards."

Relays Word of Relatives.

In his letter, Lt. Brulle also tells of delivering news about Belgians in this country to their relatives in the two villages he visited; about the capture by the Germans of one relative, and his subsequent escape, and about the uncle's family who moved into the Brulle home after being bombed out of their own.

Accompanying the letter was a snapshot of Lt. Brulle in his flyer's uniform, surrounded by proud Belgian aunts, and uncles, and cousins. "You know they're all mad at me because of all the things I had to take up flying," he writes. "They can't see why I would want to do such a dangerous job."

6 HIGH SCHOOLS AID RED CROSS TO MAKE TOYS

Industrial art classes in northwest side high schools are coöperating with the Chicago Junior Red Cross to make 5,000 toys for Christmas. The toys will be distributed to needy children of service men and to youngsters in institutions.

Materials used to make the toys were purchased thru individual donations to the Junior Red Cross. "Students making the toys have shown a great deal of ingenuity in their designs," said Miss Ethel K. Benson, director.

$556,000,000.00
For Douglas War and Postwar Planes!
Douglas now has a $416,000,000 backlog order for war planes . . . and $140,000,000 in postwar orders from major airlines, including huge contracts for C-54 Combat transports. The C-54 is the transport companion to the B-29 Super Fortress which is now starting to bomb Japan into oblivion. The C-54 is the world's largest 4-motor transport in volume production and has the cabin dimensions of a standard railroad box car. Adapted for postwar airline use, it will be designated the DC-4. This is the plane used by President Roosevelt in his flights to Casablanca, Terheran, and Cairo. Now it is carrying munitions and men to the fighting front and wounded back to safety. After the war it will carry millions of airline passengers. This plane is built in the Douglas Chicago plant. You are needed to build it.
DON'T LET OPPORTUNITY PASS YOU BY!
HELP BUILD GIANT C-54's
Vitally Needed in the Pacific . . . Start Your Postwar Future Today
After the war, aviation will be one of the major industries in the Chicago area. Airlines, aircargo carriers, maintenance and operations shops, and aircraft plants will have good jobs for workers who are properly trained. Prepare for your career in aviation NOW by working in the Chicago plant of Douglas Aircraft Company. No "outbacks" or "layoffs" in sight here. Douglas employes will work at full capacity building vitally needed military transport planes until Japan is defeated. Then they will build planes for the airlines on orders already booked this far ahead.
You can get expert training here in aircraft skills that could well qualify you for profitable employment building peacetime airplanes or in the huge maintenance and operations plants which the airlines and aircargo enterprises will set up all over the country after the war. And you can be trained in working with the lighter metals such as aluminum and magnesium which will be used in the manufacture of so many postwar consumer goods.
Meanwhile you will be well paid for enjoyable work. Experienced or inexperienced . . . we train you so that you are bound to make good in fabrication, shop, assembly and installation work . . . what we term "beating on the airplanes." As interesting work as you'll ever find. If you want to serve your country, learn a new business, make good money and really enjoy your job, don't delay. This Week in the Garden

Monday, Dec. 4.

The beautiful poinsettias are rapidly coming into bloom and soon the busy home gardener will want to know how to keep them alive over a maximum period. Keep them at around 65 degree temperature and syringe the foliage occasionally to remove dust and add to the humidity in the atmosphere.

Tuesday, Dec. 5.

Examine the pots of bulbous plants and, if well rooted, bring to the light the flowering. Keep the calla lily well watered and apply plant food occasionally.

Wednesday, Dec. 6.

Growing plants in the home is difficult, for some plants cannot endure the dry atmosphere, but a little attention will aid materially in clearing up such a condition. Attach a humidifier to the radiator and see that it is kept filed with water. Apply liquid fertilizer at intervals of about two weeks.

Thursday, Dec. 7.

Gardeners living near a mushroom farm should use the spent manure as a mulch. Spread it around the plants to a depth of about two inches or work into the soil. Most garden soils lack humus and frequent applications of this material will improve the soil. Bone meal is frequently used, but it contains no potash.

Friday, Dec. 8.

Home gardeners will find that plant propagation is one of the most interesting practices. There are many methods, some very easy and some comparatively difficult, in the house. Propagation by seeds is the most common practice for many plants, such as annuals, but many hardwood plants, shrubs, trees, and vines sometimes are "stratified," a term applied to the practice of storing seeds over winter.

Saturday, Dec. 9.

Working out the scheme for the coming season is most important and may be done during winter time when outdoor activities are dormant. Many city gardeners must rely on growing annuals because of a lack of space, but a well regulated annual garden can be very attractive and supply much cutting material. Some that require little attention include the cosmos, calliopsis, zinnia, petunia, gaillardia, marigold, cleome or spider flower, and annual phlox. Locate the kinds on the plan.

PARENTAL'S PTA TO HOLD WINTER FETE ON FRIDAY

The 12th annual winter party sponsored by the Chicago Parental School Parent-Teacher association will be held at 7:30 p. m. Friday at the school, 3600 Foster av. Mrs. C. J. Semler is president of the association. Mrs. D. L. Hoxworth, treasurer, is in charge of this winter party.

The evening's program will include escorted tours thru the school, exhibits of handicraft by the children, and musical entertainment by the boys of the school. Proceeds from this party will help to purchase eyeglasses and clothing for the students, and defray costs of the annual Christmas party at the school.

Lloyd—The Lloyd PTA will meet at 1 p. m. Friday in the school auditorium, with Edward Stullkin, principal of Montefiore school, as speaker. Mrs. George Albrecht, homemaking chairman, will be in charge of a sale of handmade articles. Mrs. William Moline, hospitality chairman, has planned a Christmas party to follow the meeting.

Stowe—A board meeting of the Stowe PTA will be held at 1:15 p. m. Tuesday in the home of Mrs. R. J. Williams, 1728 N. Central Park av.

Bridge—The Bridge PTA is sponsoring a demonstration of household paper products at 7:30 p. m. Thursday in the home of Mrs. G. W. Dreyer, 3832 N. Newcastle av., ways and means chairman. Refreshments will be served.

Roosevelt—Mrs. Charles W. Balch will address the Roosevelt High school PTA on "What About Recreation Now?" when the association meets at 1:15 p. m. Tuesday in the civics room of the school. Mrs. George Millberg will preside. A Christmas party will be held, with carols sung by the symphonic choir directed by John P. Hamilton. Mothers of students in Bateman elementary school will act as hostesses for the day.

Bateman—Color schemes in the home will be the discussion topic for the home and family life meeting of the Bateman PTA at 1:15 p. m. Thursday in the home of Mrs. W. E. Perry, 4426 N. Richmond av. Miss Anna Gale of the Roosevelt High school will be the instructor. Mrs. David B. Seidler will be cohostess.

OLD ST. IGNATIUS ALUMNI TO BACK CONCERT TODAY

St. Ignatius alumni thruout the city have joined to plan an unique concert to be given at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Orchestra hall. The musical will be presented by the Trapp family, 10 Austrian singers who were forced to surrender their home to Hitler's hordes. It is a prelude to the 75th anniversary of old St. Ignatius college, founded at 1076 Roosevelt rd., where St. Ignatius High school now stands.

The committee which planned the concert is headed by the Rev. Joseph P. Blistein, alumni moderator. Diamond jubilee ceremonies are being arranged for next spring.

Music by Bach, Mozart, Purcell, and William Byrd will be played on the instruments for which they wrote. Members of the Trapp family will play the long-neglected member of the woodwind family, the blockflute or recorder.

Among Chicagoans serving on the concert committee are Carter H. Harrison, collector of internal revenue; Thomas R. Heaney, J. Albert Woll, United States district attorney; Chuck Collins, who played end on the Notre Dame team of the Four Horsemen era, and Willard Woll, Alumni association president.

Edwin Hackett, 5823 N. Markham av.; Walter Dinnella, 902 N. Drake av., and Thomas E. Keane, 1049 N. Sacramento blvd., also aided the committee in planning today's program.

Philharmonic Offers Williams Symphony

Vaughan Williams' Fifth Symphony will be given its American radio premiere by the New York Philharmonic orchestra, under the direction of Artur Rodzinski, over WBBM-CBS at 2 p. m. today. Another feature of the program will be a presentation of William Walton's "Belshazzar's Feast," with Metropolitan opera tenor John Brownlee as soloist.

Mozart's 36th Symphony on W-G-N on Tuesday

Henry Weber will conduct the W-G-N Symphony orchestra in Mozart's Symphony No. 36 [Linzer] on the Symphony hall program over W-G-N, WGNB Tuesday night at 8:30. The program will include Barber's "Essay for Orchestra" and Liszt's "Les Preludes."

ON SHORT WAVES

LONDON.

The North American service of the BBC from London includes the following programs today. The frequencies [in megacycles] employed after 4:15 p. m. are: 11.93, 9.58 9.82, 6.11, 7.26, 9.51. 4:45 p. m.—News. 5:30 p. m.—Radio Newsreel. 8:15 p. m.—Sunday Service. 9:10 p. m.—Tomorrow's London Papers. 11:30 p. m.—News reports.

DAY TIME RADIO PROGRAMS SHOW MORE VARIETY

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. session with radio's day time programs is easier on the ears than it was a few years ago. There are still solid phalanxes of soap operas on NBC and CBS, but W-G-N-Mutual and the Blue network do not have so many. In place of the vanished day time serials we found more of the night time type variety programs: service programs with information of many kinds; more music, mostly recorded, and more news.

The Breakfast club, with Don McNeill and gang, is a diverting half hour which gets the cast up before dawn—and studio, guests, too. But it's better entertainment than some of the most ballyhooed and expensive night time shows. Breakfast at Sardi's, with Tom Breneman, is another worth tuning in if you like comedy in the morning.

Mostly for Women.

June Baker and Elizabeth Hart usually conduct interesting interviews. Their guests include returning heroes, experts and authorities in many fields, and some times visiting celebrities. Bernardine Flynn, so long with Vic and Sade, has many a humorous and escapist note in her news commentary. Ida Bailey Allen continues her superior program for home makers. Lorraine Hall and Ann Hunter are others who must appeal to the day time feminine audience.

Among the other programs we found interesting were Jane Cowl's anecdotes, WLS Dinnerbell Time, W-G-N's Words and Rhythm in which listeners try to stump a panel of experts. On the particular day we listened we got a bonus in the form of a talk by Harold Smith, Chicago Tribune war correspondent and veteran of ten invasions, on the war in the Pacific. What a relief he was from the war commentators and analysts who pontificate from Washington, New York and London.

Good Music Available.

For serious music in the day time we can recommend the WAAF Symphonic Hour and the WCFL Music Lovers' Matinee. And there are a lot of other worthwhile musical programs on the FM stations. For light music you might try Morton Downey, Johnny Betts and the Musical Milkwagon. It was a surprise to find programs built around band leaders long since in the service. Alvino Rey, Glen Miller and Dick Stabile among them. The numerous war workers' programs, some piped thru factory loudspeaker systems, seem to avoid swing and sway stuff and concentrate on familiar [nondance] music.

Hal Tate's Variety show is still going on two years after his entry into military service. His wife conducts the show.

News and More News.

There seems to be a news report about every 15 minutes of the day. As near as we could make out, John Holbrook and Julian Bentley get the heaviest workout.

No Sinatra record program appeared on the list, perhaps because the bobby sock brigade is in school during the day time hours. But there were plenty of Bing Crosby records available.

We found numerous other diverting periods. And we also encountered something we never have in the evening: A program that consists entirely of commercials. After surviving this ordeal we reached the conclusion that, while day time radio is making progress, there is still room for improvement.

"Seven New TVA's" Round Table Topic

"Seven New TVA's?" will be the topic of the University of Chicago Round Table over WMAQ-NBC at 12:30 p. m. today. Sen. Murray [D., Mont.]; Sen. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.], and C. Herman Pritchett, assistant professor of political science at the University of Chicago, will participate in the discussion of President Roosevelt's proposal for seven projects patterned after the Tennessee valley authority.

At Navy Pier

Joe Kelly and the Quiz Kids will broadcast from Navy pier before an audience of bond buyers at 6:30 o'clock tonight over WENR (Blue).

'WALTZ DREAM' NEXT OPERETTA FOR AIR THEATER

Oscar Straus' Viennese operetta, "A Waltz Dream," will be given its radio premiere on the Chicago Theater of the Air Saturday before an audience of more than 4,500 persons in Medinah temple. The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the coast-to-coast Mutual network from 9 to 10 p. m.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Chicago Tribune, will speak on the program.

Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the series, will be starred. Gilbert Russell, tenor, will be heard as Lt. Nikki. Supporting roles will be sung by Earle Wilkie, baritone, and Ruth Slater, contralto.

Strauss' music for the production will be played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and the chorus coached by Robert Trendler.

Fredric March Visits Hall of Fame Today

Fredric March, Victor Borge, and Georgia Gibbs are scheduled to appear as guests on the Radio Hall of Fame over WENR-Blue at 5 p. m. today. March is to be featured in a preview of the forthcoming film, "A Bell for Adano." Paul Whiteman and his orchestra, program regulars, will highspot a medley of Stephen Foster songs.

Discuss Taxes, Jobs on Review Stand Today

"Federal Taxes and Post-War Jobs" is the subject slated for discussion on the Northwestern Reviewing Stand to be broadcast over W-G-N-Mutual at 10:30 a. m. today. John L. Connolly, Neil Jacoby, and Harry Guthmann will participate.

Present "Jane Eyre."

A radio adaptation of "Jane Eyre," starring Victor Jory, will be presented on Matinee Theater at 1 p. m. today over WBBM-CBS.

CITIZENS SHOW PLANS A SALUTE TO FLOWER HIGH

Students of Flower Technical High school, appearing on The Chicago Tribune's 150th Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast on W-G-N at 10 a. m. Saturday, will tell swell to a total of more than a quarter million the number of midwest students who have been honored by the program. The recording for the broadcast will be made at 2 p. m. Wednesday in the school assembly hall, 3545 Fulton blvd.

Hermon D. Smith.

Philip Maxwell, master of ceremonies, will be introduced by Dr. Sophie A. Theilgaard, principal of the school which serves all Chicago. The Flower choir, directed by Lydia F. Cleaver and accompanied by John A. Wiederhirn, will sing two numbers.

Girl to Play Accordion.

Susan Madala will play an accordion arrangement of Metallo's "Sharpshooter's March." Hermon Dunlap Smith, grandson of Mrs. Lucy Flower, after whom the school was named, will speak.

The names of Lois Vivian Green, Flower High senior, and June Yolton, Bloomington [Ill.] High school senior, will be added to the program's honor roll. Miss Green is on the staff of the school paper, a librarian, and church worker, and hopes to be a singer.

Girls to Lead Cheers.

News about other high school activities will be read by Margaret Gilmer, 3250 N. Monticello av., a senior who has played leading roles in school dramas. Cheer leaders for the program will be Marilyn Czosek, Elenore Dixon, and Phyllis Le Velle.

Prior to Wednesday's recording the colors will be posted by Florene D'Alexander, Elaine De Luca, Betty Hawkins, Louise Janowik, Gloria Russell, and June Stockton.

16 Parks Will Show Activities and Artcraft at Recreation Exposition

Two of the 750 persons who will display the activities of 16 parks in the 2d annual recreation exposition Thursday and Friday in Calumet park, 98th st. and Lake Michigan, are Claire Harrington (left), 12, 1509 W. 103d st., and Sally Wilson, 12, of 1730 W. 105th st. They are members of the craft class of Mrs. Florence Hickman at the 102d Street fieldhouse, where they made the felt hats they are wearing.

Members of craft classes select the items they wish to make. Among the purses, suspenders, embroidered, vests, coat novelties, bracelets, and pin cushions on display will be several by these four girls. Left to right are Patricia Mitchell, 10, 1734 W. 105th st.; Ruth Wollenberg, 9, 9974 Vincennes av.; Jeanine Jaskula, 10, 9964 Vincennes av., and Arlene Hedrick, 7, 10124 Charles st.

Herbert Brodt, 9, 10433 Hale av., drills holes for dowel rods in his tie rack as Robert Bayer, 12, 1014 W. 104th st., sandpapers, and Roger Erickson, 10, 1048 W. 104th st., paints a bread board he recently finished for the exposition.

Many friends, brothers, and sisters of southwest side park craft students will receive various types of dolls made in the craft shops for Christmas. Shown with their creations are Betty Lou Adams (left), 10, 1626 W. 104th pl., and Mary Ann Janson, 10, 9815 Winston av.

CHURCH PLANS $50,000 EDIFICE FOR S. W. AREA

First Methodist to Build Soon.

As a result of two building fund drives, work will be started soon on a new building for the First Methodist church of Evergreen Park, 94th st. and Homan av. "We are just waiting the 'go-ahead' on priorities," said the Rev. R. A. W. Bruehl, pastor.

The new brick church, to be built at an estimated cost of $50,000, will have a seating capacity of 250 in the main auditorium, with an adjoining youth chapel seating 150. Plans provide for a fellowship hall and dining room in the present brick basement, constructed in 1938, with enlargement of the basement for a youth assembly room, kitchen, and cloakrooms. Classrooms for the church school will adjoin the youth chapel on the first floor.

Program Started in 1942.

The building program was instituted by the Rev. Mr. Bruehl shortly after he assumed the pastorate in July, 1942. Need for additional space became more acute with the doubling of church membership in two years. Church activities now are carried out in the brick basement and in the original frame church erected shortly after organization of the congregation in 1893.

In 1897 the membership numbered 27, with 58 persons attending the Sunday school, compared with today's membership of more than 300, with 200 in the Sunday school. Because the church was so small in its early days, pastors were forced to depend for part of their livelihood on some other occupation. The first truly resident minister was the Rev. Leonard Cooke, appointed in 1941, and succeeded by the Rev. Mr. Bruehl.

The first building fund crusade, organized in April, 1943, resulted in the purchase of two lots north of the brick foundation, which was built primarily with labor contributed by men and boys of the church.

Church Grows Steadily.

The continued growth of the church, reflecting the growth of the Evergreen Park community, was recognized by Dr. F. W. Mueller of the Methodist board of missions and church extension. Dr. F. O. Hunt was sent by the board to conduct the second fund drive.

The committee aiding Dr. Hunt and the Rev. Mr. Bruehl was headed by William Vogwill, and included W. J. Laskey, R. J. Turner, Jack VanZee, C. C. Wormwood, M. B. Wunder, George Cooke, Howard Florence, H. R. Kaiser, H. J. Kayner, William Lunt, Frank Malott, Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Rogers, M. R. Soelberg, J. V. Tebo, L. B. White, George Anderson, John Wilson, John Robb, Mrs. Vogwill, Mrs. George Hitz, Mrs. C. P. Gallistel, and Mrs. Bruehl.

The Rev. Mr. Bruehl was employed by a life insurance company before deciding to enter the ministry. He received his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Cincinnati in 1935, and was graduated from Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, with highest distinction in 1942. During his last two years at Garrett, he was assistant pastor of Covenant Methodist church in Evanston, and became pastor of the Evergreen Park church following graduation.

SCHOOL BOARD NAMES EIGHTH DISTRICT HEAD

Appointee Is Active with R. O. T. C.

Thaddeus J. Lubera, veteran of 21 years in the Chicago public school system, has been named superintendent of the 8th elementary school district. The district, which includes 39 schools, 29,000 pupils, and more than 700 teachers, is bounded by 60th and 85th sts., Lake Michigan, and the west city limits.

Lubera assumed direction after a two year term as principal of Marshall High school. He relieves Angela M. Cylkowski, 6153 S. Fairfield av., who held the post almost six years. The shift was necessitated when Miss Cylkowski reached the retirement age of 65.

Working on Doctor's Degree.

The new superintendent holds a master's degree in education from De Paul university. He holds a bachelor's degree from Lewis institute and attended Chicago Teachers' college and Armour Institute of Technology. He has completed most of his work on a doctor's degree at the University of Chicago.

A native Chicagoan, Lubera attended public schools here and was graduated from Senn High school, where he was a baseball and track man and business manager of the school paper. He was in the first reserve officers training corps there and rose to the rank of major during his four years of training.

He has maintained his interest in both sports and the R. O. T. C. At Hirsch High scohol, where Lubera was principal before going to Marshall, he was credited with helping to build the corps to honor rating. At Marshall, where for years the R. O. T. C. ranked lowest in the city, he again instituted measures which brought an honor rating for the first time in 28 years.

Knows His R. O. T. C.

The superintendent explained that his devotion to the corps results not only from knowledge that thousands of high school trainees now hold commissions in the army and navy, but also from observance of improvement in the students' deportment and neatness.

The duties of the district superintendent as Lubera sees them are to increase the effectiveness of the learning program, to direct the in-service training of principals and teachers, supervise research and development of new materials of instruction, and evaluate results of educational practices.

District headquarters are in the Sexton school, 641 E. 60th st. Lubera, who is married and has two sons, resides at 3719 N. Sawyer av.

CREWMAN ON FORT WOUNDED IN BOMB RUN OVER GERMANY

Staff Sgt. John P. Durkin, whose wife, Mary, lives at 7641 Evans av., a radio operator on an 8th air force Flying Fortress, has been decorated with the Purple Heart for wounds received during a recent bombing attack on Lauta, Germany. He has since recovered from the wounds. A veteran of more than a score of combat missions against enemy installations, he holds the air medal and two clusters. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Durkin, live at 3641 64th pl.

Sgt. John P. Durkin.

Christian Service Groups to Meet at St. Stephen's

Evening circles and Wesleyan Service guilds of the Woman's Society of Christian Service will meet at 6:30 p. m. Friday in St. Stephen's Methodist church, 113th and State sts. Miss Blanche Ballard, Chicago southern district chairman of Service guilds, and Mrs. Loran Agler, district chairman of Evening circles, will preside.

Jewish Book Week.

Jewish Book week will be observed by the woman's council of the Jewish People's Institute at a meeting at 1 p. m. Thursday. Mrs. Lida P. Karcher, librarian of the Douglas branch library, will speak.

Thornton Juniors, Seniors Will Hold Party Saturday

A joint junior-senior party will be held from 8:30 to 11:30 p. m. Saturday in Thornton Township High school, Harvey. Dancing and a variety show will be on the program. Freshmen, sophomores, and young persons not attending Thornton are invited if accompanied by a member of the senior or junior class. Service men will be admitted free.

STILL A LEADER AT 85 IN LIFE OF WEST PULLMAN

Few Civic Enterprises Escape His Aid.

At 85 George F. Roberts, 12130 Eggleston av., is still a leader in the community activities of West Pullman.

George F. Roberts.

Working with Edward Novak, 11952 Stewart av., he has made 111 personal calls for the Community and War Fund and has collected $1,025. He also sold $6,000 worth of war bonds in the fifth war loan drive.

These are but the latest in a long series of community enterprises which he has aided since 1893, the year he founded the West Pullman Reporter, a weekly community newspaper now known as the South End Reporter, which he sold in 1921.

Remembers Community of 500.

In 1893 West Pullman consisted of approximately 500 persons. There were four stores and a few widely scattered homes. Michigan av. was a country road with a street car track but no paving. Today this community numbers approximately 10,000 residents.

Among the community projects which he helped to found are the Roseland Community hospital, the 111th Street Y. M. C. A., and the Stewart Ridge Community church. He served as president of the West Pullman state bank for two years and was chairman of its board of directors for eight.

At a special election in 1914 on the question of a public park for West Pullman ,another community project which Roberts helped organize, one of his daughters, Blanche, was acknowledged as Chicago's first woman voter.

Helps Publish Directory.

She lives with her father and has helped him publish the Pullman-Commodore telephone directory for 38 years.

Two other daughters are Mrs. Laura Marshall, 158 W. 70th st., and Mrs. Frank S. Henderson, Boulder, Colo. His son, Roy Roberts, 12106 Eggleston av., operates a commercial printing business at 711 W. 120th st. in a structure built by his father in 1896.

The elder Roberts is a member of the I. O. O. F., South End Chamber of Commerce, Roseland Lions club, West Pullman Civic club, and the Stewart Ridge Men's club.

ESTHER ENLISTS IN WAC TO JOIN TANK NAMESAKE

Because somewhere overseas there is a tank named in her honor, Pvt. Esther Schmal, a WAC now training at Fort Des Moines, Ia., has applied for overseas duty.

Esther Schmal.

Pvt. Schmal, daughter of Mrs. Mollie Schmal, 208 W. 119th st., enlisted in the WAC after working 17 months at the Calumet shipyards of the Pullman Standard company. "I want to work hard enough so I can deserve in some small way the compliment those fellows in the tank corps paid me," Pvt. Schmal said.

Soldiers Christen Tank.

"The story of 'my tank' begins back in 1941," she continued. "I met a young soldier and we got to talking about the war. It just happened that I said I'd always wanted something named after me. Long after I'd forgotten the conversation, I received a card from the soldier. He was fighting overseas. He said my name was on his tank, and that all the troops were devoted to it, as it had pulled them thru some tough spots."

Working first as a radio drill press operator for Pullman-Standard company, Pvt. Schmal was transferred to the company's welding school where she was the first woman to be graduated as a sil-brazer, or gas welder. She then was transferred to the shipyards where she worked on patrol craft and landing ships, medium.

Heads Safety Committee.

Pvt. Schmal was elected chairman of the woman's safety committee at the Calumet yards by her fellow workers, and during her term, employes received the Adm. Land safety trophy designating the yard as the safest in the nation.

In her off time, Pvt. Schmal spent four hours a night instructing civil air patrol cadets as a member of squadron 613-3 at Harvey. She ran up a total of 61 solo hours in the air, learned aircraft identification, signal corps codes, mechanics and navigation. When the CAP joined the WAC recruiting program, Pvt. Schmal recruited herself.

"I'm the oldest of 11 children," she said. "I am the family representative in the service. The kids were proud of me when I enlisted, and I have a good time at mail call, you can be sure. My ambition is to catch up soon with the troops who are in that tank."

WAR GARDENING FEVER ON S. W. SIDE GROWING

Growing interest in war gardening on the southwest side is evidenced by requests for plowing of additional tracts for spring planting according to George T. Donoghue, director of gardens for the OCD. The park district war garden department plows areas measuring at least 75 by 125 feet which were not used as gardens last year.

New areas for gardening in 1945 include land adjoining 6140 S. Mayfield av., directed by A. A. Addie, 6140 S. Mayfield av.; south of 61st st. on Moody av., with Paul Benter, 6127 S. Moody av., in charge; between 73d and 75th sts., Kedzie and Homan avs., directed by Walter J. Murphy, 6108 S. Sacramento av.; on S. Mason av. near 63d st., directed by Steve Saydak, 6244 S. Mason av., and on S. Mason av. near 63d st., with Jack Davies, 6117 S. Mason av., in charge.

Prospective gardeners who wish to arrange for plots should contact any of these chairmen, according to Mr. Donoghue.

ON SHORT WAVES

LONDON.

The North American service of the BBC from London includes the following programs today. The frequencies [in megacycles] employed after 4:15 p. m. are: 11.93, 9.58 9.82, 6.11, 7.26, 9.51. 4:45 p. m.—News. 6:30 p. m.—Radio Newsreel. 8:15 p. m.—Sunday Service. 9:10 p. m.—Tomorrow's London Papers, 11:30 p. m.—News reports.

DAY TIME RADIO PROGRAMS SHOW MORE VARIETY

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. session with radio's day time programs is easier on the ears than it was a few years ago. There are still solid phalanxes of soap operas on NBC and CBS, but W-G-N-Mutual and the Blue network do not have so many. In place of the vanished day time serials we found more of the night time type variety programs: service programs with information of many kinds; more music, mostly recorded, and more news.

The Breakfast club, with Don McNeill and gang, is a diverting half hour which gets the cast up before dawn—and studio, guests, too. But it's better entertainment than some of the most ballyhooed and expensive night time shows. Breakfast at Sardi's, with Tom Breneman, is another worth tuning in if you like comedy in the morning.

Mostly for Women.

June Baker and Elizabeth Hart usually conduct interesting interviews. Their guests include returning heroes, experts and authorities in many fields, and some times visiting celebrities. Bernardine Flynn, so long with Vic and Sade, has many a humorous and escapist note in her news commentary. Ida Bailey Allen continues her superior program for home makers. Lorraine Hall and Ann Hunter are others who must appeal to the day time feminine audience.

Among the other programs we found interesting were Jane Cowl's anecdotes, WLS Dinnerbell Time, W-G-N's Words and Rhythm in which listeners try to stump a panel of experts. On the particular day we listened we got a bonus in the form of a talk by Harold Smith, Chicago Tribune war correspondent and veteran of ten invasions, on the war in the Pacific. What a relief he was from the war commentators and analysts who pontificate from Washington, New York and London.

Good Music Available.

For serious music in the day time we can recommend the WAAF Symphonic Hour and the WCFL Music Lovers' Matinee. And there are a lot of other worthwhile musical programs on the FM stations. For light music you might try Morton Downey, Johnny Betts and the Musical Milkwagon. It was a surprise to find programs built around band leaders long since in the service. Alvino Rey, Glen Miller and Dick Stabile among them. The numerous war workers' programs, some piped thru factory loudspeaker systems, seem to avoid swing and sway stuff and concentrate on familiar [non-dance] music.

Hal Tate's Variety show is still going on two years after his entry into military service. His wife conducts the show.

News and More News.

There seems to be a news report about every 15 minutes of the day. As near as we could make out, John Holbrook and Julian Bentley get the heaviest workout.

No Sinatra record program appeared on the list, perhaps because the bobby sock brigade is in school during the day time hours. But there were plenty of Bing Crosby records available.

We found numerous other diverting periods. And we also encountered something we never have in the evening: A program that consists entirely of commercials. After surviving this ordeal we reached the conclusion that, while day time radio is making progress, there is still room for improvement.

At Navy Pier

Joe Kelly and the Quiz Kids will broadcast from Navy pier before an audience of bond buyers at 6:30 o'clock tonight over WENR (Blue).

'WALTZ DREAM' NEXT OPERETTA FOR AIR THEATER

Oscar Straus' Viennese operetta, "A Waltz Dream," will be given its radio premiere on the Chicago Theater of the Air Saturday before an audience of more than 4,500 persons in Medinah temple. The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the coast-to-coast Mutual network from 9 to 10 p. m.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Chicago Tribune, will speak on the program.

Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the series, will be starred. Gilbert Russell, tenor, will be heard as Lt. Nikki. Supporting roles will be sung by Earle Wilkie, baritone, and Ruth Slater, contralto.

Strauss' music for the production will be played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and the chorus coached by Robert Trendler.

Quiz Kids Broadcast Show from Navy Pier

Navy pier will be the origination point for the Quiz Kids show over WENR-Blue at 6:30 o'clock tonight. Quiz Kids Patrick Conlon, Joel Kupperman, Maureen Buckley, Harve Fischman, and Richard Williams will broadcast before an audience of bond buyers. Joe Kelly is quiz master of ceremonies.

Mozart's 36th Symphony on W-G-N on Tuesday

Henry Weber will conduct the W-G-N Symphony orchestra in Mozart's Symphony No. 36 [Linzer] on the Symphony hall program over W-G-N, WGNB Tuesday night at 8:30. The program will include Barber's "Essay for Orchestra" and Liszt's "Les Preludes."

CITIZENS SHOW PLANS A SALUTE TO FLOWER HIGH

Students of Flower Technical High school, appearing on The Chicago Tribune's 150th Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast on W-G-N at 10 a. m. Saturday, will swell to a total of more than a quarter million the number of midwest students who have been honored by the program. The recording for the broadcast will be made at 2 p. m. Wednesday in the school assembly hall, 3545 Fulton blvd.

Hermon D. Smith.

Philip Maxwell, master of ceremonies, will be introduced by Dr. Sophie A. Theilgaard, principal of the school which serves all Chicago. The Flower choir, directed by Lydia F. Cleaver and accompanied by John A. Wiederhirn, will sing two numbers.

Girl to Play Accordion.

Susan Madala will play an accordion arrangement of Metallo's "Sharpshooter's March." Hermon Dunlap Smith, grandson of Mrs. Lucy Flower, after whom the school was named, will speak.

The names of Lois Vivian Green, Flower High senior, and June Yolton, Bloomington [Ill.] High school senior, will be added to the program's honor roll. Miss Green is on the staff of the school paper, a librarian, and church worker, and hopes to be a singer.

Girls to Lead Cheers.

News about other high school activities will be read by Margaret Gilmer, 3250 N. Monticello av., a senior who has played leading roles in school dramas. Cheer leaders for the program will be Marilyn Czosek, Elenore Dixon, and Phyllis Le Velle.

Prior to Wednesday's recording the colors will be posted by Florene D'Alexander, Elaine De Luca, Betty Hawkins, Louise Janowik, Gloria Russell, and June Stockton.

Air Beethoven's Fifth Symphony Over W-G-N

Beethoven's Fifth Symphony in C minor, widely known as the "Victory" Symphony, will be featured by the Cleveland Symphony orchestra on W-G-N at 11 o'clock tonight. The orchestra, under the direction of Rudolph Ringwall.

NBC Symphony.

The NBC Symphony orchestra, conducted by Arturo Toscanini, will present Beethoven's Septet in E flat and his Symphony No. 2 in D major over WMAQ-NBC at 4 p. m. today.

Present "Jane Eyre."

A radio adaptation of "Jane Eyre," starring Victor Jory, will be presented on Matinee Theater at 1 p. m. today over WBBM-CBS.

Dry "Weepy" Underarms

When you have real trouble with perspiration, you want the fastest, surest relief you can get. Well! You can actually see 5-Day Magic Pads work!
All you do is pat your underarms with one of these tiny dainty pads. Protection lasts from 1 to 5 days (depending on you). And that's not all.
This modern method is kind to delicate silks and rayons—just use according to simple directions and you and your clothes stay dry and sweet. 5-Day won't irritate skin. Takes only 2 seconds to apply, and is so much daintier than old-fashioned methods. Economical, too. Each jar holds 35 pads, usually enough to last several months.
FREE: Send for generous trial supply. No obligation. Send name and address to Associated Distributors, Inc., Dept. 43, Chicago 10, Ill.

TO NEW MEMBERS OF THE BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB

Building the First White House." From a Painting by N. C. Wyeth. Courtesy Pennsylvania Railroad.

Basic History OF THE United States

By Charles A. & Mary R. Beard

A special enlarged and illustrated edition containing 64 pages of half-tone illustrations and 50 pages of selected documents and chronology

Retail Price $3.50

MANY BENEFITS — ONE OBLIGATION: Over 600,000 families now belong to the Book-of-the-Month Club. They do so in order to keep themselves from missing the important new books they are really interested in.

As a Club member, you receive an advance publication report about the judges' choice—and also reports about all other important coming books. If you decide you want the book-of-the-month, you let it come. If not (on a blank always provided) you can specify some other book you want or simply say: "Send me nothing."

Last year the retail value of free books given to Club members was over $7,000,000—given, not sold! These book-dividends could be distributed free because so many subscribers ordinarily want the book-of-the-month that an enormous edition can be printed. The saving on this quantity-production enables the Club to buy the right to print other fine library volumes. These are then manufactured and distributed free among subscribers—one for every two books-of-the-month purchased.

You pay no yearly fee as a member. Your one obligation is that you must buy no fewer than four books-of-the-month in any twelve-month period. Your subscription to the Book-of-the-Month Club is not for one year, but as long as you decide; you can end it at any time after taking four books-of-the-month. You pay for the books as you get them—the regular retail price (frequently less) plus a small charge to cover postage and other mailing expenses. (Prices are slightly higher in Canada.)

The Drama of America —in Terms of Today

Newly designed, newly written, this book is the distillation of more than forty years of the study, observation and thought of two great historians. It is a revealing account of those fundamental facts which are basic to any true understanding of American history.

Intelligent readers will welcome this compact presentation of the American story and of the events which are still active in their influence upon the history being made today.

YOU CAN BEGIN YOUR SUBSCRIPTION WITH ANY ONE OF THESE NATION-WIDE BEST-SELLERS

BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB N3812
385 Madison Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

Please enroll me as a member. I am to receive a free copy of the Beards' BASIC HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES, and for every two books-of-the-month I purchase from the Club I am to receive, free, the current book-dividend then being distributed. I agree to purchase at least four books-of-the-month from the Club each full year I am a member, and I may cancel my subscription any time after purchasing four such books from the Club.

BOOKS FOR CHRISTMAS

MS. in a Canteen Drifts in from Walter Simmons

By Walter Simmons.
Tribune War Correspondent.

Leyte Island, P. I.

In an upstairs room of a Filipino home, where this is being written, four newspaper correspondents live and have their being, or a rough facsimile of the same which is permitted by the supply situation and the austerities of war.

Walter Simmons.

Outdoors rain is falling in what the day's military bulletin with characteristic understatement describes as "a torrential tropical downpour." We have written our stories for the day, corked them carefully in canteens, and thrown the canteens out the window, hopeful that they will be washed up one day on the sands of California.

It is impossible to get anywhere or do any work. The gentlemen of the press are uneasy. It seems profitless to discuss again such worn subjects as hijinks in Sydney or whether army censors should be tried for their crimes after the war. Hopefully, a newspaper man from Cincinnati asks if any of us had picked up any new reading matter.

There is a strained silence, interrupted only by the passing of a weapons carrier splashing muddy water into the room.

Reading matter is a touchy subject on Leyte, even for correspondents who constantly get about and are noted for their sticky fingers. A month after D-day, there is little to read except the bulletins, which give a somewhat optimistic account of what happened yesterday; cables from the office conveying such cryptic thoughts as "paper rationed most stringently stop write tightest" or "address messages Chicatrib New York"; and letters which have been arriving from home in astonishing 10 days' time.

Books are such a rarity that a modest 5 inch shelf in this room probably would pass for a library among the G. Is in distant outposts. There is only one cloth covered volume—H. Allen Smith's undecorous "Lost in the Horse Latitudes." The book is somewhat swollen and dropsical looking, but Mr. Smith would be too if he spent an entire night on the window sill in the rain.

There are half a dozen paper pocket books, all highly prized regardless of content. The man from Cincinnati—a sophisticate back in the United States—has just patiently read an Ellery Queen mystery, one of the author's less memorable works. This is a spectacle only slightly less credible than THE TRIBUNE's Marcia Winn sitting, feet on desk, smoking a clay pipe and raeding a Zane Grey western.

Soldiers are grateful for pocket books and editions for the armed services, made possible by the generous coöperation of American publishers. These little volumes, passed from hand to hand, often mud-caked and tattered, are read in areas as close to the front as reading is practicable. Each copy is quite literally read to pieces. One of these books was found this week in the pack of a soldier killed at an Ormoc valley road block. The pages were rumpled and stained and mud-caked. The title of the book, fantastically enough, was "Taps for Pvt. Tussie."

More Reading World's Best Hope of Peace

By Mignon G. Eberhart.
Author of "Escape the Night."

Mignon G. Eberhart.

As this Christmas approaches Americans everywhere, I think, are gratefully conscious of an upsurge of hope that the war is nearing its final stage. Perhaps it is in its final stage and as these words are read, we may have a victory within our grasp which is in very truth the greatest victory of all: peace on earth and goodwill toward men.

The cost has been great, and measured in the costliest of all prices, human life and human hearts. Almost every American already knows this from his own experience. And consequently a desire for a firm and lasting peace is far greater than any other desire in the world.

The march of man has always been upward; sociological movement, even if briefly checked, has always in the end been toughly optimistic. When Voltaire said that if there had been no God, man would have had to invent one, he said also, it seems to me, that the desire for good is as strong and instinctive in our hearts as the desire for God.

Books have always been the great key. Reading has always unlocked the doors to true democracy, to social betterment—to freedom of man and to peace.

In the post-war world books must resume the tremendous responsibility placed upon them by history. Today, owing as much as anything to the enormous growth of reprints in cheap editions, there is probably a wider reading public than has ever before existed. If this is so, I think it is the task of the writer and the publisher to utilize this as a new tool and to rededicate themselves to the grave responsibility of helping in every possible way to maintain the power of truth and the blessing of peace.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Delos Avery.

A night in December—[From Clifford and John's Almanack]—"The great winter sky of stars."

Won't you all come to Christmas dinner? I don't mean now, when points are so scarce and it takes so many for a pound of butter or good beef, but a Christmas of a century or so gone by, a period of lavish larders and of lusty appetite.

There is a country inn to which we'll go by stagecoach, passing thru many a village where the grocers', butchers', and fruiterers' shops are thronged with customers. Housewives are stirring briskly about, putting their dwellings in order; and the glossy branches of holly, with their bright red berries begin to appear at the windows. Now capons and hens, besides turkeys, geese, and ducks, with beef and mutton—all must die. Now or never must musle be in tune, for the youth must dance and sing to get them in a heat, while the aged sit by the fire.

We shall approach the inn by way of its spotless kitchen, where aromas are, and we shall be guided by the light of the rousing kitchen fire beaming thru the window.

It is a spacious kitchen, hung round with copper and tin vessels highly polished, and decorated here and there with Christmas greens. Hams, tongues, and flitches of bacon are suspended from the ceiling. There is a smokejack to turn the roasting spit; and a clock is ticking in one corner. A scoured table extends along one side, with a cold round of beef and other hearty viands upon it, and foaming tankards of ale. Trim housemaids are hurrying about under the direction of a fresh bustling landlady.

A handsome hostess, merry host,
A pot of ale and now a toast;
Tobacco and a good coal fire,
Are things this season doth require.
—Poor Robin's Almanack, 1694.

If any of the foregoing lines of Christmas invitation have wakened in you a holiday mood and a zest for feasting, don't thank me, for I did not write them—tho I should be pleased if you thought so. I stole all the best of them from Washington Irving's "Sketch-Book," paraphrasing very slightly to change the past tense into present.

Having thus embarked on one ancient Christmas trail, I was tempted to go farther, and so looked up a Christmas of Samuel Pepys, his diary entry for Dec. 25, 1666.

Lay pretty long in bed, and then rose, leaving my wife desirous of sleep, having sat up till 4 this morning seeing her maids make mince pies. . . . Dined well on some good ribs of beef roasted, and mince pies; only my wife, brother, and Barker, and plenty of good wine of my own, and my heart full of true joy; and thanks to God Almighty for the goodness of my condition at this day.

Dipped also into Henry Carey's "Learned Dissertation Upon the Dumpling" [circa 1730], not for dumplings, however, but for the Christmas pudding, of which "kings, princes, and potentates have in all ages been lovers," as have "popes, cardinals, bishops, priests, and deacons."

• • •

It takes 12 hours boiling or steaming to make a truly regal Christmas pudding—perhaps much longer to assemble all the ingredients, for they include Demarara sugar from Guiana, raisins from Smyrna, brandy from France, rum from Jamaica, spices which will be easier to get after Japan is beaten—plus currants, apples, breadcrumbs, beef suet, eggs, candied peels, and some "old beer."

Dr. Doolittle Just Won't Do as a Gift for All Friends

By Emily Kimbrough.
Author of "How Dear to My Heart."

THERE is never for me a question of whether or not to buy books for Christmas presents. I give books widely, on the theory that even people who do not like to read, like to own them.

My only difficulty is in reconciling myself to other people's taste in books. In other fields of giving I am, I think, more tolerant. I do not, for example, send perfumed bath salts to my 7 year old nephew, to whom anything associated with washing is repellent. But it does irk me not to send books I like to any or every one on my list. It is such pleasure to me to buy those books over and over again.

Emily Kimbrough.

I am, however, still smarting from the implication of two of my dearest friends, to each of whom I sent the Doctor Doolittle volumes. They insinuated that either I had tied up all my Christmas packages and then put cards on them at random, or else that I was retrogressing to such a degree as should make me a candidate for some public haven.

I thought every one liked children's books. I should have thought, too, that every one liked detective stories. Every one doesn't.

It is best, however, I think, to ignore such vagaries in people, and to send out generously Doctor Doolittles, detectives, and all other favorites. Certainly it is better, at least, than not sending any books at all for Christmas.

Here's a Guide to Motorless Flying

"GLIDING AND SOARING," by John Paul Andrews. [McBride, $2.75.]

The importance of silent flight has been proved so thoroly in this war that today the motorless plane is on the threshold of a great career. "Gliding and Soaring" is an interesting and valuable manual of silent flight, touching upon aerodynamics, the history of gliding, construction, flying technique, history, and the legal and technical aspects of coöperative clubs and schools.

Engaging View of Fantastic Washington

"THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE WASHINGTON, by Vera Bloom. [Putnam, $3.]

Reviewed by Will Davidson.

The neophyte in official Washington society soon discovers that one just doesn't make calls. One makes protocols. There is a routine of hobnobbery that is as stringently defined and rigidly enforced as the boot training of a marine enlistee. To some who become enmeshed in the capital's official life this social regimen has compensations. To Vera Bloom the compensations are enormous.

The daughter of Representative Sol Bloom writes of her two decades in Washington with a naive charm that softens the rough edges of her hesitant and involved literary mannerisms. Miss Bloom has found the strange shenanigans of official society rich with thrills and glamor and rewarding friendships. With almost school girl breathlessness she recalls the excitement of the visit of the king and queen of England; of her own triumphant social coup involving Mussolini; of the many wonderful friends the Blooms acquired.

This book is an engaging view of the almost fantastic way of life known as Washington society—seen thru wide, happy eyes.

A Challenge to Humanity in War-Time

By Ernest Fremont Tittle.
Pastor of First Methodist church, Evanston, Ill.

Jesus had no illusions about human nature. "He knew what was in man," one of his biographers has said. But Jesus, who looked deeper into the human heart than any one else ever has done, believed in humanity. For he saw men as children of God, having within them divine possibilities.

Human nature is capable of the most desperate wickedness. Things done in this world in recent years have made impossible the easy optimism of the 1920s, not to mention the sentimental thinking of the Victorian age. We have been shocked at the depths to which men and nations can descend. But the fact remains that human beings the world over have within them divine possibilities.

If we have seen the depths to which man can descend, we have seen the greatness also to which men can rise.

We ordinary men are ourselves capable of greatness. According to the London Times, enormous numbers of ordinary people in London when the blitz was at its worst found happiness in helping one another and in finding themselves asked and expected to do something big, brave, and unselfish. We are terribly inclined toward pride, toward greed, toward the lusts of the flesh and the lust of power; but we are not essentially small, petty, selfish creatures who cannot be expected to put forth our best efforts unless there is held before us, as a carrot before the nose of a donkey, the lure of large financial reward!

We do not have to live at the level of the jungle, stalking and killing like beasts of prey. We do not have to base national policy or private enterprise on the sole ground of self-interest and thereby condemn our children to kill or be killed. We can subordinate self-interest to the general welfare. Let God be thanked who so made us that we are capable of greatness.

Should Mean Men BeReformedWhen Christmas Comes?

By Joseph Stanley Pennell

Author of "The History of Rome Hanks."

Always Christmas has come from books, out of books and always has been put back into them: You may read how Master François Villon sat alone on Christmas eve, 1456, in Paris writing his "Petit Testament" while his ink froze on the board before him. He stopped to pray to Mary—

You may read now, and remember how first you read that Marley had been "dead as a doornail" for seven years past. And surely you will see Marley's face on the knocker and go apprehensively up the wide cold stairs with Scrooge and his cheap candle to the Dutch tiles around the fireplace and the saucepan of gruel shortly to receive the horrific ghost of Marley without bowels, its lower jaw trussed up, its waist dragging a chain of "padlocks, ledgers, heavy purses wrought in steel."

Tho all this gave your spine an arctic twinge, you knew that it had been written to do just that—and you read on to lose yourself in the wonderful physiognomies of Dickens' Christmas persons in Victorian London.

Because of a book Scrooge's Christmas, Bob Cratchit trying to warm himself by the candle, the cold counting house, Mr. Fezziwig's ball are still the dream legends of millions of us.

I can still dine with Scrooge at his "mean tavern" and let myself into his lodgings muttering: "Bah! Humbug!"

My only adverse criticism of this magnificent miser is: I should not have had him reform. He gave in! In "Stave One" he has too much fiber to weaken. Thus I consider sentimentally that Dickens ruined Christmas' meanest man and left us, in the end, with no proper model for future curmudgeons of Yuletide.

Noted Works on Religion During 1944

By J. R. Perkins

Pastor of First Congregational church, Council Bluffs, Ia. Author of "The Emperor's Physician."

The following selection of some of the noteworthy religious books of the last year includes none that buttress dogmatic opinion nor ecclesiastical presumption; consequently, the selections may provoke controversy.

Foremost because of its scope, is Will Durant's "Caesar and Christ." [Simon & Schuster.] For this volume, summarized, belongs in the category of great religious books. Two novels of distinction—because of their historic religious significance—belong in this group: Sholem Asch's "The Apostle" [Putnam] and Thomas Mann's "Joseph, the Provider" [Knopf].

Also in the field of religious history—for we all are looking backward that we may look forward more clearly—is K. S. Lataurette's sixth volume of his unexcelled story of the Christian church. The specific title is "The Great Century in Africa and Asia."

Out of a list of several books that purport to be inside information on Nazi origins and development S. W. Herman's "It's Your Souls We Want" [Harper], is a clear exposition of what happened to religion in Germany. The author, for six years, was minister of the American Church in Berlin. "The New Order in the Church," by W. A. Brown [Abingdon-Cokesbury], is a lucid statement of the part the church can play in the post-war world if the church will, first, heal itself. For how can it promote international comity and remain so divided itself?

Jacques Maritain, in "The Rights of Men and Natural Law" [Scribner], writes compellingly on the old problem of religion and the state.

"The Ten Commandments in a Changing World," by Isaac Klien [Bloch] is an excellent restatement of the eternity of this particular phase of Mosaic legislation for people of all races. The contribution of religion to the art of healing is ably presented by Karl R. Stolz in "The Church and Psychotherapy" [Abingdon-Cokesbury]. The author is most effective when conjoining religion and medical science in the cure of ills both mental and physical. Dorothy Donnelly's fine grasp of the relation between religion and a theistic science as portrayed in "The Bone and the Star" [Sheed and Ward], recently reviewed in THE TRIBUNE by the writer, gives her no mean place among the religious authors of the year.

Books Selected for U. S. Chaplain Serving Overseas

By John Astley-Cock.

When in 1943 a clerical friend departed overseas as an army chaplain he gave up his Book club membership and appointed me his book-of-the-month mentor. "Send them all together about Yuletide" he said, "and remember, no ephemeralia!" His literary taste is decidely eclectic.

My selection, therefore, is aimed at choosing one outstanding example in each of the fields cultivated by his inner life. His parting injunction, which seemingly excluded novels, burdened me, however, with the onus of rendering judgment on a matter usually relegated to posterity—for of books, who can say today what will be immortal tomorrow? The Christmas consignment contained:

"Connecticut Yankee," Wilbur L. Cross; "The Republic," Charles A. Beard; "The Little Locksmith," Katharine B. Hathaway; "Education at the Crossroads," Jacques Maritain; "The Loom of Language," Frederick Bodmer; "Persons and Places," George Santayana; "The Growth of American Thought," Merle Curti; "Romanticism of the Modern Ego," Jacques Barzun; "Yankee from Olympus," Catherine D. Bowen; "Under the Bridge," Ferris Grenslet; "Born Under Saturn," Catherine M. Maclean; "Shield of Achilles," Horace Gregory; "Flower of Evil," Edwin Morgan, and "The Duke," Richard Aldington.

"The Nativity," an etching by Albrecht Durer, from the Chicago Art institute's department of drawings and prints.

He's Terrific.

Theodore Pratt, whose "Perils in Provence and Other Ticklish Places" has just been published by Duell, Sloan & Pearce, has another book, "Miss Dilly Says No," coming out next year. He is completing a novel for publication in 1946, has started one for 1947, and is planning one for 1948.

★ BOOKS FOR CHRISTMAS ★

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

CHRISTMAS is too intimately associated with feasting and too little with spiritual values, it has been asserted, and indeed it may be true; but it is impossible to ignore that aspect of the mystery of man on his most significant holiday. And I cannot discover that anybody does ignore it. Collectors of Christmas books and students of Christmas lore, outside the theological field, at any rate, are aware that since time out of mind accounts of the happy festival have sparkled with savory hearthfires and what is so admirably called "good cheer"—a phrase with a strong flavor of barley brew. It has always been so. Ah, what stomachs they had in the good old days before dyspepsia was ever heard of! What lordly appetites!

Well, a merry Christmas to you, and

"If you would send up the brawner's head,
Sweet rosemary and bays around it spread.
His foaming tusks let some large pippin grace,
Or midst these thundering spears an orange place;
Sauce like himself, offensive to his foes,
The roguish mustard, dangerous to the nose,
Sack and the well-spiced hippocras, the wine,
Wassail, the bowl with ancient ribands fine,
Porridge with plums, and turkeys with the chine."

As one who, alas, has little more now than an academic interest in such jollity, your chronicler has been enjoying it all vicariously in books, and will continue to do so.

Pie Test for Puritans.

You will have mince pie, of course. It was so important to the seasonal celebration in Puritan times, you remember, that to eat or not to eat mince pie became almost a test of religious creed. There is a story to the effect that it was John Bunyan's refusal to eat mince pie that kept him in prison, where ultimately he wrote the "Pilgrim's Progress," but it is probably apocryphal. Can you imagine anybody, even so obstinate a man as Bunyan, staying in jail rather than eat a piece of mince pie? [It is true, I would rather go to jail than eat a piece of lemon pie, but that is another matter].

How to Make Merry.

The eminent bibliophile and bookseller, Dr. Rosenbach of Philadelphia, tells us—in an essay on the "Earliest Christmas Books"—that many carols and ballads, known to have been printed, have been lost along the years. Their titles remain to entice us, and one of these, dated 1567, is "A Christmas Warnynge for hym yt intendethe to Ryde and make mery abrode with his fryndes." Obviously Dr. Rosenbach does not know of the fragment of this missing ballad—apparently the conclusion—said to be in the private museum of a Chicago collector. It is this department's privilege to present it:

"Then marke it welle, when you doe Ryde
Abrode to mark ye Chrystmasse-tyde
With Wassail Bowle of barley brew,
That ille shalle not befalle to you,
Drink not too deepe of fryndlye Ale
So innocent within hys paile,
Looke not too cheerlye on ye Wyne,
Lest hedde to heeles you doe incline;
But better yette, tie strong and well-ly
Your feete beneathe ye Horse's belly."

Puritans at Christmas.

It is recorded that among the younger set of Plymouth colony, in our own stern Puritan days, were some who remembered with regret the good times they had left behind. The story is told, in a confusion of pronouns, in William Bradford's "History of Plimouth Plantation." Thus:

"On the day called Christmas day ye Governor called them out to work [as usual], but the most of this new company excused themselves and said it went against their consciences to work on that day. So the Governor told them that if they made it a matter of conscience, he would spare them until they were better informed. So he led away the rest and left them. But when they came home at noon from their work, he found them in the street at play openly, some pitching the bar and some at stoole-ball and such like sports. So he went to them and took away their implements and told them it was against his conscience that they should play and others work."

"Dear old Friend and Absentee," wrote Charles Lamb to his friend, Thomas Manning, who had been in China for nine years, "this is Christmas day, 1815 with us; what it may be with you I don't know, the 12th of June next year perhaps; and if it should be the consecrated season with you, I don't see how you can keep it. You have no turkeys; you would not desecrate the festival by offering up a withered Chinese bantam instead of the savoury grand Norfolcian holocaust, that smokes all around my nostrils at this moment from a thousand firesides. Then what puddings have you? Where will you get holly to stick in your churches, or churches to stock your dried tea-leaves [that must be the substitute] in? What memorials you can have of the holy time, I see not. A chopped missionary or two may keep up the thin idea of Lent and the wilderness; but . . . 'tis our rosy-cheeked, homestalled divines . . . faces fragrant with the mince pies of half a century, that alone can authenticate the cheerful mystery—I feel."

Lamb wrote many delightful Christmas letters, a season that stirred him to a charming benevolence and some of his best nonsense. His last letter was written in the Christmas season too. It was dated Dec. 22, 1834, but on the 25th he was confined to his bed, and on the 27th he was dead. That last letter had to do with a book, a book he thought he had left behind at the home of a friend.

Giving a Dog a Good Name.

Most popular of Christmas hymns, perhaps, and most widely sung, is the "Adeste Fideles"—"O Come All Ye Faithful!"—which has been credited to St. Bonaventura, tho probably he didn't write it. Which reminds me that my friend Stephen Huguenot, the extinct poet, named one of his dogs "Dusty Fidelis," because it was born at the Christmas season—altho, as he said, it would have been a good name at any season.

Christmas as a season of merriment is mentioned so infrequently in Shakespeare as to make the omission a matter of curious speculation. There are several passing references, but in each case, Dr. Rosenbach feels, the tone is slightly disparaging. Possibly this is a subject for a thesis on "Shakespeare and Christmas," but I have run out of space.

The Bird Center Christmas as viewed by "ye editor," J. Oscar Fisher, in John T. McCutcheon's collection of Bird Center cartoons.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE

Amidst the happy laughter of children and the singing of Christmas carols by the choir, composed of Messrs. Orville Peters, Wilbur Fry, Wes Kidwell, and Ernest Pratt, the brilliant Yuletide festivities in Bird Center went resounding down into history. Perhaps never before was Trinity church so thronged and never before was a Christmas tree so grand and generous. Like some enchanted cornucopia it was! From its spangled branches it rained beautiful benefactions to left and to right, and the wealth of its treasures seemed inexhaustible. Like a magician of old did Mr. Smiley Greene, who essayed the rôle of Santa, shower the bountiful fruits of that magnificent cone of dazzling splendor upon the fortunate people of Bird Center. He was assisted by Mr. Elmer Pratt, who from the heights of a trembling ladder plucked the presents from the topmost limbs. Mr. Winthrop K. Biddle of Philadelphia, Pa., assisted Mr. Pratt, and Mine Host Mort Peters of the Bird Center House read off the names from the presents. As each name was read the happy beneficiary stepped forward and received the present from Santa. Miss Minerva Maltby of Decatur, who is still in our midst, received a beautiful manicure set, and the wiseacres looked knowingly at Mr. Riley Peters.

Maurois Hails Resurgence of Literature in France

By Andre Maurois.

FOR the first time, after four years of silence, French writers in France will be, this Christmas, free to express what they feel. During the long occupation, they published very little. As Georges Duhamel wrote the other day: "Most of the writers joined me voluntarily in silence, understanding that in a world of restrictions and lies, it was better to hold one's tongue."

At the beginning, some good novels had been written. Later the censorship of the enemy became so strict that it was no longer possible to tell the truth about anything.

Yet very good poetry was published openly, because poets have a way of saying things without saying them. Poets managed to speak of France when they seemed to sing of their best-beloved, because France was their best-beloved. Also the greatest French writers wrote anonymously, or under assumed names, in the underground papers.

Now the nightmare is over and the new freedom will usher in, I feel sure, a great period of French literature. So it was in 1815, after the Napoleonic wars, and again in 1920, after the first world war. So it will be in 1945. And the new France will be the same France, New, but true to her best traditions. New, but faithful to the great thinkers who made her what she is. For the history of French literature should continue to be what it always has been: a remarkable combination of audacity and continuity.

CHRISTMAS FAITH

Palo Alto, Cal.

With lightened hearts we bid the shadows lift again,
Over the world some light of hope shall fall,
When comes the Day, to shine with faith and gift again,
When comes the Child, to make us children all.

C. A. Beard Tells How to Review Book

By Charles Austin Beard.

Author of "The Republic" and "A Basic History of the United States."

New Milford, Conn.

There is a large amount of good book reviewing in the United States and it seems to me that standards have been rising during the last quarter of a century; but there is room for improvement.

Charles A. Beard.

Book reviewing is no hack business; it is an art no less important for the advancement of literature than creative writing itself; and should be so conceived by publishers, editors, and book reviewers.

The primary business of a reviewer is to tell his readers what the author of the book has set as his task, to give a sketch of the contents from start to finish, to place the book in its class, to indicate whether the author has fulfilled his task and how the book ranks or should rank in its class, and then, if possible, pass a considered judgment on the book as a whole.

When a reviewer merely picks out a few passages and writes an essay on how he thinks the book should have been written, he may be entertaining himself and his readers, but he is not engaged in reviewing.

It is a rare book that has no errors of fact and grammar, and in this respect the question for the reviewer is whether the errors are so gross and numerous as to invalidate the author's claim to competence.

The tendency of many reviewers to explode and to sling adjectives of praise or blame around does a disservice to literature; and adjectives of praise are worse in this respect than adjectives of blame.

There are no "great" books, as far as I can judge, but there are great passages in many books and there are books that are great in conception and theme.

The old police reporter's rule applies to book reviewing: Who, when, where, and what?

If some publisher should say to his book editor: "Here, John, is $25,000 for an experiment; with the aid of competent counselors pick out the 10 'best books' of the season; choose 10 of the most competent persons in the respective domains of knowledge and thought represented by the said 10 books; give them plenty of time to do their work, and get out a number of pages containing the reviews"—the aforesaid publisher would, in my humble opinion, "start something" wonderful in America.

If books and book reviewing were buzz saws, casualties would be great.

Anyway, friends and enemies, Good luck!

French Poodles Are Hobby of Author Emily Kimbrough

By Harry Hansen.

New York.

TWO brilliant authors now in the spotlight are Ernie Pyle and Emily Kimbrough, and both hail from Muncie, Ind. Miss Kimbrough has managed to get the Ball family of Muncie, to which she is related, into her story, "How Dear to My Heart." She lives in Ardmore, Pa., where she raises French poodles for a hobby. I have always pitied French poodles because they are sheared to look like freaks when at heart they are probably as serious about life as all other dogs. Maybe we ought to pity their owners, who don't understand the trusting nature of dogs. However, this is not said in criticism of Miss Kimbrough, whose views on the subject are unknown to me.

Last summer Miss Kimbrough visited Mount Desert, Me., and as a French poodle trotted at her heels a New England Yankee sized her up thus: "One of those artists—comic."

Miss Kimbrough's story of girlhood is getting plenty of attention, and her publisher, Dodd, Mead, fears the supply of paper won't outlast the demand. So changed are conditions in the publishing industry that publishers are now afraid of runaway sales. Howard Lewis quoted a remark made in his hearing: "Can't we get a good book to publish that won't be a best seller?"

Workers in Two Arts.

Painting and writing are the professions of two individuals currently in the news. Angna Enters is exhibiting her paintings at the Newhouse galleries, including illustrations for her book, "Silly Girl." Besides writing and painting she acts in her "one woman theater" and prepares scenarios for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Sidney Janis, author of "Abstract and Surrealist Art in America" has just opened an exhibition at the Mortimer Brandt gallery, where Reynal & Hitchcock, his publisher, staged a cocktail party on Nov. 29.

James A. van der Veldt, O. F. M., author of "The City Sets on a Hill," the story of the Vatican, was the guest at a luncheon given by Dodd, Mead & Co. at the Vanderbilt Monday. The author told me that he lived for 12 years in Rome, being associated part of the time with the College for the Propagation of the Faith, and we enthusiastically compared experiences, for Rome, where I lived one winter, is a city that gets into one's bones as no other I know. He agreed with me that "The Eternal City," a book of photographs issued by Studio Publications, Inc., is one of the best pictorial guides to the Vatican and St. Peter's. I hope copies are still available, for Studio editions are rarely large or reprinted.

Women of Importance.

An original send-off for Rose Pesotta's autobiography, "Bread Upon the Waters," was planned by her associates of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, for which she is an organizer as well as vice president. They invited editors to join them in the dressmaking, stop and eat as the girls do near the machines at which they work. One feature writer remarked to a literary columnist: "I wouldn't miss this for anything. These girls will have more to say about our future than the people we meet at the Ritz."

Rose Pesotta is going to take part in the discussion of fighting for post-war democracy at the Hotel McAlpin conference Dec. 9. Many authors and editors will attend a two day meeting. James T. Farrell, author of the Studs Lonigan stories, is on the program, too.

A Former Chicagoan.

John Nicholas Beffel helped Rose Pesotta write her book. He is widely known among the craft as a newspaper man with fine humanitarian sympathies, but he is one of the most self-effacing and modest of men. He is one of my oldest newspaper friends, dating back to the time when I was in the University of Chicago and envied him because he had a reporter's job. At one time we shared rooms in a brownstone house on Grand blvd., which I later put into a little novel. John also collaborated with Art Young when the latter wrote his autobiography.

Frances Parkinson Keyes, who lives in Alexandria, Va., has an interesting device for getting close to the setting she writes about. Lately she engaged with Julian Messner to write a novel about New Orleans, so she took an apartment in the Gen. Beauregard house there. This house is well known nationally, for its photographs have been widely reproduced. She has the whole top floor and soaks in atmosphere while writing about it.

Odd Argument for Bonds.

So many different views drift across my desk that I am generally impervious to shock. But a new one has just unsettled me. William J. Baxter, who runs a New York economic research bureau—they seem to be multiplying—has written a large paper pamphlet entitled "No Inflation Coming!" His argument is that we ought to save up cash and war bonds because everything else is going to pot. This is the strangest argument for war bonds that I have heard this week.

Mystery of Mysteries.

Just what is the mystery about the mystery story? Just when it reaches a low ebb in craftsmanship—so the avid mystery fans tell me—the intellectual world gets interested in it as a phenomenon. Prof. Jacques Barzun discusses it in the Saturday Review under the title of "Not Whodunit, but How?" Joseph Wood Krutch, author of the new biography, "Samuel Johnson," writes an article for the Nation of Nov. 25 on "Only a Detective Story." The Atlantic Monthly for December publishes "The Simple Art of Murder" by Raymond Chandler. In the meantime those of us who select books for the armed services editions get word that the boys at the front enjoy mysteries and crime stories, and are more concerned over one unexplained killing in fiction than mass slaughter in front of machine guns.

Whenever mystery stories are discussed by highbrows, Dorothy L. Sayers gets a lot of credit for intelligence, good writing, and high class mystifying. But Raymond Chandler has found something about Dorothy Sayers to criticize in his Atlantic article.

Chicago in 1844: Crude Town with a Cultural Craving

By M. M. Quaife

Secretary and Editor of the Burton Historical Collection, Detroit Public Library, and author of "Lake Michigan."

[Picture on page 1.]

If the reader could be carried back on some magic carpet to the Chicago of 1844 he would find himself in a crude new city of about 8,000 souls confined in an area 1½ miles square occupying both sides of the main river and the lower sections of its two branches.

Since 1840 the population has practically doubled its number, and in three more years it would double again. Even such growth, however, lagged far behind the excited imaginations of the townsmen.

An orator of 1840, when Chicago as yet had exported practically nothing, confidently forevisioned the early attainment of the proud preëminence of becoming "the great produce mart of the western world."

The editor of the 1844 city directory confessed his inability to assign any limit to the city's advancement.

To the eyes of our visitor of 1944, however, the crude town of 1844 would have seemed dismal. Railroads, for Chicago, still existed only in dreams. Overland travel by public stage or private means was about as uncertain and laborious as it is in darkest Africa today. Until 1855 the city had no sewerage system. To make matters worse, it was elevated so slightly above the near-by lake that in a subsequent decade the herculean task of raising the buildings of the entire city several feet above their primitive level had to be undertaken; while the unpaved streets gave off clouds of dust in dry weather and in wet were practically impassable.

Fredrika Bremer, a talented Swedish observer, who visited Chicago in 1850, declared the city "a huckstress rather than a queen," and found it inexpressibly ugly. Already it was a veritable babel of races and tongues, and a "marked want of integrity" in the conduct of its public affairs prevailed.

Yet the foundations of a very real culture were being laid. A substantial stratum of men and women of New York and New England origin leavened the mass of ruder townsmen and they had not left their love of morality and education behind them. Miss Bremer visited and rhapsodized over the public schools, which in 1844 employed eight teachers to care for more than 800 pupils, and levied a school tax of $685.24.

Public schools aside, the city boasted a dozen churches, a Bible society, a lyceum, numerous volunteer and fire companies, and an astonishing number of temperance societies. This same year the first city directory appeared; and from the same press a modest 34 page blue-backed pamphlet narrative of the massacre of 1812 written by Mrs. John H. Kinzie, which marks the real beginning of belles-lettres in Chicago.

However crude the city of 1844 may seem to have been, our forebears needed no present day sympathy in the matter of their literary fare. They lived in the Golden Age of American literary endeavor when such writers as Bryant, Poe, Longfellow, and Emerson were in their prime. Longfellow had sold his "Village Blacksmith" in 1840 for $15 and in the following years was to acquire the distinction of being America's best loved poet. Hawthorne had published the first series of "Twice Told Tales" in 1837 and the second in 1842, while his "Scarlet Letter" and other works remained still to be written. Lowell, but 25 in 1844, published this year his second volume of verse; Cooper, much older, had completed his Leatherstocking cycle with "The Pathfinder" in 1840 and "The Deerslayer" in 1841; while Emerson's second volume of "Essays" was issued in 1844. This was a few months before the publication of Poe's "Murders in the Rue Morgue."

This Book Really Helps Your Memory

"HOW TO REMEMBER," by Bruno Furst. [Greenberg, $2.50.]

If your strongest point is your weakness at remembering names, take heart. Here is a lively lesson in memory training that works! At least one reader, even before practicising faithfully the exercises that Dr. Furst steadfastly maintains are essential, found that the several demonstrations the author uses to prove his point actually worked out as he said they would.

New Volume of Memoirs by Harrison

"GROWING UP WITH CHICAGO: AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY," by Carter H. Harrison. [Ralph Fletcher Seymour, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Charles Collins.

Carter H. Harrison's "Stormy Years," published in 1935, was an autobiography which dealt largely with the political career of the eminent five term mayor, who ranks high on the list of contemporary First Citizens. "Growing Up with Chicago," its recently published sequel, deals largely with the personal Carter, from boyhood to active old age as collector of internal revenue. But since politics ran in the family and formed the atmosphere in which his most famous years were spent, the subject is by no means absent from his new volume of memoirs. For example, an entire chapter is devoted to a humorous removal of the hide of Harold L. Ickes, in answer to certain Ickish anti-Harrison remarks in "Autobiography of a Curmudgeon."

The greater part of the book, however, was not written for precinct captains, past and present, but for the folks who like to hobnob after dinner over the good old days and years in Chicago, when life was lusty and the free lunch counter in saloons more appealing than rationed food and vitamin cooking. Carter II., born at the corner of Clark and Harrison streets in 1860 and moved in early childhood to a west side prairie that became Ashland avenue, saw it all and enjoyed it completely. He tells the story like the returned Ulysses: "I am a part of all that I have met."

As a boy he fought with micks when they invaded his territory or he theirs; as a young man he observed horse races with a speculative eye, attended boxing matches, admired actresses, and pedalled over "century courses" [100 miles in a day] on his bicycle. His life, outside its political frame, has been characteristic of Chicago during its era of furious growth, and his book has decided value as a document for historians.

Mr. Harrison is no slouch, as he would put it in the vernacular of the 1890s, as a writer. His style has humor and vigor, and he tosses off many a picturesque phrase. Moreover, he seems to have been careful in verifying his memories, so as to avoid the inaccuracies typical of reminiscence in advanced age. Often the reader will find him referring to vintage directories in proof of names and addresses. No doubt he has slipped once in a while; for example, he misjudges the location of the Richelieu hotel by a few store fronts. But the work deserves a place of honor on any public or private library's shelf of Chicagoana.

The passage on Chicago's entertainment of Prince Henry of Prussia reveals that a naval officer named Tirpitz, who became the spurlos versenkt admiral of Germany's submarines in World War I., was in the Hohenzollern party. A chapter dealing with sensational books about Chicago's underworld, which Mr. Harrison resents, states that if his father, Carter I., had lived a few days longer, a suit for criminal libel would have been filed against W. T. Stead, English author of "If Christ Came to Chicago."

A Wartime Adventure in French Mountains

"PIERRE KEEPS WATCH," by Maria Gleit. [Scribner, $2.]

When the Nazis came to the village of Croix St. Nicholas in the French mountains, and demanded all the live stock, things looked pretty bad for the townsfolk. But Pierre, the shepherd boy hid the village flock deep in the mountains and constituted himself a watcher to save the town from fire. The adventures and many narrow escapes of this young patriot make a stirring story which boys in the upper grades will enjoy.

Books For Children

Tales of Sea, Old and New, Perfect Gifts

By Al Chase.

Old fashioned sea tales have been put on a back shelf by the publishers this season in favor of true stories of war on the oceans. In the face of this flood of fighting books, however, one old standby, considered by many to be one of the great stories of salt water, "The Sea Witch" by Alexander Laing [Farrar & Rinehart, $3.50] has been published in a new edition, illustrated in color by Gordon Grant, which can be recommended as an almost perfect gift for young or old.

One other old blue water friend comes to life in "Mr. Glencannon Ignores the War" by Guy Gilpatrick [Dutton, $2], the usual hilarious, bibulous adventures of the alcoholic Scots engineer.

For those who like their sea books on the war without blasphemy and bloodshed, there are three jolly volumes, minus horror, profanity, and death, and all exceptionally entertaining: "Baby Flat-Top" by Comdr. Kenneth D. McCracken [Farrar & Rinehart, $2]; "Purser's Progress—the Adventures of a Sea Going Office Boy" by Tom O'Reilly [Doubleday Doran, $2], and "Davy Jones, I Love You" by F. R. Buckley [Lippincott, $2.50].

A nonwar book worth having on your sea shelf is the exciting life story of one of America's greatest sea writers—"Sea Borne—30 Years Avoyaging" by James B. Connolly [Doubleday Doran, $3]. One of the best of its kind.

Two of the outstanding land travel books of the season are "The Amazing Bob Davis—His Last Vagabond Journey" by Fred S. Mathias [Longmans Green, $3], a lively account of a motor trip to Mexico, the American southwest and Atlantic coast, and "Exploring We Would Go" by Ellen Gatti [Scribners, $3], an unusually entertaining account of African exploration.

Little Georgie Meets New Folks on Hill

"RABBIT HILL," by Robert Lawson. [Viking, $2.]

"There's good times, Georgie, an' there's bad times, but they go. An' there's good folks, and there's bad folks, an they go too—but there's always new folks comin'." Thus spoke Uncle Analdas Rabbit to his nephew, Little Georgie, when the new tenants were coming to the big house on the hill. And great was the excitement among the little furry people as they wondered about traps and shotguns and hunting dogs. But even greater was their joy when one night they found the new pool, and the feeding ledge with the magic words "There is enough for all." One of the year's most appealing books with its theme of kinship between man and the friendly little animals who are all about him. Lovely brown lithographic illustrations.

D. Genevieve Dixon.

Outstanding History of the Lincoln Era

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S WORLD," by Genevieve Foster. [Scribner, $3.]

A companion book to the author's distinguished "George Washington's World," this is another outstanding contribution to the history shelf of the boy and girl of the middle grades. Dividing Lincoln's period into five parts, Mrs. Foster describes world happenings in each period, bringing into the focus simultaneous events in many lands, and leaving with the young reader an over-all picture of period history, too often lacking. A fine selection for the boy or girl who likes history.

Untinseled Ozark Gifts Carry Aura of Christmas

By Marguerite Lyon
Author of "Take to the Hills."

My Christmas wish is that I might be given the ability to put the spirit of an Ozark Christmas into words. Now, as never before, the world needs to know and understand the spirit of thoughtful giving.

Probably many a hill woman has never heard the famous line: "A gift without the giver is bare." But she doesn't need to know it. Her love, her painstaking care, yes, part of her very heart, have gone into every gift she has ever presented to friend or kinfolk.

For instance, the gift of seeds of flowers . . . zinnias, marigolds, bachelor buttons, blue morning glories . . . that have bloomed most beautifully in her garden. These were the flowers she cherished and as the summer neared its close she went out early and late to gather the seeds as they ripened, dropping them into the pockets of her apron or sweater. Then the seeds were cleaned of chaff and put into little bags, sewed with the same fine stitches used in her finest quilting.

Sometimes the garden gifts are little pots of mint, or a slip of geranium, or a cactus that blooms at Christmas time. More than likely the pot isn't a store-boughten one, but a tin can, gay with house paint.

Perhaps the gift is an apron, made from some one's prettiest chicken feed sack. No small apron, either, made for show or pretense . . . but a good, big apron that will cover one's good dress when she hurries into the kitchen after church to start dinner cooking. And always the apron has a big pocket . . . for pockets come in handy when one is "redding up" the house!

Often the gift is a quilt top in the kite or necktie or flower garden pattern, pieced with patient fingers. The giver can identify each scrap of fabric, pointing out pieces from Cousin Florey's dress and Paw's Sunday shirt. Most likely the pieced quilt blocks will alternate with squares from long treasured sugar sacks which still bear a faint blue imprint of initials famous in sugar circles.

Or maybe your hill gift will be a dozen jars of jelly or jam made from blackberries, dewberries, or grapes that grow wild in these wooded hills. This is a gift to prize above rubies.

If you lived in our community you might even receive an oil painting from one of my friends, a farm wife who took up painting when the last of her five children graduated from high school.

"I wanted to fill up my time," she says modestly.

Or, it is quite possible you would receive a clean washed flour sack full of black walnuts or extra large hickory nuts, gathered from a tree whose location deep in the woods is kept secret year in and year out.

Would it matter that traditional Christmas ribbons and tags are often missing from such gifts? It shouldn't! For those who have eyes to see can perceive about each humble but proudly given offering a shining aura far more brilliant than the gayest tinsel ribbon. That is the spirit of Christmas.

If I could put that spirit into words I would consider myself an author.

DADS! MOTHERS! LOOK!
A new and strictly modern version of Mother Goose . . . all new . . . all different . . . 128 pages with pictures on every page . . . many in 4 colors . . . by Fridolf Johnson . . . clever verses by Ben Aronin. Youngsters love it . . . parents enjoy reading it to them. At leading stores $2.

Teen Agers Still Clamor for Classics

By D. Genevieve Dixon

Treasurer of the University High school, University of Chicago.

Are you looking for a Christmas gift for a boy or girl? If so, don't forget that children love books—good books. They take great pride in their personal libraries and love to tell of the books they own.

In buying a book for a child this Christmas make it one that will be an asset to his permanent library. Classics are as appreciated by young folks today as they ever were. Teen-age children clamor more for "The Three Musketeers" and "Jane Eyre" than they do for the currently best sellers.

"Count of Monte Cristo," "Wuthering Heights," "The Sea Hawk," "Pride and Prejudice," "Vanity Fair," and "Red Badge of Courage" are perennial favorites.

Children need to own "Alice in Wonderland," "Child's Garden of Verses," "Heidie," "Tom Sawyer," and "Huck Finn," "Captains Courageous," "The Jungle Book," "Robinson Crusoe," "Hans Brinker," "Little Women." All of these books are published in attractive illustrated editions that young folks are proud to own.

• • •

Not only the books themselves but bookplates and name stamps make gifts that the children love. Then they get a real thrill out of loaning their books to their friends. To have a library of their very own, with all the trimmings, makes them feel that they are really grownup.

Litten Writes a Thriller for Young Readers

"SINISTER ISLAND SQUADRON," by Frederic Nelson Litten. [Dodd, Mead, $2.]

Combining his experience in aviation with his knowledge of writing techniques, the author who teaches would-be authors at Northwestern university again has produced an adventure tale that will keep many a boys' light burning past bed time. Nor is its appeal limited to youth.

The book follows the career of Gilbert Warriner, 21 year old engineer turned pilot, whose knowledge of Japan and the Pacific Islands makes him a valuable addition to the United States navy air force. The treachery of the Japanese in abducting Gilbert's best friend and partner gives him a double incentive to outwit the Japanese and their fleet at Sinister Island. How he completed his mission and rescues his friend is a mixture of dynamite, volcanic mountains, and nerve.

Characterizations are apt, particularly that of Pearly Brett, the crewman whose weakness for alcohol produces climatic complications.

Mr. Litten, incidentally, gives American unity a boost and offers education in ethics for Japanese children as the hope for a new Japan in the post-war world.

Boy Finds Excitement in the Royal Mounted

"NORTHERN TRAIL ADVENTURE," by West Lathrop. [Random House, $2.]

A fast moving story of Corp. Zack Denny of the Canadian royal mounted police and an American boy with an Indian name, Kopa. They travel together thru the wilds of Canada meeting a three day blizzard, a ferocious grizzly and other exciting adventures before the mountie gets his man and Kopa saves his uncle's ranch. An exciting story for the older boy and girl.

Children Find Land of Magic in Pages of Christmas Books

By Agatha L. Shea.

Director of young people's work at Chicago public library.

A BOOK at any time is a magic gift, but Christmas books, it seems to me, have a magic all their own. Christmas memories are long, long memories, and the books which the children find on the tree in the early dawn of Christmas morning should not only add to the joyousness and wonder of the day, but furnish memories for the years to come.

To the littlest ones the small colorful toy book will bring much happiness and real delight. Many happy hours will be spent in stroking the woolly sides of "The Shaggy Pony," by Helen Hoke [Messner, $1.25]; hunting Johnny in "Where Is Johnny?" by Harriet Colby [Howell Soskin, $1], or with the animals on the "Ha Ha Farm," by Thirma and Carlyle Leech [Capitol Publishing Co., $1].

One of the most popular, perhaps, will be the animated edition of Clement Moore's "The Night Before Christmas" [Crown, $1], with its jolly old Santa stepping right out of the book and the prancing reindeer fleeing thru the sky by means of a tiny movable gadget. "Fix the Toys," by Dorothy N. King [William Morrow, $1.50], will keep small fingers busy too.

For the beginning reader who wants a story with plenty of pictures, Munro Leaf's "Gordon the Goat" [Lippincott, $1] will answer the need. Gordon is a Texas goat who always follows the other goats and never thinks of himself. One day he walks right into a Texas twister, and up in the air he goes. When he comes down, he has ceased to be a follower, and is a thinker instead. Children will get the inference while enjoying a good laugh at Gordon's expense.

"Red Light, Green Light," by Golden MacDonald [Doubleday, $2], is an unusual picture book showing how the animals as well as the little boys are guided all day by the lights, red and green. Another large picture book story is "Wings for Per," by Ingri and Edgar D'Aulaire [Doubleday, $2.50], which tells of the little boy who grew up to be an aviator.

Altho not a picture book, in this sense, Audrey Chalmers' "I had a Penny" [Viking, $1] will find favor with this age group, too. It tells, in rhyme, of the little girl's trip down the street to spend her penny, reiterating the couplet "and I crossed the street with the traffic light" as she recounts her adventure. Delightful pictures and lilting jingle make this a lovely little stocking book. The Masha illustrated "A Child's Book of Bible Stories" [Random House, $1.50] is a large decorative picture book of Old Testament stories retold by Jane Werner. The full page pictures are done in pastel tints and will probably appeal to the older children in the group rather than the younger.

For the 9 to 10 year olds "The Hundred Dresses," by Eleanor Estes [Harcourt, $2.50], is a fine Christmas choice. It is the story of Wanda, a little Polish girl in an American school, who because of her strange name and shabby clothes became the butt of ridicule for some of her thoughtless schoolmates. When it becomes unbearable Wanda moves away leaving to her tormentors, whom she had secretly chosen as her friends, the pictures of "The Hundred Dresses" which had won her the art award. An appealing story with a Christmas message for every American school child. The beautiful "Rabbit Hill," by Robert Lawson [Viking, $2], noted in our "Junior Bookshelf" some weeks ago, is also in this class. Both are books which have a place in those long memories of childhood which remain always.

History, biography, and adventure find a place on the shelf of the older boy and girl. One of the most thrilling biographies of the year is "Raymond L. Ditmars," by L. N. Wood [Messner, $2.50]. This is a magnificent account of a great scientist whose courage and devotion to his own ideals made his life one of accomplishment and glory. For the boy who likes history "Fuss 'N' Feathers," by Laura Long [Longmans, Green, $2.25], the story of Winfield Scott, will be a welcome gift," as will Eric Kelly's "From Star to Star" [Lippincott, $2], a story of a medieval Poland. "The House," by Marjorie Hill Allee [Houghton Mifflin, $2], a story of cooperative living, and "The Exile's Daughter," by Cornelia Spencer, the story of Pearl Buck [Coward, McCann, $2.50], will please the girls.

Book on Weather for Younger Children

"BETWEEN EARTH AND SKY," by Marion Gill MacNeil. [Oxford, $1.50.]

An excellent book on weather and climate for the younger children. Answers questions which are always popping up, such as: What makes snow? What is lightning? and furnishes understandable material on tornadoes, hurricanes, typhoons, and other storms. Contains also a chapter on the weather bureau and its work. Altho we have had one or two other unusually good books of this type, this year, this is the only one keyed to the third and fourth grade level. Illustrated by Nils Hogner.

Eager Public Grabs New British Books

By James Sloan.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

London.

Its plants blitzed by high explosive and fire bombs, London's book publishing industry is marching back nearer to normalcy this Christmas season, with a big parade of new titles.

Elizabeth Goudge.

The publishers admit they have lost 55 per cent of their personnel to war labor demands, as well as taken huge cuts in their supplies of paper. People are rushing to buy "utility books," which are ultra-streamlined, printed on low grade paper, but attractive for all that. Every book store is crowded daily with buyers, clamoring to buy tomes of almost every description. Tho emphasis still is on war, technical and political books, fiction and thrillers run these subjects a photo finish race.

Books newly imported from America, altho printed there long ago, are drawing large numbers of buyers. Among these, Elizabeth Goudge's "Green Dolphin Street" stands high, while the arrival of Lillian Smith's "Strange Fruit" is awaited eagerly.

The average Briton's keen interest in political affairs is reflected in the big call for William Beveridge's latest economic plan, which offers "full employment in a free society," while practically every literary member of parliament has something on the market to catch the Yule shopper's eye. The Briton's interest in economics is reflected further in the recent appearance of "Planned Economy or Free Enterprise," by Lee Lipson, which proposes something of each.

Among recent works which have caused more than a ripple among book fanciers is Francis Brett Young's epic poem of England, "The Island."

Among other new books and American reprints which are finding high favor are Louis Bromfield's "Mrs. Parkington," G. B. Lancaster's "Grand Parade," C. S. Lewis' "Screwtape Letters," "Trumpet Voluntary," by G. B. Stern, Eleanor Smith's "Magic Lantern," "There's No Story Here," by Inez Holden, and "Then a Soldier," highly commended as Geoffrey Cottrell's brilliant first novel.

Noel Coward's "Middle East Diary" probably stands number one among the "I saw it" type books, possibly due to the row Brooklyn kicked up over it—at any rate, you can't get a copy here now.

Other first-person and historical war books high on the popularity list include Stanton Hope's "Ocean Odyssey," a record of the fighting merchant navy; Oxford university's "Miniature History of the War," Philip Guedalla's "Middle East, 1940-'42, Per Ardul," Hilary St. George Saunders' "Epic of Britain's Air Power," Lindley Fraser's "Germany Between Two Wars," the Oxford war atlas, "Martial India," by Francis Yeats-Brown; "Fortress of Maquis," and Stagg Green's story of the FFI's year of waiting. Then there are "The Story of 1943," by British Broadcasting company's commentator, Richard Dimbley; "Thru Hell and High Water," a navy story by John Drummond; the cartoon collection, "Private Breger in Britain"; "Roll On, My Twelve," David Bolster's short story version of naval life, and "The Lone Commandos," in which James Sandys tells of patriotic smuggling preceding D-day.

Novels arousing the acclaim of publishers include Eric Linklater's fantasy, "Wind on the Moon"; "Reflections in a Mirror," by Charles Morgan; Gavin Bones' "Beowulf," which brings a legendary hero up to join the modern ones; "The Monster," by Anna Sebastian; Paul Tabori's "Two Forests," which begins an historical trilogy; "You've Gone Astray," by Honore Croome; and "The Headmistress," by Angela Thirkell.

★ BOOKS FOR CHRISTMAS ★

Books Reach a Multitude of New Readers in Year

By Fanny Butcher.

IN the literary histories of the future, 1944 will be characterized as the year when more new readers of books were created and more books were read than in any previous 12 months in our national life. No one can today count how many hundreds of thousands of habitual readers will result from the millions of pocket-sized books which are part of all overseas equipment for our fighting forces.

Of the thousands of books published in this momentous year I have read only a few. Of them I found the following the most memorable. "Forever Amber" by Kathleen Winsor, a lusty panorama of Restoration days and nights of excitement, will appear in the year's literary history as its most fabulous best seller, tho not by any count its best novel.

Stories of Wars.

Other first novels will find themselves in literary history for a more valid reason, among them "The History of Rome Hanks" by Joseph Stanley Pennell, "Earth and High Heaven" by Gwethalyn Graham, and "Valley of the Sky" by Hobert Douglas Skidmore.

"The History of Rome Hanks" and "Valley of the Sky" are both unforgettable stories of war. "Rome Hanks" is the Civil war book to end all Civil war books. "Valley of the Sky" is the epic story of 10 men today in a Liberator. War of another kind—social war—is the theme of "Earth and High Heaven" by Gwethalyn Graham, a young Canadian. It is a courageous novel about the love of a Jewish boy and a Gentile girl with Montreal vividly recorded as background.

Power in "Freedom Road."

A powerful tale of racial injustice is Howard Fast's "Freedom Road," which records a forgotten phase of post-Civil war history in South Carolina. Another phase of American history lives in Irving Stone's fictional biography of Jessie Benton Fremont, "Immortal Wife." "Young 'Un" by Herbert Best is a moving tale of early pioneer New York state, of three young orphans battling nature with the courage that has made America. "Bedford Village" by Hervey Allen also has pioneer upper New York [1764] as background for the second of the destined six panels of an early American epic.

Two Bromfield Books.

Louis Bromfield published two books this year, "What Became of Anna Bolton," the popular story of a spoiled and silly woman who found herself in the war, and nine of his best short stories in "The World We

"The Women on the Porch."

Sumner Welles

Live In." A few of the stories in William Saroyan's "Dear Baby" rank with his best, but most of them are fragile "memoirs."

Upton Sinclair gave us the fifth in his series of novels of contemporary life in "Presidential Agent."

An experienced writer but an as yet not sufficiently appreciated one is Caroline Gordon, author of "The Women on the Porch," a tale told in language both lovely and distinguished. "The Rebellion of Leo McGuire" by Clyde Brion Davis is a satirical, amusing tale of a professional burglar.

Notable Work by Maugham.

Of the English novels which I read, some were outstanding. "The Razor's Edge" by W. Somerset Maugham is filled with his rich urbanity, acid irony and matchless skill in spitting character on a phrase. Aldous Huxley, matchless English stylist, this year gave us a strange olio of his brilliant writing in "Time Must Have a Stop." "The Green Years" by A. J. Cronin is a tender and moving tale of an orphan boy. "Cluny Brown" by Margery Sharp made countless thousands mourn the fact that it ended so soon. Nevil Shute's "Pastoral," about a love affair at a bomber command station, has unforgettable descriptions of the bomber missions.

The amusing but terror-filled winner of the second Latin American novel contest was "Canapé Vert" by Pierre Marcelin and Phillipe Thoby-Marcelin, the first Haitian novel written by native Haitians.

Thomas Mann ended his noble four volume fictionized life of the biblical Joseph with "Joseph the Provider."

Outstanding Non-Fiction.

There have been many important books of nonfiction this year which I have not read, but among those which I did read, the following were outstanding. "America" by Stephen Vincent Benét, is a brief history of America in which freedom rings from every page. "The Miracle of America" tells our national story from the point of view of a brilliant Frenchman, André Maurois.

In "The World of Washington Irving," Van Wyck Brooks records some of America's growing pains in the third volume of his monumental history of American literature.

The part Americans can take in the world's work of making peace is the kernel of Sumner Welles' stimulating "The Time for Decision."

Among countless stirring books about Americans in the war are Ernie Pyle's "Brave Men," "Invasion Diary" by Richard Tregaskis and "People on Our Side" by Edgar Snow, to name only three. An anthology of the best of the work of over 125 eye witnesses of the conflict was made by Curt Riess in "They Were There." Sigrid Schultz Published in "Germany Will Try It Again" a highly important expose of how the German high command went underground to prepare for the next war. During the year that bitter sermon has been preached to American readers again and again.

Story of Two Holmses.

"Yankee from Olympus," by Catherine Drinker Bowen, is the most interesting biography which I read this year. It is the life of two generations of Holmes men, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and his father, the famous "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table." Will Durant's "Caesar and Christ" continues his monumental popular history of mankind in a monumental volume on Rome's years of glory and the rise of Christianity.

And finally, for a dash of nonsense or nostalgia, there are Bennett Cerf's anecdoting joke book "Try and Stop Me," Renée de Fontarce McCormick's piquant memories of her childhood in France, "Little Coquette," and "How Dear to My Heart," Emily Kimbrough's recollections of her little girlhood in Muncie, Ind.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

AS has been its annual custom for many years, THE TRIBUNE today presents 40 pages of topnotch reading and worthwhile Christmas gift suggestions—material written by a large number of America's leading authors and critics and commentators. . . . In these pages the reader will find not only his weekly favorites, but also some of the biggest names in the literary world. . . . And he will discover scores of recommendations regarding one of the easiest and most delightful ways of solving the Christmas shopping problem: the purchase of books.

This year the book publishers have been cramped by all manner of official regulations, paper shortages, and employment problems. . . . But they have managed to survive, and in most cases to thrive. . . . This has been their biggest year. . . . Hundreds of new titles have been brought out; hundreds of old titles have been resurrected and placed once more on the bookshelves. . . . All the Chicago bookshops are now well stocked, and are trying to stay that way as the big day approaches. . . . But what their shelves will look like the day before Christmas is anybody's guess.

With the current year [and perhaps the war in Europe] getting ready to fold up, what are the prospects of the book business for next year and for the post-war period? . . . There have been many answers, and attempted answers, to that question. . . . The best one I have seen is contained in "Salute to the Litterateurs," by C. Hartley Grattan, in the November issue of Harper's magazine. . . . Here are two extracts:

"I think it quite certain that the war will not bring about the renovation of the world. The upsurge of optimism, so necessary to the required war time élan, will be short lived.

"I think we will find [inclosed within a flood of biographies, histories, now-it-can-be-told war books of all kinds and descriptions, detective stories, horror yarns, novels about the present, past, and future which are simply good stories well told, poetry that celebrates the birds, bees, and flowers, and the usual miscellany of informational volumes of greater or lesser weight taking you inside this and that, as well as diaries of the last exciting days of any number of places] books of the following kinds: [1] numerous books of social criticism of a mildly leftist tinge which will entirely lack the optimistic simple mindedness of prewar Marxist inspired works; [2] a considerable number of religious books, fictional and nonfictional, of greater or lesser persuasiveness; [3] a goodly number—proportionate to the badness of the peace as the literary folk see it—of disillusioned and nihilistic books portraying life as a futile horror; and [4] a fairly numerous lot of hortatory volumes, fictional and otherwise, advising us to be wholesome, helpful, and, above all, optimistic, lest the goblins certainly get us. Happy reading!"

Philosophy Deep Rooted in History

By Will Durant.
[Author of "Caesar and Christ."]

Our age is rich in information and poor in understanding. Our facilities for gathering and spreading knowledge about today's events are overwhelming, so that most minds now choke on a surfeit of news, and have no time to seek some understanding of the present thru a study of the past. We have more foreground than background. We know the flowers of evil and good, but seldom see the roots.

History is our roots and our illumination; it is the soil and air in which we grew, and the only light we have by which to guide our steps into the future. "May my son study history," said Napoleon at St. Helena, "for it is the only true philosophy." Thru history we learn not what man might conceivably be, but what he is. Without it we flounder about in a sea of wishful thinking, while the realistic world rolls over our bones.

We tired of reading history because it was for so long a dreary and bloody register of battles and kings, or because it had become, in our time, a mania for monographs, in which some modest scholar devoted a volume, or a lifetime, to the price of eggs in Sargon's Babylon. The accumulation of knowledge has divided history, like science, into a thousand specialties, and prudent scholars have shrunk from attempting any view of the whole. Analysis has prospered, synthesis has decayed.

As for myself, having long fed greedily on philosophy, I carried into the writing of history that same passion for unity and perspective which prods the philosopher in his hopeless and magnificent quest. I resented the separation of the past into isolated shreds, the writing of history in separate vertical sections—economic history, politics, religious history, the history of philosophy, of science, of literature, of manners, or music, or art; this shredded history did injustice to the organic unity and interrelations of civilized life.

I have felt that in addition to these lineal studies there should be horizontal or collateral syntheses—attempts to portray the total complex of a nation's organization, institutions, and culture in a given period, or, by reckless enterprise, thru the whole gamut of its career from birth to death. This synthetic method has defects as serious as the analytic: no one mind can speak with first hand knowledge and authority on every aspect of a complex civilization spanning a thousand years; errors of detail are inevitable, and more than once the philosophic historian will blush to be caught in red-handed error by some rejoicing specialist.

Let us coöperate. Let the analyst devote himself to accuracy in a limited field; let the synthetist seek to merge these partial vistas into a total view. Together we may again make history as fascinating as when Herodotus charmed Pericles and the multitude at Olympia with his racy narratives, or as when all educated England waited on every new volume of Gibbon, and Voltaire poured the warmth of his divine fire into the annals of Europe from Charlemagne to Francois Marie Arouet.

Inspiring New Story of Juba's Family

"JUBA'S NEW MOON," by Isabel McLennan McMeekin. Illustrations by Nicholas Panesis. [Messner, $2.]

"Peer at de new moon ober yo' lef' shoulder . . . and make a wish." Juba was speaking to the little group of children she had so faithfully guided across the wilderness as they reached their new home in Kentucky. Each made a wish, a pony, a fiddle, a boat. In this story, as in its predecessor, "Journey Cake," Juba, the courageous and loyal Negro woman remains the unforgettable character as the guardian and guiding light of the little family of motherless children in a pioneer land. Good reading for all ages.

Books For Children

A Bookcase Full of Fine Biographies

By Genevieve Foster.
Author of "Abraham Lincoln's World."

"What do you think of it now?" said a young friend of mine, the other day, as he led me to his bookcase and pointed proudly to what he called his "George Washington World shelf." There, standing beside the big blue book, I was delighted to see a row of 15 or 20 smaller ones.

Illustration from "Abraham Lincoln's World."

Following a hint that I had given him three years before, he had been making a collection of biographies of the characters he had liked best in my book, and of whom he wanted to know more.

And not only biographies did he have, but also books by authors of the period, books about music, a portfolio of paintings, and a fine book about steam engines. The last was a present from his grandfather, who had also ordered a book called "Rubber's Goodyear" for the new collection.

"For now," said the boy, "I am starting a shelf for the people in "Abraham Lincoln's World."

As a nucleus, I noted a small red copy of Dickens' Christmas Carol, a Rip Van Winkle, Uncle Tom's Cabin, and that enchanting volume of Hans Andersen's stories as told by Paul Leyssac.

All the family had entered into the idea with enthusiasm. A young uncle in the navy was sending for Christmas, "David Glasgow Farragut, Our First Admiral" by William Oliver Stevens [Dodd Mead].

That is but one of the many fine recent biographies that might well go on those shelves. The ones I am listing here are about people who, as my young friend says, "walk about" in Abraham Lincoln's World.

"SHOOTING STAR," the story of Tecumseh, by William E. Wilson. [Farrar & Rinehart, 1942.]

"GARIBALDI," by Nina Brown Baker. [Vanguard Press, 1944.]

"LIFE AND TIMES OF SIMON BOLIVAR," by Hendrik Willem Van Loon. [Dodd Mead & Co., 1943.]

"HE HEARD AMERICA SING," the story of Stephen Foster," by Claire Lee Purdy. [Julian Messner, 1940.]

"RAILWAY ENGINEER," the story of George Stephenson, by Clara Ingram Judson. [Chas. Scribner's Sons, 1941.]

"KIT CARSON," trail blazer and scout, by Shannon Garst. [Julian Messner, 1942.]

"ENCHANTING JENNY LIND," by Laura Benet. [Dodd Mead & Co., 1941.]

"CARLOTA, AMERICAN EMPRESS," by Nancy Barnes. [Messner, 1943.]

"THE STORY OF CLARA BARTON OF THE RED CROSS," by Jeanette Covert Eaton. [Messner,1941.]

"THE RAILROAD TO FREEDOM," by Hildegard Hoyt Swift. [Harcourt Brace & Co., 1932.]

Kung as a Guide for Chinatown

"THREE TIMES I BOW," by Carl Glick. [Whittlesley, $2.50.]

"Three Times I Bow" is a story of Chinatown, New York City, in war time. It is a continuation of "Shake Hands with the Dragon" [McGraw], in which we first became acquainted with Kung, the author's unofficial guide and interpreter of Chinatown. Kung is now in the army, which he thinks will be good for him. His letters are humorous and philosophically bring out the difference between the oriental and occidental way of approaching situations. We get further insight into the lives of the people at home and learn to understand their journalism, theater, music, sense of justice, and reaction to the war.

Teen-age children enjoy this book.

Three Attractive Books That Serve to Guide Children

"TIMOTHY TICK-TOCK," by Naoma Zimmerman. [Ziff-Davis, $1.25.]

"THE SLEEPY FOREST," by Naoma Zimmerman. [Ziff-Davis, $1.25.]

"THE PARTY DRESS," by Naoma Zimmerman. [Ziff-Davis, $1.25.]

These are three very attractive little books which serve the double purpose of entertainment and guidance for small children. Timothy Tick-Tock is the little clock which Billy hid under the pillow so it couldn't tell the time for him to go to bed and get up in the morning. And then he missed Judy's party, because no one told him it was time to go. So Billy decided Timothy was a friend, and he learned how to tell time himself with Timothy's help.

Danny Duckling is the hero of Sleepy forest. Altho the forest winds are saying, "Sh-hh," Danny decides he is going to stay awake and he wanders around looking for some one to talk to him. But the turtle, the giraffe, and all the others are fast asleep, and finally Danny curls up in a nice warm place and goes to sleep too.

The Fun Fairy in the party dress comes all dressed up to Mary's party, but from her magic bag she takes two pairs of play overalls so that Mary and she won't spoil their lovely dresses while they play.

All three little stories are attractively illustrated, and make excellent bedtime reading. The author is a specialist in child guidance work.

Heroes of Baseball Sketched by Grayson

"THEY PLANNED THE GAME," by Harry Grayson. [Barnes, $2.]

Here is a story of the great men of baseball. It is a collection of thumbnail sketches which make these great men into living personalities. A lot has been written on baseball and its players but seldom do we get a picture of our heroes as human beings. Baseball is always a popular subject and the boys love to read Grayson's portraits of the men who brought fame to the game and to themselves.

D. Genevieve Dixon.

Here's Ruml Again.

Beardsley Ruml, whose pay as you go income tax plan was somewhat mangled after the lawmakers got thru with it, has written some original ideas concerning the relations of government and business into a book, "Tomorrow's Business," which Farrar & Rinehart will publish Jan. 11.

DitmarsBiography a Story of Thrills for Older Children

"RAYMOND L. DITMARS," by L. N. Wood. [Messner, $2.50.]

Winner of the 1944 Julie Ellsworth Ford Foundation award, this is one of the most readable, and thrilling biographies of the year. The story of the naturalist's boyhood, and early attraction to the reptile world has much of humor in it, and the reader, unless a snake lover himslef, is apt to sympathize somewhat with the distracted family and the neighbors. The boy's persistence in his chosen work, and the thrilling adventures which later resulted in contributions to medical science make this book an outstanding choice for any young naturalist of high school age or above.

Self-Help Text on Mechanical Drawing

"MECHANICAL DRAWING SELF-TAUGHT," by Jerome S. Meyer. [Franklin Watts, $1.]

Mastery of Mr. Meyer's 95 pages would approximate two years' mechanical drawing work in an average high school. He explains lucidly the use of the instruments, but the fellow who remembers his high school geometry will find the going easier. Laurence T. Heron.

Books—Our Friends Even in War Time

By Kenneth Horan.
Author of "A Bashful Woman."

Once upon a time in a little midwestern town we used to sit around the Christmas tree and open packages of books, to be read in a leisurely world which was at peace.

There might be among them an antimacassar for the favorite rocking chair, or new figurines for the corner whatnot, or "fascinators" for the ladies of the family to wear over their hair of an evening, but the main gift for every one was books.

And a book was a stupendous gift, for the little stationer on Main st. carried only a few stray volumes, and the books we gave each other had been chosen with care, months before, from the catalogs of Harpers, Scribners, Appleton's, Putnams—the last our favorite publisher because we once went to Europe on the same boat with old Mr. Putnam and had struck up a warm friendship.

Those Christmas presents carried us thru the peaceful year right up to the next peaceful year and helped wall us round with security and happiness. A "book Christmas" was considered strange by our neighbors, who pitied us for not receiving jimcracks, and considered our parents severe and forbidding. They didn't know that a book Christmas opened up worlds to brighten the dark days to come, they didn't know that staunch and unchanging friends were made thruout those years of peace, friends who stood by thru the years of war.

And so because a book Christmas has been a joy and a gladness to me I recommend for this Christmas the books by our own people, American books, reflecting the present and the past, and prophesying the future. Like war bonds, they stand by and bear interest in love of country and of each other.

"Wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger" . . . An original drawing for Books for Christmas by Elizabeth Orton Jones of Highland Park, Ill.

The Glamor Boys at War.

Described as "an ungallant, unheroic novel about the glamor boys of this war: the foreign correspondents, arrayed in splendid uniforms and jumping 'from molar to molar into the jaws of death,'" is a book by A. C. Sedgwick which Houghton Mifflin will publish early next year.

Tales Filled With Spirit of Yule Festival

By Frances Dunlap Heron.
Editor, Family Circle department of The Christian Advocate.

Christmas serves a double function for children's literature. Not only does it provide the most popular occasion of the year for giving books to Mary Jane and Junior but it also lends itself to the telling of stories and poems that go far toward interpreting the spirit of the festival.

Nothing has been published this year to replace two strikingly beautiful books that appeared last Christmas: "A Child's Story of the Nativity," by Louise Raymond, illustrated by Masha [Random House, $1.50], and "Sing for Christmas," by Opal Wheeler [Dutton, $2.50], which contains pictures, stories, words, and music of 29 Christmas carols.

Among this year's juveniles the most appropriate Christmas selection is Mary Alice Jones' "Tell Me About Jesus" [Rand McNally, $2], which relates in simple language not only the significance of the first Christmas but of Jesus' entire life and teachings.

Among other new books just right for youthful readers to curl up with on Christmas afternoon are:

"The Animals' Christmas," by Anne Thaxter Eaton. [Viking, $2.] Christmas folklore and tradition in poems, carols, and stories.

"Good for Scuffles!" by Janet Beattie. [Howell, Soskin, $1.50.] A lovable cocker spaniel hunts a Christmas tree for his little master.

"The First Christmas Crib," by Katherine Milhous. [Scribner's, $1.25.] Some Italian children of A. D. 1223 view the first crèche, made for their village church by St. Francis of Assisi.

"The Christmas Anna Angel," by Ruth Sawyer, illustrated by Kate Seredy. [Viking, $2.] Fanciful story of a little girl's Christmas on a Hungarian farm.

"The Story of the Christmas Tree," by Hertha Pauli. [Houghton, Mifflin, $2.] From legend of the middle ages to the year 1851, when young Pastor Schwan of Cleveland, O., lighted the first tree at an American Christmas service.

Tips on How to Be Smarter, Smoother

"SMARTER AND SMOOTHER," by Maureen Daly. [Dodd, Mead, $2.]

This is a handbook of helpful hints for the Janes and Joes in high school telling them how to get and stay in the groove. With sympathy and tolerance it points out the differences in "smoothness." It also is definite about some of the things it is smart not to do. Teen-age boys and girls alike accept what Miss Daly says because they feel that she understands them. They all want to read "Smarter and Smoother" since they are anxious to make the most out of their world.

GENEVIEVE DIXON.

A Mystery Story of the Catskills

"GREAT GOLD PIECE MYSTERY," by Elizabeth Honness. [Oxford University Press, $2.] Illustrated by Eloise Wilkin.

Sally and Rob both wanted something exciting to happen during their summer vacation in the Catskills near the reservoir which their father was building. It did happen, much to their surprise, and they were able to solve the mystery of the stolen spruce trees, and also the hidden gold pieces. Well written story for mystery lovers in the middle grades. AGATHA L. SHEA.

Tenggren Illustrates Another Xmas Book

"SING FOR AMERICA," by Opal Wheeler. Pictures by Gustaf Tenggren. [E. P. Dutton, $3.]

A collection of 24 American songs with simple music arrangements. Includes spirituals, ballads, and patriotic songs with brief comments on background and origin of songs. A large, attractive book with Gustaf Tenggren's pictures in color and black and white. A companion book to "Sing for Christmas" and a fine selection for any family which enjoys gathering around the piano.

Two Girls Invade Westbrook Ranch

"TROUBLE FOR JERRY," by Doris Gates. [Viking, $2.]

Eleven year old Jerry is much disgusted when told that two girls are coming to live at the Westbrook ranch. He makes up his mind to put them in their places, but before the season is over, even he has to admit that this is not entirely a man's world, for he has to admit that Sara has made the grade.

AGATHA L. SHEA.

Dreams of A Boy Who Learns to Fly

"WINGS FOR PER," by Ngri and Edgar Parin d'Aulaire. [Doubleday, $2.50.]

Per was a lad of Norway who dreamed of flying like the great eagles which sailed majestically over the high crags surrounding his home. His forefathers had built for safety, but Per had no fear of attacks. Then suddenly the invader took his land, and Per escaped to realize his dream of flying over the crags, to save his country. A beautifully illustrated picture book.

AGATHA L. SHEA.

Story of Cherokees Is Handled Woodenly

"JOE, THE CHEROKEE," by S. M. Barrett. [Burton, $1.]

If this book were not labeled juvenile, the reader would be puzzled for whom and for what reason it was printed, the paper shortage being what it is. It is unfortunate that a theme so rich in human achievement and emotion as the 19th century life and migration of the Cherokee Indians has here received wooden treatment.

FRANCES DUNLAP HERON.

Tales of Heroism Among Sea Fighters

"BRAVE SHIPS OF WORLD WAR II," by Joseph Leeming. [Nelson, $3.]

Thrilling tales of courage and action of men on British, Australian, and American ships. Includes Jervis Bay, Enterprise, Lexington, Yorktown, and others, and describes battles of single ships as well as fleet encounters. Illustrated by Grattan Conden. Inspiring reading for older boys. Golden Era for American Novel Seen by Struthers Burt

By Struthers Burt.

Author of "Along These Streets."

IT is a rash man who, in the year 1944, will make predictions of any kind, and yet Christmas is a time of hope, and a time of hope is one of optimistic prophecy. About a great many things I am not optimistic. Like the rest of the world I am wistful and bewildered.

But about American writing in general, and the American novel in particular, I am cherishing a vision which seems to me to be based upon sound reasoning. I cannot give all my premises. To do so would be too complicated and would take too much space. I can just barely touch upon two or three of the major suppositions, yet were I a betting man I would be willing to wager that some time within the next decade American writing, and above all, the American novel will enter upon that golden period so long predicted and never as yet attained.

This has nothing to do with technique. Nothing to do with the novel as an art. It has all to do with the author as a creature conditioned, however unconsciously, by the decades in which he lives. And the American decades into which we are going, however confused or even tragic they may be, will at least be ones of great performance or else of equally great failure. In either case, the minds and spirits of American writers will be engaged and moved with a searching profundity that has only come once or twice, if then, in our history.

Great writing stems from great feeling, whether this feeling be one of elation and hope, or rebellion and scorn, and the principal charge that can be made against the American novel to date is that it has been mostly brilliant promise and brilliant technique. That profound and necessary pity for man, both as a member of the human race and as an individual, has been lacking.

But who has been able to live thru the past five years without that profound pity, and who will be able to live without it in the next ten?

That is one reason why I think great American novels will begin to emerge some time within the next 10 years. And another reason is that for the first time in our history we are at long last fairly self-conscious nationally. We have tasted both bitterness and triumph; we realize our virtues as well as our faults; the might of our strength, the danger of our weaknesses. We have attained some coherence spiritually if not in other ways.

And the third reason why I look forward to fulfilment in American writing is a very simple, but a very deep one. It has to do with war, and war's vast dislocation, and man's sense of bewilderment and smallness in the face of gigantic and kaleidoscopic events. But man cannot live with that vast inhumanity for any length of time. Man knows, instinctively or consciously, that the plot of every novel, if it be great, is the individual as opposed to Fate; is each man's fight against the Gods.

This is the classic plot. With all its variations, the universal plot. The Greeks knew it, and what they knew has never been altered, nor can it be. So, all thru history, events too great for man have sent him back into himself to search for greatness he can comprehend. A greatness which after all, is the only greatness that is worth while.

I present my prediction to any one as a Christmas gift. I hope I live to see it come true. We have waited a long time for really great American writing.

Struthers Burt.

A Technique for Producing Ideas

Where do the money-making ideas come from—those ideas that make successful novels, radio programs, moving pictures, advertising campaigns, and businesses? James Webb Young, one of the highest paid idea men in the advertising business, set out to answer this question for his students at the University of Chicago. The result is a little book that you can read in an hour but will remember the rest of your life. In the simplest and clearest of language Mr. Young has succeeded in describing the way the mind works in all creative people. He gives you the FORMULA which they consciously or unconsciously follow in producing ideas. He shows you how to train your mind so that idea production is, as he says, "as definite as the process by which motor cars are produced." Enthusiastically endorsed by editors, college professors, poets, advertising men, salesmen, and business executives who have read it. Send for your copy of A TECHNIQUE FOR PRODUCING IDEAS now. Only $1 postpaid. Money back if you don't say it is worth $10 to you. Advertising Publications, Inc., 104 E. Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

Thank Goths and Goats for Modern Books

By Arthur Frederic Otis.

To whom are we indebted for the entertainment netted in the mystic, magic miracle of books? For that word we are beholden to the Goths in ages olden who inscribed their runes on beeches over brooks.

Every library you've sat in traces back to "liber," Latin which originally meant a kind of bark, since they used barklike papyrus for the words which so inspire us [as to why it looked like bark, we're in the dark].

From the scribes of old Chaldea came the then brand new idea, dating back about six thousand years B. C., that to write on clay and bake it rather permanent would make it, thus preserving all their thoughts for you and me.

For the goats of ancient Greece our regard should never cease, as they gave their precious hides for making parchment, and on parchment scrolls, well hoarded, classic works have been recorded, which incalculably much to learning's march meant.

Nor, in truth, should we disdain doffing hats to Charlemagne who, we're told, in 782 A. D. started schools of Latin script over which monks lightly tripped, and to them a world of credit must accrue; for the letters that they made, every curve and line and shade, for our alphabet was said to set the style, so that when the time was ripe, all those shapes were formed in type, and will probably be used for quite a while.

So this Christmas of 1944, as you shop from store to store and discover that books are the gifts preferred, thank the Goths and Greeks and goats and the baked Chaldean notes for their contribution to the printed word. And for husband, wife, or mother, G. I. Joe or Jane or brother, you will find, however long and late you look, young or old or large or small, the most welcome gift of all is a thoughtfully selected Christmas book!

Adventure of Dog That Went to War

"TROOPER, U. S. ARMY DOG," by Helen Orr Watson.

Buzz wanted Trooper more than anything else in the world, but he couldn't afford to buy him. Before Robert, Buzz's older brother, went into the army he earned Trooper for Buzz by working at the dog kennels. Trooper was a very intelligent and remarkable dog. When Robert was reported missing in action at Guadalcanal, Buzz and his sister, Bonnie, decided they had to send Trooper to war since they were too young to go. Trooper liked the army, responded well to its rigorous training which is described realistically, and was sent into the combat zone. The story comes to a thrilling climax when Trooper is instrumental in finding Robert.

This is a particularly satisfying story for 10 to 12 year olds.

No Reticence in Tale Told by Miss Hahn

"CHINA TO ME," by Emily Hahn. [Doubleday, Doran, $3.]

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil.

Emily Hahn's new book is hard to classify. The publisher calls it a "partial autobiography" and the "candid story of her life in the land of the Soong sisters."

Candid and partial it certainly is, but not autobiography, unless I mistake the meaning of biography. It's an account of her years in China—in Shanghai, in Chungking, and finally in Hong Kong, both before and after the Japs took over.

It's extremely personal. The war in China is described more in terms of inconvenience and distress to "Mickey" Hahn than as a great Asiatic upheaval. No doubt that's as it should be. No one really knows the political significance of the forces now contending inside China, and the experts who pontificate on the subject may later do some second guessing.

You can learn a great deal from the book, however; if not about China, certainly about Miss Hahn. Sometimes wittily and always amusingly she reveals herself as a woman determined to get along somehow under any conditions. She tells, with equal gusto and frankness, of the times she tippled too much and her passion for gibbons as pets. She doesn't gloss over the fact that she claimed a spurious Chinese citizenship to escape internment in Hong Kong, and finally reclaimed her American citizenship in order to get back to this country.

Most illuminating is the way she traded on her friendship with certain Japanese officials after the fall of Hong Kong. It would be unjust to argue that her fraternizing with the enemy was ignobly disloyal. Certainly she had the justification, understandable to other mothers, that the business of working both sides of the street enabled her to get decent food and shelter for her infant daughter, Carola, when other British and American nationals were enduring the privations of the Stanley prison camp.

Miss Hahn's affair with the married British army officer, Maj. Charles Boxer, will titillate many readers. How the two defied convention to produce little Carola is told with an almost complete lack of reticence. One can't help wondering what Mrs. Boxer thinks of the whole business—for that matter, what does Maj. Boxer think about it now, when time hangs heavy for him in a Japanese prison camp?

A goodly portion of the book is given over to another production of Miss Hahn, the writing of "The Soong Sisters," her book about Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, Mme. Kung, and Mme. Sun Yat-sen. This part is rather uninteresting.

A PLEA FOR HONEST PRIDE

By Taylor Caldwell.
Author of "The Final Hour."

An old fashioned theme which seems to have fallen into sad repute among writers is the theme of independent self-reliance, mature pride, and responsibility in man's dealings with himself and with society. Offhand, I do not believe I can name a single writer of the past decade who has expounded this doctrine, which was the passionate torch lit by America's founding fathers.

It is customary, as the year draws to an end, to take stock, to plan for the future. This has been a particularly ominous and portentous year, and it might well be the year that is only the doorstep to America's house of ruin.

During the Christmas season it might be well if both American writers and the American people did a little strong, sharp thinking, and looked beyond the Christmas tree to the bleak and open door of the new year.

It might be well if we all recalled that America's strength was not built on paternalism, on the demands of irresponsible whiners, on the weak spirit of incompetents, on the hope that a bigger and better burocacy will give "all God's chillen" shoes, free bread without work, pensions for the asking, and circuses without the price of admission tickets.

It might be well if we remembered that the power and the glory of America were fashioned by sturdy hands that asked help of no one, by rugged spirits that found courage in themselves, by prideful hearts that demanded nothing more than hard work and food honestly earned.

It might be an excellent thing if American writers, particularly, remembered this, and gave us books that glorified the true American spirit, instead of deriding it in the current fashion.

Depression Era Is Treated Ironically

"UNCLE SAM TAKES A TONIC," by Grace Gamble Cameron. [Meador, $2.]

From 1932 to 1939 Uncle Sam was a sick man. How the Doctor [President Roosevelt] ministered to him with economic cures of alphabetical labels, yet the sickness continued, is told in unusual style in this book. The author touches on nearly every public event and political incident of the depression years in a vein of mingled whimsy and irony.

Author Bows to Builders of America

By Ernest Haycox.
Author of "Rim of the Desert."

Americans are easily persuaded that writers are a particularly gifted lot, possessing intensified qualities of imagination and emotional range which "average people" do not possess; yet any writer worth his salt—looking upon the pageant of America thru its three short centuries—well knows that only an "average people" made restless and hungry by great emotional capacity could have created this country.

The truth is that the American writer has never quite caught up with the rich, diverse, turbulent complexity of his subject matter. It is the common American, so ready to admit that he has no talent for expression, who has given this world the greatest of all imaginative achievements—which is the U. S. A. of 1944.

Incomplete, here shapeless, there carelessly blackened, bearing upon it the scars of tragic error and limited vision, the achievement nevertheless stands as the work of a people greatly gifted of spirit and urgently pressed on by that spirit.

By contrast, American literature of past and present—supposedly created by men of insight—is a most pale and incomplete reflection of the thing it looks upon and which it is supposed to interpret and illumine. Actually, the writing man is outstripped by the performing man. It is the general contractor, scooping out the foundations of a new dam on the Columbia river, who is the more accurate prophet and the more sensitive interpreter of his time.

Perhaps the pageant is too much for writers. In any event the best we can do is to divide our country into geographic and historic sections and to confine ourselves to one group of people, one period, one set of emotions. The result has been a series of monographs set in fiction; no doubt the monographs have been excellent, yet the heat and confusion, and roundness, and massive power of the pageant is not in them. The men of imagination who understand our land are of many professions, but few of them are writers. For all the millions of words printed each year, writers still belong to an unrealized, unfulfilled profession.

Courage Greatest Gift at Yuletide, Says Joe E. Brown

By Joe E. Brown.
Author of "Your Kids and Mine."

At Christmas, more than any other time of the year, the heart reaches out toward home and loved ones. The longing to see familiar faces and scenes is an overwhelming nostalgia.

This Christmas, with Democracy still fighting for its life, the desire to spend an old-fashioned Christmas will be an unfulfilled desire for most of us. The human sigh for the good old days must be answered by courage, if we are to retain the purposefulness which will more speedily bring the old order back.

In broken homes, in jungle mazes, on desert sands and stormy seas, Christmas will be celebrated this year in eloquent meditation and prayer that we, each one of us, be granted the grace to live more closely to real Christianity in a higher concept of service.

Mere merrymaking or gift giving is not the way to gather courage for an accelerated fight against aggression. The vacuum can be filled by recalling deeds of valor wrought in times past, according to the pattern shown on the mount. There is a wealth of good books on the subject to refresh the heart and mind, and I, for one, plan to spend at least a part of my Christmas companioning with some of these books.

A 'Sub' Sailor Carried Home by His Books

By Lloyd Wendt.

A recent letter from a Yank torpedoman, jotting his thoughts deep in enemy waters, mentions the pleasure he received from experience relived in the pages of a book.

Somewhere at sea there was an exchange of mail and the sailor has returned again to spend his Christmas season in the mine strewn darkness of some hostile strait, standing his duty, sleeping his eight hours, checking and rechecking his gear, and thinking a good deal, undoubtedly, of the day when the subs go home.

This morning his best link with home, aside from letters long since read and the interminable reminiscences of his shipmates, is probably the new book in his locker.

In this war books have flowed by the millions to the men and women in service, continuing precious ties stretched almost to breaking by the distances and dangers of world-wide combat. In the Guinea camp, the Indian campong, the French barracks, or the rolling bunk it is still possible, with a good book, to discover the full delight once known in the quiet of the parlor or the muted school library. The satisfaction and stimulation of such release have been demonstrated thoroly by the enormous demand for books from service people.

The makers of books in war time can take considerable pride in their accomplishments in this conflict. They have not only served the home front on a scale never equaled in peace time, but they have contributed millions of pleasant, useful hours to frontline folk whose joys, at best, are not numerous.

Variety of Interest Offered in Tales of Latin America

"STORIES FROM THE AMERICAS," Frank Henius, editor. [Scribner, $2.]

In this collection of Latin American stories, examples of the literature of some 20 countries are included. Personified animals, witches, wishing rings, and plain tales of peasant life are among the types presented. Each is representative of the country from which it comes, and all are marked by an imaginative quality. Full page illustrations by Leo Politi make the book exceedingly attractive. An exceptionally nice gift for the child who likes imaginative stores.

Merlin Steps Out of History to Look at the Magic of '44

By Kenneth C. Kaufman.

Professor of Modern Languages, University of Oklahoma

I knew it was Merlin the minute I opened the door, partly because of his pointed yellow cap and his flowing blue mantle, but mostly because I knew it was Merlin. I addressed him in what I hoped resembled Malorian English, but to my surprise he answered in perfectly good, 1944, American. His nose was blue and there were snowflakes on his cloak, but the library was snug, with a bright fire going. The hour was after midnight.

I suggested some refreshment and went off to raid the refrigerator, returning in a few minutes with a couple of huge slices of roast beef [I suspect the projected mainstay of tomorrow's lunch], a loaf of bread, and a bottle of burgundy. Merlin was looking at Kathleen Winsor's "Forever Amber" [Macmillan]. He had trouble with the plain slick letters, but with a little coaching he could make them out. "Amber," he said, "amber; a curious substance, possessed of much virtue we do not yet understand."

"But this isn't the magic substance you are thinking of; in this book it is a girl's name, a very bad girl, who hopped out of one man's bed into another until she finally landed in the king's."

"Hm," said Merlin, "in that case I should say she was a pretty good girl, altho scarcely worthy of a book. But Arthur had those little weaknesses, no matter that that bloodless fellow Tennyson made him out a pale figure of a saint with no lusty amiable failings. By the way, is he still alive?" Merlin was cutting up the meat with his dagger and transferring it to his mouth with his left hand, ignoring the knife and fork I had brought. He ate very little bread, but kept wiping his fingers on a slice, and then looking over his shoulder. I had an idea he was looking for one of Sir Kay's sleuth hounds to pitch it to. He eyed the wine glass with disfavor, evidently considering it too small to be practical.

"But this wasn't Arthur; it was Charles, one of the Scottish kings of England. And Tennyson has been dead 50 years and more."

"That last is just as well," said Merlin. "Scottish, eh? So the big hairy men finally overran this island?"

"Well, no," I said, "I think it came about in some other way. But you are not on 'this island.' You are in America."

"No matter," said Merlin, "seeing it is the same distance from any place to the next world. I come back about every 50 years to see whether mankind shows any signs of learning wisdom."

"And the intervals?"

"Oh, it is a pleasant enough place. We have all the ancient books of the art, not to mention such worthy practitioners as Hermes, Vergil, Faustus, and Paracelsus. And most of the great story tellers and minstrels, not to mention some interesting ladies. And there is plenty of room."

"Is Vivien with you?" I asked.

Merlin looked at me curiously. "Just where do you think this place is? It isn't Camelot, and it isn't Avalon."

• • •

Meantime, he had been looking at more books. The jackets of Freeman's "Lee's Lieutenants" [Scribner], and Robert Selph Henry's "First with the Most Forrest" [Bobbs-Merrill], caught his eye. He thought the helmet plumes wonderful, but the helmets a trifle queer. I explained that armor had gone out long before, and that this was the last war in which there had been any trace of chivalry left.

"Then why did they fight?" he wanted to know.

"It was a matter of trying to keep their black servants on the part of the more chivalrous ones. Besides, I suspect that they really wanted to fight."

"And the chivalrous ones won?"

"No, they didn't; wars aren't fought that way, nowadays. They are won by sheer weight of numbers and by machines. So the blacks were set free."

"And are they any happier?"

"No, probably unhappier. There are so many more things they want besides freedom. In fact, here is a book written by 14 of them ["What the Negro Wants," University of North Carolina Press.] I'm afraid they will never be satisfied for they seem to want to live perfectly in a perfect society."

"So the memory of the chivalrous fighting is about all you gained from that war, eh?" And I was forced to admit that it was.

His eye fell on Ernie Pyle's "Brave Men" [Holt]. I explained that Ernie was a writer sent out to accompany the troops into battle, and to report the truth. "The truth?" said Merlin.

"Well, anyway, the facts."

"Well, now, in my day, minstrels took good care to stay well back of the fighting. And they paid no attention to facts. The facts will all be forgotten before the bones of the dead whiten, but a fine heroic lay—now that lives on. Else how do you know so much about Arthur?" Then without pausing, "So you have a war going on now?"

"Two of them," I answered, "one with the Germans, and the other with the Japanese, an island people who live beyond Cathay."

"And do you really fight with machines, in the air, as your Tennyson predicted?"

"Yes, and here is a book about one such battle." I showed him Sherrod's "Tarawa" [Duell, Sloan & Pearce]. "Some of these machines could contain the whole Round Table."

"And what makes them go?" he asked.

"Gasoline, what would have been called an elixir in your day."

His eyes brightened. "Not the elixir?" And when I shook my head, he turned away and having finished the burgundy, began pawing over more books.

• • •

"And this?" he asked, picking up Alden Hatch's "General Ike" [Holt].

"O, that is the American general in command of all the armies fighting against the Germans."

"And does he take one of these great machines and go out to fight the German champion?" asked Merlin.

"No, Merlin," I confessed sadly. "Today, the champion stays well behind the lines, and plans how to send thousands of men into battle; if he plans well, he destroys the enemy army and even the enemy people."

Merlin looked at me hopelessly. "You remind me of the Romans," he said, "the most unpleasant people who ever lived. They just fought to win, and never got any fun out of it."

I picked up Van Wyck Brooks' "The World of Washington Irving" [Dutton]. "Now here is a book about the kind of people we were a hundred years ago," I said.

"So you are a people?" asked Merlin, and thinking over some recent events, I decided not to answer him.

"Then here is a book to interest a philosopher." It was Sumner Welles' "The Time for Decision" [Harper]. "A scheme for making peace after the war is over."

"A book to interest a philosopher," said Merlin, "would be a scheme for making peace before the war started."

"Then here are two, one about an actor, one about a singer." And I showed him Gene Fowler's "Goodnight, Sweet Prince" [Viking], and

Spirit of Holiday Goes Abroad in Parcels for Yanks

By Renee de Fontarce McCormick.
Author of "Little Coquette."

The early part of October was taken up with preparing parcels for our boys overseas. One of them had landed in Normandy on D plus 2 day. He was a sergeant, and had marched all across France. Then he was in Belgium, and still homesick. The other had high rank in the Pacific theater. We did not know where he was—on some island, in a vast ocean.

Christmas gifts is a topic which remains immutable in spite of the election and the war. The war had, of course, brought it still more urgently before us. What could we send in those small packages? What would they most like to receive?

Christmas is a living thing, as enduring as man himself. It is the remembrance of "home" in every one. These Christmas parcels represent the American home for our millions of fighting men. For them these packages will be like a vision of wide prairies or great forests, of the mountains and rivers, of the mighty sweep of America from coast to coast. Then they will recollect their family house, the old car, the gas station, and the corner drugstore.

These Christmas gifts somehow explain why our men are willing to give up life itself in return for so small a token of love.

Realistic Story on Running A Home

"THE HOUSE," by Marjorie Hill Allee. Illustrated by Helen Blair. [Houghton Mifflin, $2.]

A realistic story of coöperative housekeeping in Chicago in which a group of young people face serious problems, earning a living, social adjustments, interracial understanding. They make attempts, successful and otherwise at solving them. Good reading on the level of the older boy or girl who is alert to today's problems. It has just been awarded the Child Study association annual prize.

"Bolinvars" Is Written to Enthrall

"THE BOLINVARS," by Marguerite F. Bayliss. [Holt, $3.]

Reviewed by Edw. Wagenknecht.

It was an inappropriate honor that "The Bolinvars" should first have appeared in a 15 dollar limited edition. A book with the potential reader interest of an "Anthony Adverse" or a "Gone with the Wind" should never have been permitted to become a collector's item in its own time. Fortunately The Ladies' Home Journal and Henry Holt and company have now taken care of the matter.

"The Bolinvars" does not have the "significance" of either of the other titles I have named. But for sheer entertainment it would be hard to beat. It stands in the grand old tradition of spacious romantic fiction, harking back to a time when novels were neither clinical tools nor weapons of propaganda, but simply sheer enthralment.

Most of the scene is laid in America, but the "feel" of the book is British; I really do not know where else in American fiction you can meet the counterparts of those heroic cousins, the Jersey Bolinvar and the Virginia Bolinvar. Their estates are as vast as their passions, their generosity as boundless as their wealth, and the women who love them are surely the most gallant in literature.

The book opens the year after Waterloo, but its historical coloring is extremely thin. Yet it is really out of the current swim altogether, a magnificently reactionary book, and if you think that a left handed compliment, you must be far more convinced that all change is progress than I am!

Structurally the book is defective. The great mystery of Hugo Bolinvar's personality is cleared up two-thirds of the way thru, and thereafter we are largely concerned with sweeping up the pieces. It is unpardonable, too, that Marguerite, Devereux Bolinvar's wife, should be so summarily dropped.

You will have gathered that this is not a novel for those who are troubled by the "improbabilities" of "The Merchant of Venice." If you cannot stand mysteries of parentage and legitimacy, with a dark background of crime and cruelty, one generation removed, still shadowing the lives of the protagonists, or if you have no patience with the Byronic hero who, tested, turns out pure gold—even, or especially, when the author makes him a painter of genius for lagniappe—then you should leave "The Bolinvars" alone.

Jesus as Viewed by Many Writers in an Anthology

"BEHOLD THE MAN," by Ralph L. Woods. [Macmillan, $3.]

Reviewed by J. R. Perkins.

This volume may well be termed an anthology of Christocentric prose and Mr. Woods has done an excellent job of sifting. The sacerdotal and the theological find little place among the wide range of quotations, for the editor was rather careful to avoid them. His aim was to select the best that the most eminent have written about the Jesus of history and the result should satisfy Christians of all shades and grades of opinion except those who are religious stereotypes.

The volume reveals the impact of the Jesus of history upon many men of many minds and, despite its diversity of opinions, it attains a certain unity. For the Jesus of history, thru the centuries, has become the Christ of experiences—great psychic and emotional experiences in which men discovered for themselves the redemptive power of Christ's life and death.

This Christological anthology of choice prose selections is made up of the writings of saint and sinner; of devout churchmen and those who thought little of ecclesiastical patterns; and it runs the gamut from those who seem to believe naturally and easily to others whose very doubt is shot thru with the agony of the wish to believe.

A BOYHOOD IN CHICAGO

By Albert Halper.
Author of "Only an Inch from Glory."

Holiday greetings to all Chicagoans, book buyers, and book borrowers alike! And to those who do no reading at all, greetings, too!

Sending these salutations from Manhattan, I remember my boyhood; I remember those gray west side streets, the snowy winters, the loop whose sidewalks were trod with my errand-boy feet, the John Marshall High school on W. Adams st.,

O, those boyhood days! Those gray, cold, west side boyhood years! I used to come home from school, walking along Kedzie av., thinking how wonderful it would be to be grown up, get a job, earn money, go to movies, and wear nice clothes. No more home work, no more algebra, no more Latin! And no more delivering groceries for my father thru muddy alleys and up back stairs. No more going to the railroad tracks near Carroll av. for ice for my father's big ice box. No more chores, no more school, no more books, no more teachers' frowning looks! Hurrah! Hurrah for ice skating in Garfield park, for warm woolen mittens, hurrah for red cheeked girls belly-whopping on sleds, for snowball fights, for kid gang wars in the falling dusk, for dashes up alleys and quick getaways, for bonfires with the Kedzie av.

You see, my friends, I remember everything about my city, the good and the bad.

Hurrah for Chicago! Sit back and dream. No smoking please. Hurrah!

ARTIST IN IOWA

A Life of Grant Wood

By DARRELL GARWOOD

More than any other artist of his time, Grant Wood belonged to the American people—and was, from the beginning, honored by them. The very quality that made him so popular with his countrymen has been caught in this sympathetic, warmly detailed story of his life. Here is a word picture of an American artist's life, put down while the colors are still fresh and vivid. Illustrated.

Exile Found Stimulating to Many War Time Writers

By Lion Feuchtwanger.

Author of "Double, Double, Toil and Trouble" and "Simone."

NEARLY every one who lives in exile is forced to struggle against economic insecurity, and must contend with endless trivialities such as the annoyance of red tape, but the writer in exile is especially hampered by this struggle. It's not easy, for instance, to write a comprehensive novel which may never be published, while living a precarious life in a hotel room, burdened by every kind of adverse external circumstance.

Yet, for the author in exile, the inner restraints of language and thought are still more destructive and nerve wracking. Even tho he learns to use the foreign language well enough for all ordinary purposes, he rarely succeeds in using it creatively, for ultimate emotional values are best expressed in one's native tongue.

Thus the writer in exile must turn to translation which at best can only approximate his intended meanings. And often an author is inwardly so bound to the cultural content and form he knew in his youth and in his own country, that when the bonds are cut his strength withers away. Then, like Stefan Zweig, he may choose suicide rather than life in an alien land.

But once the initial difficulties of exile are met and overcome, the author may find himself strengthened. The vast abundance of new material and new ideas which flows in upon him can be enormously stimulating.

It can be said that suffering makes the weak weaker and the strong stronger. Not all writers in exile have become embittered or have given way to despair. Many have grown more mature, have been rejuvenated, have become more wise and more just toward their new world, more grateful and more conscious of their own mission.

Among the multitude of books published in this country and during the war years, some of those by authors in exile stand very high. And I feel sure that when the war is over and we are able to weigh lasting values more accurately, literature composed in exile will not be light in the scales.

It Is Really a Gift if It Gives a Laugh

By Will Davidson.

From Leyte to Luxembourg this coming Christmas eve there'll be a peace on earth that has nothing to do with man's feeble efforts to achieve some status other than war. It will be the peace of memory. So great is the human spirit that it can descend into a foxhole and then conjure up a snowy night at home, with the family around the fire, presents scattered on the floor, a lighted tree, the smell of turkey still in the air.

There'll be laughter in that memory—particularly if we at home have done our part in sending out the gift of a smile. It might be a letter. It might be a cartoon book. It might be a funny story. The book trade is generous, indeed, this year in its offerings of relaxing humor.

But there's a special sort of laughter that seems particularly fitting for a particular group of service men. They are the ones that somewhat ruefully label themselves "chair borne infantry" or "paragraph troopers."

Gene Coughlin called himself "Assistant Hero" and thereby wrote one of the funniest books of the war. [Crowell, $2.] He was the fortyish newspaper man who was drafted before the change in age limits, and who, because he had done publicity for a radio team was, with that strange army logic, assigned to splicing wires for the signal corps. His tale is witty and warm and sometimes hilarious. It is capital reading for any one—especially a desk soldier.

Then there was Joe Jones, who is Mr. Betty Smith of "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn." Joe's eyesight kept him a "1-B Soldier" [Harper, $2], but he found in his manual labor and his drills a real satisfaction that might help some other 1-B overcome the depressing effects of unglorious monotony.

Donald Hough, too, knows the strangeness of this war, for having gone thru the warmup one he now is "Captain Retread" [Norton, $2.50], an air corps officer helping to keep that magnificent force running. His humor is quiet, his admiration for the kids profound.

As for Ezra Stone, whom even the army hasn't entirely divorced from the character of Henry Aldrich, he tells in the appropriately titled "Coming, Major" [Lippincott, $2], the rather amusing story of how he came to be a ringleader in the army's theatrical ventures. Weldon Melick helps him tell it.

Any of those four books would be an ideal gift for your home soil soldier. They'd help him find laughter compensation in a job he may consider disgustingly safe.

Sky Is Limit in Folklore of America

By B. A. Botkin.

Editor of "A Treasury of American Folklore."

Any attempt to define American folklore suggests the folklorish reply of the Kentuckian when asked what he considered to be the boundaries of the United States: "Why, sir, on the north we are bounded by the Aurora Borealis, on the east we are bounded by the rising sun, on the south we are bounded by the procession of the Equinoxes, and on the west by the Day of Judgment." The sky's the limit!

Americans sing, swap stories, brag, jest, and create heroes for the same reason—because they have to—and in much the same way—about the things that interest them most—as other peoples. If, for example, our favorite heroes are western heroes, that is because the west represents our heroic age. And if, even in our hero tales, we have left supernaturalism behind, that does not prevent us from telling stories about talking animals, witches, ghosts, and devils long after we have ceased to believe in them or take them seriously.

Whether Americans have a folklore of their own does not really matter. Folklore is the greatest of borrowers—and lenders. And whatever Americans borrow they make their own. Folklore is the stuff that travels and the stuff that sticks.

Let "Johnny Reb" Settle Dixie Problems, Street Urges

By James Street.
Author of "By Valour and Arms."

H. ALLEN SMITH, who wrote "Low Man on a Totem Pole," tells me of a fellow who wants to straddle the Mason-Dixon line, fire a blunderbuss and holler, "That's the last shot of the Civil War."

Officially the last shot of that war was fired by the C. S. S. Shenandoah in the Arctic ocean on June 22, 1865. Actually, the last shot never will be fired because in that struggle the haves defeated the have-nots, and the have-nots never shut up until they become haves.

And it won't be long now before the South is a land of haves and then the fun will begin.

Perhaps with the exception of King Arthur's wars [and he lost] no conflict has been wrapped in as much hokum as our Civil war. The fact that we call it a civil war adds to the confusion. It wasn't a civil war at all, or a war between the states, but rather another act in the drama of the American Revolution. The confederacy was the last fortress of Old Europe and its leaders were conservative Constitutional hair splitters. The fighters and workers, however, were poor men who distrusted the landed gentry almost as much as they distrusted northern industrialists.

That's why the Civil war is still being fought. Johnny Reb has become G. I. Joe.

I am a Southerner and a writer of so-called historical novels. I still do not see how we can novelize history, but let's not quibble. I am interested in the Civil war period because it was a classic and 79 years after its conclusion it still offers a solution to America's most baffling domestic problem—the South.

The South never was united before, during or after that war, and had she won she soon would have split the Confederacy into a group of Balkan states. Political ideology never has conquered economics and we should remember that in the South the Seaboard is still the seaboard, the Valley is still the valley, and Texas is Texas. The three sections, almost 3,000 miles of startling contrasts, have no more in common than Wyoming, Illinois, and New England.

I happen to be what some folks call a Southern liberal, whatever that is. [Lordy, but I'm weary of the omnipresence of such words as reactionary, Liberal, Red, Nazi, etc. I say let me draw the nation's comic strips and YOU write the songs]. I believe in equality. Period. I do not believe in breaking it down into such face-saving definitions as economic equality, social equality, etc. As a writer, one of my hopes is to show my folks that equality, with no strings, is the best insurance we can take for our own well-being. There are many Southerners who believe as I do and maybe we'd get somewhere if our Northern friends would stop this everlasting bosom beating and finger pointing. The Bad Boy Dixie is on trial, but he still has no respect for the free thief on the jury.

Every Southerner has his own plan for helping the South. All right, here is mine. Quit mouthing about Jim Crow, poll taxes, etc. Of course they should be abolished. And the South is just unpredictable enough to wipe them out IF you'll leave them alone and let them think the idea is theirs.

But Jim Crow, etc., is a result, not a cause. Let's get to the cause. Up to the era of Manifest Destiny, the annexation of Texas and the theft of California, the South was the nation's melting pot. Every bloodline was pouring in there and mixing and the South was our fountainhead of liberality. Then came the economic fear that preceded the Civil war and then the war and the pot stopped melting. It simmered a while, then cooled. That's our trouble. All we need to do is to get the pot to boiling again.

And it is coming. Tony has moved to Main street, Isaac is in the legislature, and Uncle Tom's grandchildren are studying law. Their children and my children will smash Jim Crow.

Yonie Wondernose Is Family's Hero

"YONIE WONDERNOSE," by Marguerite De Angeli. [Doubleday Doran, $2.]

Under Mrs. De Angeli's deft treatment as both author and artist, a Pennsylvania Dutch Amish family emerges in the role of kindly, strong-hearted people not without humor. She makes excellent use of the dialect, traditions and customs of these old-stock Americans. Seven year old Yonie, whose curiosity was a family joke, proved that he was really a man when lightning struck the barn while Pop was away.

Miss Schultz Urges History Tell Facts of This War

By Sigrid Schultz.
Author of "Granny Will Try It Again."

The well read American who studies and enjoys this book section has kept abreast of developments in the world of literature and near-literature, in history and would-be history, but there is one section of the American book world which I believe should receive a bigger share of his interest in this season.

Sigrid Schultz.

When we start to formulate our good resolutions for the coming year, we should look critically at the history books and outlines of history thrust into the hands of our sons and daughters. They may not rank as literature but they help form the opinions of the free voters of tomorrow.

If the books they study voluntarily or under compulsion fail to come up to the newest standards of knowledge to the reality of today, how will the young people be able to cope intelligently with the problems of tomorrow?

In the years after World War I. we allowed clever propagandists who swarmed over our country, and Americans who sought their learning at German universities, to sneak a goodly share of theories made in Germany into our schoolbooks and universities. Tho recent years have shown how these teachings handicapped clear thinking in our country, many textbooks still retain the criminally false theories foisted on sentimental Americans.

The average citizen may answer that he does not have time to pour thru weighty textbooks. May I suggest a short cut for this vitally important checkup? To judge by quite a number of textbooks I examined recently there is a concerted effort to becloud the facts about the outbreak of World War II.

Many an outline of modern history, in the hands of American youth, lists the date of Pearl Harbor and gives a factual description of the Japanese attack but when it comes to the history of the war with Germany, you find hazy statements such as these: "Because Germany and Italy sided with Japan, America declared war on Germany."

Adolf Hitler declared war on the United States on Oct. 8, days before America's declaration of war on Germany—and any American schoolbook, textbook, or outline of history which tries to camouflage this fact should be eliminated from circulation as fast as possible.

It will suit Joseph Goebbels and Hitler's successor well to have a young American generation that is kept in the dark about the date on which Hitler openly challenged America, but for the sake of the future peace we should not allow teachers or historians to try to prepare any kind of whitewash for Germany.

Big Library Appraised by Heavyweight

By H. Allen Smith.
Author of "Low Man on a Totem Pole" and "Lost in the Horse Latitudes."

Books can mean many things to many people.

I sometimes come up with dumb philosophical remarks like that.

My friend Red Marberry moved from Chicago to New York a few years ago. Mr. Marberry is a great guy to buy books and read them and keep them after that. Before leaving Chicago he had some people in for a farewell visit and they took to estimating just how many books he actually owned. An argument ensued, and some wagering, and finally all hands went to work on an actual count. I don't remember the figure they arrived at, but it was several thousand.

The following day Mr. Marberry called in a moving man to discuss crating and shipping costs. The moving man was a large man with a fire-hydrant neck and a cigar. When he stepped into the room he glanced around at the groaning shelves and delivered himself of the customary crack: "Hmmm. Lotta books. Ever read any of 'em?"

Mr. Marberry happened to recall the count that had been taken. He said: "Just how many books do you think I've got here?"

The moving man didn't hesitate. "I can tell you exactly," he said.

Mr. Marberry was, of course, a shade more than skeptical. He didn't figure this guy for an overgrown Joel Kupperman. He just knew the lug couldn't tell him exactly how many books were in that room. He challenged the moving man, dared him, finally bet him a dollar he couldn't do the trick.

The stalwart visitor took a bet. He puffed his cigar, pushed his hat to the back of his head, stood teetering on his heels and slowly let his eyes survey the shelves. At last he turned to Mr. Marberry. "Okay," he said. "I got it."

"How many?" said Mr. Marberry.

"A ton and a half of books," said the moving man.

"We might as well slow down again—he's found some more funny papers."—From Roland Coe's "The Little Scouts in Action."

Merlin Steps Out of History to Look at the Magic of '44

Grace Moore's "You're only Human Once" Doubleday, Doran].

"Mountebanks," said Merlin.

"Perhaps," I replied, "but they had wealth and position and influence greater than any noble of your day."

• • •

"And here is one about the kind of world we shall live in after the war." It was Eric Johnston's "America Unlimited" [Doubleday, Doran]. "It will be a magic world, Merlin. Machines will do all the work, practically. We shall be able to fly around the world in two or three days, as we can already talk around the world. All the inventions of modern science will be at the command of every man, and even the poorest will have wealth that even King Arthur could never have dreamed of."

"And will you be any happier when you fly around the world? Any wiser? Do you have anything worth saying when you talk around the world? You will all be just alike, sunk in dead level of comfortable anonymity. You may even forget how to suffer. And love. But are there no books on the Philosopher's Stone and the Elixir of Life?"

"No, we have given them up as ancient dreams with no substance," but I brightened, "we live nearly twice as long as most people did in your day."

Then I tried to interest him in romance. I got out Lillian Smith's "Strange Fruit" [Reynal & Hitchcock], Henry Bellamann's "Victoria Grandolet" [Simon & Schuster], John Hersey's "A Bell for Adano" [Knopf], Hervey Allen's "Bedford Village" [Farrar & Rinehart], W. Somerset Maugham's "The Razor's Edge" [Doubleday, Doran], Elswyth Thane's "Yankee Stranger" [Duell, Sloan & Pearce], Thomas Mann's "Joseph the Provider" [Knopf], Nevil Shute's "Pastoral" [Morrow], Herbert Best's "Young 'Un" [Macmillan], and A. J. Cronin's "The Green Years" [Little, Brown]. He still looked bored.

"Which one of these will be remembered when Launcelot and Elaine are forgotten?" he asked.

"Merlin," I said, "you don't get the point of view. You are hamstrung by the aristocratic tradition. This is the century of the common man, and every little shop girl, every common soldier in the ranks, every worker, and every farm girl, has the right to a romance as glowing and as filled with ecstasy and suffering as did Elaine and Launcelot, and Guinevere and Arthur. Or you and Vivien."

"O, that," said Merlin.

"Besides," I went on, "it isn't so much what happens to whom, as it is the excellence of the telling. Whoever first wrote down the story of Launcelot and Elaine had as much to do with the immortality of the tale as Elaine's hands or Launcelot's chivalry. I'd like to lend you some of these books—if they'll stand the climate."

"O, the climate," said Merlin, "the climate is really pleasanter than what you call climate here. But no, I haven't time for any but the ancient tomes of wisdom in our municipal library. If ever I discover the Elixir and the Stone, it might be interesting to come back and stay awhile. In any case, I'll drop in on the world in about 50 years to see whether mankind has made a beginning of the pursuit of wisdom."

"Yes, do come back," I said, "I've enjoyed . . ."

"O, I'll be back," said Merlin, looking at me curiously, "but you won't be here. Still, we may meet again, at that."

• • •.

Then he was gone. Simply wasn't there any longer. My head felt funny and the library fire was blazing hot and high. The table was piled with disorderly stacks of books, and the hour was after 2. There was no sign of Merlin, not even a purple thread on the leather chair. But somebody had eaten those two slices of beef and emptied that bottle of burgundy.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

LAST week-end was a busy one for Howard Fast, author of "Freedom Road"—a memorable fictionization of a forgotten period in American history, just after the Civil war when a group of freed slaves and white men tried to work together for a democratic way of life in South Carolina, and failed. . . . If he didn't leave Chicago exhausted from his feting, it's because he is only 30 years old, and not, like your Spotlighter when she saw him, feeling like one of those roly-polys that we used to play with as children. . . . When you knocked them over they always managed to come back up. . . . One of those rude flu bags had banged her down and she was still wabbling on the upgrade when she went to a party for him on Saturday afternoon because she was loath to get into the evening lecture crowd with her unsocial sniffles, and she hoped thus to have a few words with him quietly. . . . But so popular was Mr. Fast, or his host and hostess so lavish in their invitations, that when your wobbly Spotlighter arrived she was literally kept upright by the pressure on all sides. . . . Trying to talk over the din of merrymakers was like trying to be heard above the orchestra in one of the cannonading passages of the 1812 overture. . . . I was able to elicit from Mr. Fast the fact that he is at work on a book about a famous Chicago character. . . . He refused to say who it was, but I had read that it was Gov. Altgeld.

Lincoln Book Shop Moved.

The name of Abraham Lincoln shines on the windows of the bookshop which now occupies the rooms at 16 N. Michigan av. vacated by Ben Abramson, thus bringing to the easier access of the public an unusual shop formerly on an upper floor at 33 N. La Salle st. . . . There it was the rendezvous of all of the collectors of Lincolniana. . . . Its originator, Ralph Newman, is now serving his country in the navy but keeps his interest in the unique shop, which is being run by John Valentine in his absence. . . . Ralph Newman has been for years collecting all available Carl Sandburg photographs. . . . Some day they will be published as a pictorial life of the greatest of Lincoln biographers.

Brentano's Book store is celebrating its 90th year of book selling. . . . It is going to wait until its centennial to make a real splurge, so Wendell W. Goodpasture, manager of the Chicago Brentano's, says. . . . Brentano's is not only one of the oldest, but one of the greatest, names in book selling history. . . . At this moment there is only one of the family left in the business, Arthur Brentano, who is general manager of the New York Brentano store. . . . In the days when Brentano's occupied the huge store in the 20s on Fifth avenue there were two generations in the book selling and publishing business, among whose vastly successful alumni is Bellamy Partridge, author of "Country Lawyer," etc.

Many Brentano Stores.

The name of Brentano is over many book stores. Within the last two years stores have been opened in Los Angeles and Pasadena. . . . Washington simply bristles with Brentano shops, six in all. . . . There are four shops in New York, three in Philadelphia, and two in Hartford, Conn. . . . No one knows exactly what happened to the shop in Paris during the German occupation. . . . Before the war every American and English book reader in Paris at some time or other visited Brentano's.

A Smuggling Problem.

Another Paris book shop where Americans were likely to encounter friends was Sylvia Beach's shop, Shakespeare & Co., on the left bank. . . . James Joyce was for many years an almost daily caller there. . . . Miss Beach first published his "Ulysses" under the imprint of the shop in the days when it was forbidden importation to America. . . . One of the invariable commissions of tourists from their friends was to be sure to go to Shakespeare & Co., get a look at James Joyce, buy a copy of "Ulysses" and figure some more ingenious way of smuggling it into this country than disguising it as a French-English dictionary or wrapping it in a pair of lace trimmed bloomers.

At one time Brentano's had three shops in Chicago. . . . The one in the Stevens hotel was liquidated when the government took over the Stevens. . . . When the hotel again passed into private hands the shop was not restored. . . . The shop farther north on Michigan av. was also a lease casualty. . . . The one remaining Brentano's, on Wabash av., is now owned by A. Kroch, operator of Kroch's Book stores.

How Dickens Took Jingle Out of Xmas

By Charles Collins.

Christmas in literature is not always merry; often enough it is grim or dolorous, perhaps to permit the spirit of the holiday to be felt by contrast. The dullest, darkest, most dismal Christmas in my reading occurs in one of the major works of the greatest Christmas author of them all, Charles Dickens.

The laughing, jingling, gorging, sentimental Yuletides of Dickens' novels are common talk among bookish people at this time of year, but thus far no one has spoken of the gloomy Christmas that opens "Great Expectations." I add it, therefore, to the record.

This is a swampy, foggy, graveyardish and fear-stricken Christmas on which the small boy of the tale, Pip, does not receive a present. He sheds no tears over this grievous omission by Santa Claus; in fact, such neglect is normal for him, and it seems that his relatives, who had "brought him up by hand," never told him about the beneficence of St. Nicholas. He spent Christmas eve in fear of having his throat cut by an escaped convict, and burglarized the household larder to feed his blackmailer.

There was a Christmas dinner in the Gargerys' cottage near the marshes, where Pip lived, but the urchin had no appetite for it. His conscience harrowed him; dread of the convict, about whom he dared not breathe a word, choked him; and Uncle Pumblechook, the guest of honor, heckled him into conniption fits.

The dinner consisted of a leg of pickled pork with greens, a pair of roasted chickens, and a mince pie, with nuts, oranges, and apples to top off. The only gift of the day in the Gargery household came from Uncle Pumblechook, who arrived with two bottles of wine, port, and sherry, for his hostess.

There was no happy surprise over this donation, for Uncle Pumblechook did the same thing every Christmas, "carrying the bottles like dumbbells," and expected to drink most of the wine himself.

So there you have it—a footnote to literature that fits into the war time picture, 1944: Dickens' dreariest Christmas.

Helldiver Squadron.

Bombing 17, the first Helldiver squadron of the Pacific fleet, is the subject of a book by Robert Olds which Dodd, Mead will publish on Dec. 5.

Labor in China.

The John Day company announces that "The Chinese Labor Movement," by Nym Wales, will be published Jan. 4.

It's Elusive—the True Spirit of Christmas

By Mazo de la Roche.
Author of "Building of Jalna."
York Mills, Ont.

It is a never failing wonder to me how fascinating one's own dreams are and how boring other people's. The other morning I woke full of eagerness to tell of an amazing dream I had had. At the breakfast table I could get no one to listen to me but after breakfast I sought out my sister, where she was surrounded by masses of colored paper, ribbon, and Christmas cards.

• • •

"I've had the most wonderful dream," I began, "all about the Spirit of Christmas."

She puckered her brow and said, "There is Cousin Emily—I simply don't know what to give her. Last year she sent us a calendar with a picture of a dog on it."

"Cousin Emily knows we love dogs."

"The odd thing was," mused my sister, "that the calendar was for 1942."

"Has Cousin Emily a pet," I asked.

"Just a turtle."

"Very well, supposing we buy her a 1943 calendar with a picture of a turtle on it."

"Don't be silly," she returned.

"This dream of mine," I reiterated firmly, "was all about the Spirit of Christmas."

"I know. I've had the very same dream."

I was irritated. "You couldn't! In my dream the Spirit of Christmas appeared to me——"

"Yes, I know—like it did to old Scrooge."

"Not in the least," I answered,

Mazo de la Roche, whose latest of the Jalna stories "The Building of Jalna," has won wide readership.

and hurried on, "this spirit was beautiful, and gracious, and kind, and——"

She interrupted, "It was in my dream, too." She bent her head in complete absorption over two almost identical Christmas cards. "I don't know which of these cards," she murmured, "is most appropriate for Miss Williamson . . ."

I turned away. Is there such a thing, I wondered, as the true Christmas spirit.

Mencken Supplement.

A supplement to the fourth and final edition of H. L. Mencken's "The American Language," containing much new material, is now being printed by Alfred A. Knopf and will be on sale soon.

Gilt Mottos Are Buried in War Debris

By James B. Connolly.
Author of "Sea-Borne: Thirty Years Avoyaging.

Peace on earth, good-will to men. That is a sentiment once held in high esteem. In my boyhood days we used to cut out the letters in cardboard, cover them with gilt paper, and thumb tack them over the fireplace at Christmastide. And we would gaze at the gilded letters and move around the neighborhood with good feeling for all.

• • •

Not nowadays. The family that pasted that motto on a living room fireplace these days would be suspect. The thing now is to teach hate—hate of other people and other ways of doing things.

On every side we get it. "Hate, hate, hate." "Emasculate them," says one. "Eliminate them, wipe them out completely," shouts another.

Are these shouts from the fighting men overseas? No, no, not so. It is from those in the safer zones, thousands of miles away, and invariably the shouts come from those of impotent years.

• • •

Trade rivalry, lust for power, for more land to rule—these bring on practically all wars. The constant preaching of hate, impregnating the growing up ones with it, is what keeps the war fires burning. The dictators are evil creatures and they should be dealt with surely. And after dealing with them, wouldn't it be a fine idea to do in the hate mongers until we get rid of them. Then there will be peace on earth, good-will to men.

Fascinating Volumes for Sportsmen

By Bob Becker.
Outdoor Editor of The Tribune.

If Santa Claus wants to please some of his sportsmen "customers" with books on outdoor subjects he'll have no trouble this year loading up his pack, for during 1944 a number of outstanding new sports books were published.

Duck hunters will enjoy "The Canvasback on a Prairie Marsh," by A. Albert Hochbaum, the latest and most complete study of one of America's great game birds. Two unusual books which were published this year for upland game hunters also definitely belong in the Christmas list. They are "Woodcock," by John Alden Knight, and "Shotgunning in the Uplands," by Ray Holland, which was reviewed by this writer several weeks ago.

Altho Knight's book on the woodcock is not large, it's authoritative and delightful reading for the man who loves October hunting in the woods. Mr. Holland's handsome volume [decorated with beautiful color pictures] on all upland game birds still is this writer's nomination as "gift book of the year." It's just about the last word on shotgun sport with such sporting game birds as the pheasant, partridge, and grouse.

Another exquisitely illustrated book, with an especial appeal to the legion of outdoor fans who visit the Quetico and Superior forest country is "Snowshoe Country," by Florence Page Jaques. Here is the wilderness in winter portrayal in all its beauty.

Other ideal gift books for sportsmen which are recommended are: "The Sportsman's Anthology," by Robert F. Kelley [for the all around sportsman]; "The Wolves of North America," by S. P. Young and E. A. Goldman [first book ever published on this subject]; "Knots," by Clifford W. Ashley, an extraordinary 620 page volume with illustrations of more than 3,900 knots], and "Winning Sailboat Races" by Harvey Flint [the leading skipper in the east tells boat owners some tricks of the sport].

Regional Book.

Alice Dixon Bond, literary critic of the Boston Herald and Traveler, has signed a contract to edit an anthology of New Enland writings as an addition to the series of regional anthologies published by Whittlesey House.

A Confession: Writers Do Not Know All

By Martha Albrand.
Author of "Without Orders."

If I were still a child and could sit down and write my annual letter to Father Christmas I would tell him that I wish:

That the audience every writer wants would not expect every writer to be omniscient and able to solve everything for the ultimate good of mankind. No one has been able to do it in five thousand years. We can hope for a partial solution and we can all contribute a bit toward understanding, but we shouldn't be chided for our failure to produce a neat plan wrapped up in a neat book binding. One man did that and we know what has happened to his country.

That the much desired audience would not cry "coward" if a writer avoids controversial issues in his stories. He is telling a story after all, not trying to start an argument. If he must thrust his characters into debates in which they are not interested and which they are not capable of handling he is being unfair to his characters and to his story and to his readers.

• • •

And, please, Father Christmas, why should every fiction writer be a propagandist? If his characters are to be alive and natural, they will hold views of their own. But that need not be read as the author's views. One can enjoy a Chopin waltz, a sunset, a swim in the ocean, or a good steak without complaining there is no moral or significance. Why not read a book without peering for a hidden meaning.

Excess of Hating in World Found by George S. Perry

By George Sessions Perry.
Author of "Hold Autumn in Your Hand."

If Christmas is lacking in merriment and the little island of goodness it sometimes creates in us, that's our own fault. We have picked up the most obvious booby trap that war has laid. There was a big sign on it marked HATE. It also read: Pick me up and destroy yourself.

Well, in trotting around the world on my own reasonably unimportant projects, I have found that just about everybody has yielded to the desire, once the going gets rough, to feel imposed upon.

There's an excessive amount of hating at home and overseas.

Yet dotted thru the various hordes that are marching here and there are a few heroes who in the face of almost eternal drudgery and discomfort manage to whistle while they work. I've known French nurses attached to a field hospital who hadn't slept under a roof or eaten out of a plate for two years who could still grin when a grin was worth a million dollars. I've known parachutists and destroyer men whose ever-present roommate was death who were still good company.

It would seem that only those who loved the dead and the maimed carry a valid passport to be sorrowful. For the rest of us to become strangers to merriment and to be beguiled into hating our fellows is, on the same basis that the French say that parting is a little of dying, a little bit of treason.

Dramatic Story of Hunting Dog

"WILDERNESS CHAMPION," by Joseph Wharton Lippincott. [Lippincott, $2.]

This is a dramatic story of a big red hound that was lost in the wilds of Alberta, joined a pack of wolves, and then was returned to its master.

How the dog came back, the way its love for man overcame its inherited wild traits, and how in time it became a famous hunting hound makes a first rate narrative. Having an intimate acquaintance with dogs and much experience in hunting big game, both in North America and Europe, the author makes his story doubly interesting by weaving into it much authentic outdoor and hunting lore.

Handsome drawings by Paul Branson add to the attractiveness of the text and provide an extra appeal to dog lovers and young people.

STORY of a Secret State

BY JAN KARSKI — A Book-of-the-Month Club selection.

Under the Nazi terror in Poland there has grown a secret democratic state. This is the story of a people who have lived for four years in this secret state.

Lt. Jan Karski served as liaison officer between the political and military authorities and as official courier between the secret state in Poland and the Polish government in London. Through his eyes, we see this state in action. Four separate political parties collaborated against oppression. Courts functioned. Polish schools, banned by Germany, held regular sessions. Newspapers were published, war bonds sold, morale maintained by open ridicule of the Nazis. And finally we see the Warsaw Ghetto and the Jewish death camps—a wholesale slaughter of innocents without parallel in the history of the human race. Here is the Jeremiad of western civilization, realistic, appalling. $3.00

BEST MYSTERY STORIES OF THE YEAR

By Drexel Drake.

Prejudicial addiction to a particular type of mystery story, a privilege of readers, must not clog the emotional arteries of a handicapper who ventures annually to name the 10 best mysteries of the year. A leaning toward one or another type, or bare tolerance of others, could be expected to reduce the selections to a biased slate oblivious of a lot of good contemporary performance. [Thus is exposed a fundamental distinction between the reader who enjoys mysteries of his own choice and the reviewer who takes them as they come.]

While bias may be presumed to color a selection of bests in general fiction, the definitive types of stories included in mysteries impose upon a chart maker an obligation to give all stables an even chance to groom their color bearers for the dash to the finishing post.

To qualify as a mystery, a story must present a puzzle which the reader is given incentive to follow to its solution. The puzzle almost invariably, but not by restriction, centers upon murder. Beyond that essential, the mystery story may and does wander into any of numerous alleys.

It may be a tale of straight detective deduction; it may be a rampaging crime thriller; it may be ludicrous travesty or hilarious burlesque; it may be a deeply emotional novel, or a spine chilling horror tale, or a saga of neuroses and psychiatrics; it may match wits between spies and counter-spies. In any event, it may be top work of its type, yet wholly without luster for fans with other unshakable predilections.

In the hands of a reviewer, a mystery story deserves to be rated for merit as a work of its particular type, not considered in competition with stories of other types. There is no scale, beyond individual taste, to determine balance between comedy and tragedy, or brainy deduction and brawny conquest.

Offered as unimpeachable selection, therefore, and listed in the order in which they were published during the year, here are the 10 best mysteries of 1944:

"To What Dread End," by M. V. Heberden.

"Fire Will Freeze," by Margaret Millar.

"The Frightened Pigeon," by Richard Burke.

"The Crooking Finger," by Cleve F. Adams.

"The Knife Will Fall," by Marten Cumberland.

"Blood Upon the Snow," by Hilda Lawrence.

"Sinners Never Die," by A. E. Martin.

"Old Mrs. Camelot," by Emery Bonett.

"Death at the Depot," by D. G. Hastings.

"The Dark Street," by Peter Cheyney.

A G. I. Writes Home About Church at Top of the Night

By La Mar Warrick.
Author of "Yesterday's Children."

Last Christmas eve a boy wrote home: "It is strange not to be hearing dad's voice reading Washington Irving, and watching mom out of the corner of my eye, and smiling when the familiar and favorite parts come. But I can see everything clearly—the fire in the corner, the red candles in the windows and on the tables, and, after the reading is done, church at the top of the night."

Like a thousand other G. I. Joes, the boy let his imagination go AWOL on Christmas eve, from a place of war to a house of peace, to a midnight church service, to a book—a story book.

Modern psychologists have a name for that sort of thing; they call it "escapism."

In a recent article in the Saturday Evening Post about St. John's college there was a photograph bearing this caption: "Pretty Mrs. Katherine Lathrop, bookshop manager, reports that the students seldom buy novels or other escape literature, prefer to read modern biographies, books on economics, histories."

Well, well! If the bright young men at St. John's are so determinedly factual and scientific as all that, why drag in the adjective "pretty"?

Loveliness may be a fact, appraised tape-measure fashion by the judges in a beauty contest; love may be a matter of rearranging chemisms, as Theodore Dreiser has attempted to prove; religion may be a phenomenon of interest to the anthropologists. But on Christmas eve or any other eve, in a college library or an army camp or any other place, in war time or in peace time, scientific facts are not enough.

This Christmas we are at the top of the night—a long and dreadful night. If we look carefully we can see the promise of sunrise beyond the cold stars.

So far from this house there has gone to its particular G. I. Joe a Christmas package which contains books far removed from textbooks. Certain adventures of the human spirit are in the package—not "escape literature," if you please, but pieces of life set down on paper. A book called "Farewell to Arms" and one called "Of Time and the River"; a book called "The World of Washington Irving" and one called "Yankee from Olympus"; a time honored classic called "War and Peace" and a very new novel called "A Bell for Adano."

"We don't believe Tolstoi would mind our putting John Hersey's story of one Maj. Joppolo, an American boy who was an allied military government officer in Italy, in the same package with his great classic of war and its effect upon men. For in the introduction to "A Bell for Adano" John Hersey has said things that Tolstoi would like.

He has said some things that are perhaps quite as important as any book of economics or treatise on political science. "No charter, no four freedoms or fourteen points, no dreamer's diagram so symmetrical and so faultless on paper, no plan, no hope, no treaty—none of these things guarantee anything. Only men can guarantee, only the behavior of men under pressure, only our Joppolos."

Oceans Apart, but Reading Unites Them

By Clare Jaynes.
Author of "These Are the Times."

The soldier would be away now for a second Christmas, but he did not feel as far from home as others among the men. For he had kept a tryst.

Clare Jaynes.

It was not the type of mental tryst which consists of looking at the moon and feeling that a far-away loved one is seeing that same moon. That is a cold and unproductive sort of meeting, with the doubt about the time of moonrise in another country, the doubt that the other person will notice the moon, the doubt that his thoughts will turn in a like direction at a like impetus.

• • •

In the trysts of the soldier and his wife there was no such doubt, for theirs had been kept in books. This had been so since the early months of their enforced separation when the wife, baffled by trying to feel interest in the unknown people about whom he wrote her and struggling to find some way to interest him in what she was doing, began sending to him the books she was reading. He, too, then, when he read a book from the camp library would write her to read it and they would exchange impressions.

• • •

For two years they had done this. So, vicariously they had shared the same experiences, made the same friends among characters, thought the same thoughts, pondered the same philosophies. They had trod the same mental pathway and so, despite the miles and the circumstances that separated them, they had often felt close.

Noted Books in Fields of Education

By Arthur Bergholz.

As the year passes in review it is interesting to reflect on the character which informative publishing has taken.

Out of the various fields of knowledge important for our time publishers in 1944 have emphasized three which merit particular attention. They are the fields of public opinion surveys, psychoanalysis, and public administration.

It was only natural that in a national election year there would be a number of works on public opinion. Poll taking of the citizens' attitudes has become an important tool for social living. Properly done such surveys reveal the nature of opinion forming, and the ingredients which go to make up an individual's attitude toward issues, institutions, and products. "Gauging Public Opinion" by Hadley Cantril [Princeton, $3.75] is an excellent formulation of the methods of surveying public opinion. The reader will gain an understanding of the nature of bias in the wording of questions asked, of the interviewing technique, of sampling, and particularly of the analyzing of results. It will serve him as a basic survey and is admirably complemented by "Mandate from the People" by J. S. Bruner [Duell, $2.75] which is an analysis of the results of poll taking in respect to such basic issues as free enterprise, isolationism, job security, the returning soldier and the like. Bruner is skilful in conforming Raymond Clapper's justly famous observation: that we should never overestimate the knowledge of the average citizen but equally never underestimate his common sense in matters involving basic values.

As in the case of "opinion taking" our way of life makes it urgent that we gain familiarity with the vocabulary of science which seeks to probe our psychic tensions. Psychoanalysis has come a long way in its short development and war time stresses have highlighted its importance.

"Psychoanalysis Today," edited by Sandor Lorand, M. D. [International, $6] is a compilation of articles by eminent psychiatrists which trace the development and progress of psychoanalytic research. A careful reading will give the reader a grasp of techniques. It is the best of the current introductory approaches.

Those who have some familiarity with the science will find "American Psychiatry, 1844-1944," published by the American Psychiatric association [Columbia, $6] an invaluable historical contribution. Clyde Kluckholn's essay on the influence of psychiatry on American anthropology is of exceptionable merit. It is, incidentally, one of the few places that the ordinary reader can get a proper glimpse of the genius of the great anthropologist Edward Sapir.

Perhaps still more specialized but of profound interest to the cultivated reader are "Psychology of Women" by Helene Deutsch [Grune and Stratton, $4.50], "Rebel Without a Cause" by Robert M. Lindner [Grune and Stratton, $4], and "Psychosomatics" by Flanders Dunbar [Harper, $7.50].

The first is a sane, well reasoned analysis of feminine psychology. It is volume one of a projected work which should prove to be of major importance. The second is a penetrating, disturbing case study of the so-called psychopathic personality, the asocial individual par excellence who literally explodes himself into all his social relations.

Important among books on public administration is "The Elements of Administration" by L. Urwick [Harper, $2]. Urwick has managed with surpassing succintness to set forth surpassing succinctness to set forth organization and coördination of a given set of people's activities in attaining a specific objective.

"How to Develop Your Executive Ability" by D. Starch [Harper, $3] endeavors, and does so reasonably well, to equip a person with the right psychological attitudes for the job of executiveship.

"Bureaucracy" by J. M. Juran [Harper, $2] is a temperate and keen analysis of the bureaucratic elements which so often are discussed irrationally in the heat of public frustration.

Theda Kenyon's most exciting novel

Black Dawn

The turbulent novel of Virginia just after the Civil War, and of a beautiful and wilful Yankee in petticoats who dared to flout the rules by which the South lived and loved.

Tropic Glory Grips Hearts of Fighters

By Osa Johnson.
Author of "Bride in the Solomons."

Osa Johnson.

For American mothers and fathers I know this Christmas will be one of fear and wonder about sons in the South Pacific. Hundreds of thousands of us have sons, brothers, sweethearts, and friends in the Solomons, New Hebrides, Mariannas, and Philippines. What will their exposure and sacrifice do to them and to their future lives?

Having spent so many years exploring the jungles of those areas, living on the land and with the Melanesian, Polynesian, and Malayan tribesmen, I can write some words of assurance to the loved ones they have left here. Some of our fighters will find the climate and the insects worse than the Japs, but the army and navy will master most of the adversities.

Some of our boys, who are going there straight out of school, as I did on my first trip as a bride in the Solomons, will probably lose their hearts to the islands. Many write me that they already have done so and want to return there after the war, to the beauty and the easy living, and to the primitive simplicity which our own civilization has lost. The radioman who outwitted the Japanese and lived for two years in the caves of Guam until he was rescued by our navy has already sworn he will go back to the South Pacific to live, if he can.

That is easy to understand, for almost no place is lovelier to look upon. Orchids on the trees and on the ground, luxuriant flowers of every color, masses of radiant foliage such as we see here only in hothouses, the air filled with birds flashing the most brilliant plumage, white beaches, and jade green seas, and sunsets of opalescent softness, almost bewilder us who come from Chicagoland. None can resist saying, at least once, "I wish I could live here forever."

But the boys will not lose their hearts to the girls, for most of them are nothing to look at, seldom take a bath, and are just truckhorses for their menfolk. From childhood, the women have to do all the heavy and dirty work, digging in the gardens, carrying firewood, minding the house, cooking and the rest, while the men decorate themselves and dawdle around all day. The more the boys see of the South sea girls the more they will admire and appreciate their womenfolk here in America.

There will be plentiful and good food. Everything but the Christmas turkey. Wild game is scarce, but there are brush fowl, green pigeons, wild pig, coconut, crabs, turtle eggs, turtles for steaks and soup, crayfish and sea fish of all kinds. Taro and breadfruit grow in abundance, and some yams grow as large as three feet in length. Wild almonds, pineapple, and other nuts and fruit give considerable variety to one's diet. Conch and large clam shells make fine teakettles and pots, and coconut shells make every kind of utensil. From canoe to living quarters, the rest of what one needs can be hacked out of coconut wood. Banana palms make up for lack of linen and even make good raincoats.

Of course our medical men have done wonders to prevent and to counteract the scourges of malaria and dysentery and other maladies, with ample quinine, salt, and other necessary supplies.

The worst adversity for me when I left Kansas at 16 to go with my husband to the Solomons was loneliness. Even those who adapt themselves and fall in love with the tropical allure will long for some occasional voice or face from home.

Some of us learn to bear living without society, but all of us miss the family and friends we love. Next to sending our prayers and gifts to the South Pacific, there is nothing we can do that will be more appreciated than continued letters. They are the bridge to those realities for which every man in uniform is fighting.

Twilight of the Hapsburgs Is Recounted in Rich Detail

"LOST WALTZ," by Bertita Harding. [Bobbs-Merrill, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Kenneth C. Kaufman.

Writing in the same happy vein that distinguishes all of her romanticized and anecdotal histories of European royalty, Mrs. Harding here recounts the adventures in exile of a collateral branch of the Austrian imperial family. The Archduke Leopold Salvator was a nephew of Franz Joseph, Knight of the Golden Fleece, and Inspector General of the Imperial Artillery. He was happily married to the Infanta Blanca of Castile, sister of Don Jaime, pretender to the Spanish throne. The Infanta was by way of being a professional mother, having borne her husband 10 little archdukes and archduchesses. They lived in a castle of 87 rooms, with a young army of servants.

With the Austrain revolution following the armistice of 1918, the family escaped, traveling in cattle cars, via Italy, to Spain, where the good natured Alfonso XIII., refusing to believe that his cousin constituted a threat to his crown, admitted them. They were penniless except for the Infanta's jewels, and for a claim against the French government which Leopold Salvator finally collected; having been something of an inventor, he had sold the French some patents before World War I.

The Imperial family settled in Barcelona, where the girls learned to wash dishes, iron, cook, and make beds, while the young archdukes, with the most admirable lack of pride worked in garages and at anything else they could find. Leopold Salvator raised the family vegetables in the back yard. As the youngsters grew up they went their various ways, some of them marrying commoners, others into their own level. Anton, the third son, married Ileana of Romania, was interned in Austria in 1939, and seems not to have been heard of since.

The story concentrates more and more on Franz Josef, the next to youngest [born 1905]. He became an automobile mechanic in Barcelona, learned to fly, got hold of a plane, did some stunt and advertising flying, as well as taking passengers on short local flights, became interested in advertising, especially for the tourist trade, and had a brilliant future, when England declared war. A few weeks later he was in America, with his wife, a beautiful and charming Austrian baroness. He wrote magazine and newspaper articles, acted as broker's agent on Wall st., bought some New Hampshire timberlands and organized a pulp manufacturing company. He volunteered for the draft at the first opportunity.

It was from the archduke and his wife that Mrs. Harding obtained most of the intimate details for her history, which is packed with the most amusing, touching or tragic anecdotes, all backed against a solid foundation of historical fact.

The family of Leopold Salvator was the very embodiment of the old Viennese Gemütlichkeit, sensible, independent and lovable, well worth knowing, either in the flesh or on paper.

Grace Moore Urges Peace in U. S. Homes

By Grace Moore.
Author of "You're Only Human Once."

Another Christmas is rolling around and as I write these words from a concert tour in Texas, it cannot be predicted that this one will be in celebration of peace in Europe, which is what we all hoped for last Christmas.

Grace Moore.

It seems to me, however, this year when we seem nearer to that reality than last year that it's about time we sat down and took stock of ourselves as human beings.

In a world rushing to break down standards, traditions, and personal ideals, it behooves us in the quietness of our own firesides to see what has happened to us on the home front; because no matter what happens to that world, we have to live with ourselves as human beings.

And to one who is a "singing traveling salesman," so to speak, and covers a lot of territory each year, meeting people in all grades of life, it appears that almost as great a tragedy as the war is the disintegration of human beings here at home.

The loss of loyalties—of the significance of friendship—and the hysterical form of fun that dominates leisure moments—is lamentable to see.

• • •

"I've checked on myself a hundred times as I've watched war time America and more than ever I've gone back to the old fashioned principles of living on which our future happiness will be based. So, if you want to live with yourself and let other people join you, check and recheck before it's too late. Besides we owe it to the boys who come home from the battle fronts to be human.

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF SPORTS

By Frank G. Menke

At last, in one great 628-page volume, here is everything you want to know about sports. From Baseball to Fox Hunting—from Golf to Backgammon—from Badminton to Jai Alai—the largest and most fascinating compilation of sports facts, statistics, anecdotes, champs, legends, records ever made!

Who invented baseball? Ice-hockey? Polo? How much did Tunney get for beating Dempsey? How fast does a golf-ball travel? Who won the 1913 World's Series? Frank G. Menke, master historian of sports, has worked 20 years and studied 2,000 books in order to give you this volume. Now you can settle all arguments and bets—spend hours in fascinating reading!

Here are a few comments from leading sports-writers: "A monumental thing."—Joe Williams. "A book of staggering dimensions." — Arthur Daley. "Endless sports facts, fancies, champions, rules, origins, legends."—Bob Considine. "What this country has needed for years."—H. G. Salsinger.

Hilariously illustrated by that "champ" sports cartoonist, Willard Mullins. Second printing now ready. Third edition on press. $3.50

SPORTS EXTRA EDITED BY Stanley Frank

A racy omnibus of the sports-reporting classics that have made the sports page the favorite newspaper reading of millions.

In SPORTS EXTRA Stanley Frank has gathered the top-notch pieces of Irvin S. Cobb, Heywood Broun, Westbrook Pegler, Damon Runyon, Ring Lardner, Grantland Rice, John Kieran, Quentin Reynolds, and almost 40 other "typewriter champs" of the sports world.

The book bristles with exciting personalities, colorful events: from Jeffries to Louis, from the "Four Horsemen of Notre Dame" to the famous 73-0 "T" party of the Chicago Bears!

Here are the sensational Dempsey fights with Tunney, Carpentier, Firpo; the peerless Helen vs. the incomparable Suzanne; that everything-happened-to-Brooklyn 1920 World's Series; great moments with Babe Ruth, Hornsby, Rockne, Sande, Bobby Jones, the great "John L." and countless others.

A magnificent book for men of all ages! $2.75

Great Gifts Live in Heart at Christmas

By Frances Parkinson Keyes.
Author of "Crescent Carnival."

On Christmas morning the first words I hear will be "Christmas Gif!" Creacy will say it when she brings my breakfast tray, decorated with one of the red camellias from my garden. King will say it when I go out to the garden myself, to gather more camellias to decorate the dinner table. Jack will say it when I step onto the front gallery to see if it is swept against the coming of my guests. And, before the day is over, Jack's cuiverful of pickaninnies—nine of them in all, without counting the baby, who is still too young to say it!—will all find an excuse for coming to the Big House and calling out "Chrismus Gif!"

I am glad I have something for each and all of them, tucked away already. They have given me a new feeling about Christmas. The savory dinner cooking in the kitchen, the great tree which stands at the end of the hall, the quaint creche in the parlor fireplace—all these are associated with lifelong habits of celebration. But it was not until I came to live on a Louisiana plantation that dusky servitors surrounded me, confident that they would have only to ask in order to receive. They make me more conscious of the gifts I have myself than I have ever been before.

I have the gift of work. I am doing work that I love, in surroundings that I have chosen, and I have the assurance that it is going well. For a long time my tasks were hard and thankless. Nothing about them suggested a benefit received. All that is different now.

I have the gift of health. For many years I was an invalid, for many others a cripple. Now I am well and strong. The years which most people call the best were painful ones for me. My best years are just beginning.

I have the gift of companionship. I am far from my family, or perhaps I should say my family is far from me. One of my sons is overseas. It is not fair to use space in Pullmans to transport the troop of grandchildren from New England to Louisiana, and most of my old friends are in the north, too. But I have found new friends.

They call me "Aunt Frances" if they are younger than I am, and "Cousin Frances" if they are my own age. This does not entail any of the usual obligations of relationship. It merely means that they do not think of me as a "damned Yankee." It is very pleasant.

I have the gift of faith: faith in myself, long lost; faith in humanity, long shattered; faith in the future, long dark; faith in God, omnipresent. I think faith is the greatest gift of all, unless it be courage, and having the first, who can lack the second? Certainly not I. Like Creacy and King, Jack and all his pickaninnies, I have asked and received—

"Chrismus Gif!"

New Sympathies in the World Expected as War Subsides

By Dr. Felix A. Levy.
Rabbi of Emanuel Congregation, Chicago.

I HAVE often said that Christmas is not a festival so much as it is a mood. There is a force about this holiday that carries us along whether we will or no. The general response to it arises out of the spirit of concord and benevolence, of sympathy and tenderness, peace and good will that it breathes, emotions to which all of us, Jew and Gentile, respond quickly.

There is a determination abroad in the land that the post-war world is going to be different, that men shall have purer beliefs and cleaner ideals, that a larger fellowship must possess the heart of humanity. We have erred and have paid the price in agony and suffering for our mistakes. We are looking to a period of genuine repentance and of true reconciliation. We hope that the nightmare of militarism and fanaticism is ending and that a new era of growing fellowship among men will ensue.

In such reconciliation lies the program of the world. We need harmony and peace; we need mutual understanding and toleration. This does not mean uniformity or even complete unity, but it does imply the concord and sympathy, the tenderness and mutual esteem that this season teaches. The time is or ought to be gone when religion, race, or even nationality should be the occasion for conflict.

Christianity and Judaism both stand for unity of the human race. On the one hand this goal is a legend, on the other an exalted ideal. We pray for it, but we do not do enough to bring about its realization. Reconciliation, which is the first step in the process of making the world over in God's image, is possible only when there are respect for and confidence in one's neighbor. We need practice this program. The spirit of good will must not simply be a sympathy for a distant people, but must manifest itself in our daily contacts, in our relations with our immediate fellow, be he Jew or Christian, white or red, black or yellow. Here is a common work to be done.

Insofar as Christmas helps regenerate man, we may look upon it as an aid to the work to which every religion is devoted. We Jews rejoice that it is about a child of Israel that the memories of this day center. It is upon a recognition of this that we base our hopes for a general brotherhood of man. The reconciliation of Judaism and Christianity which is gradually taking place, is one of the most inspiring occurrences of our age. It is a spirit of harmony which cannot but redound to the weal of mankind. Those two religions ought not to be apart; they have too much in common; sprung from the same source, they have a common ideal. Together they ought to work for that reconciliation of men on which the future of happiness of humanity depends: For reconciliation of nation with nation, race with race, creed with creed, class with class. Together they ought to weave those cords of sympathy and understanding and brotherliness which alone will ever bind together, in spite of all varieties and differences, all the children of men.

Wife of Guam Marine Tells Xmas Hopes

By Kathleen Winsor.
Author of "Forever Amber."

What do you want for Christmas this year?

If it's something material, probably you can have it. The country is rich, momentarily; richer perhaps than it ever has been. But it's poor in the things that matter most. Our best men are overseas, and tho we were hopeful last year that by Christmas time of 1944 we might have peace, now we see that this war can continue for a long time.

The nation's young people scarcely remember a time when there has not been the threat of war over us, and we've already had three years of actual fighting. With your husband, or son, or sweetheart, or brother far away and in danger, with no assurance when you will see him again, the things we once might have thought we would want for Christmas can have little value for us now.

A bottle of perfume, three pairs of hose, a fur coat— these may be the things we will get. But what we want is safety for the men we love, and some hope for the future, theirs and ours.

I got my Christmas present last July. My husband was with the 4th marines in the battle of Guam. During the fighting he was hit; a Japanese bullet went thru the front of his helmet, but was deflected by the liner and came out in back, wounding his shoulder. Death couldn't come much closer. But he is still alive, and tho he must go back and take new risks, for this Christmas I've had all that I could ask.

But there are other men who were not so lucky, and other women here whose Christmas must be empty and lonely. Still—we must continue to hope and to offer our prayers for peace — by Christmas next year.

Permanent Magic Seen in Grimm Tales

By Paul Engle.

The childhood of the race lives in the early years of our own children. There is the same quickness of response, the same intense awareness of self, and with it, the same easy acceptance of cruelty. The small brother is blindly seen as a competitor, a divider of food and affection, and instinctively the fist beats him on the head. But there is the same natural belief in magic power, in the human qualities of dog, tree, cloud.

All these facts are a special problem in writing books for children. I think they may be the explanation for the continuing force of old folk tales even in a machine age, when the business of knights and spears and maidens [this point is debatable!] no longer exists. For in those tales the same primitive wildness exists, just as it still does in the child.

Hence the prolonged usefulness of such a collection of stories as those of Grimm. These have just been reissued by the Pantheon Press, the producer of the handsomest books in America. The collection is complete beyond any other published here, and the translation is more idiomatic.

It is the one children's book above all others I would recommend as a permanent part of the library in any house with children. Its over two hundred illustrations will delight the child as much as the stories themselves. I can think only of the Bible as having a larger source of human wisdom communicated in the terms of human event.

Read the story of the rich sister who turned her hungry sister out of her house, and that night when her husband came home and she cut into a loaf of bread the red blood ran out. Or the tale of the seven stupid peasants, terrified of a rabbit and drowned when deceived by a frog. Or that marvelous tale, in only 11 lines, of the daughter who sickened and died because she was so willful and disobedient. Even in the grave one willful arm burst out of the ground and nothing could keep it under until the mother came and struck it with a rod. The violence is native to the old time, as it is native to the first years of a child.

And beyond this book, all the others, the handsome pages of type and picture, beyond the reach, far, far beyond the hope of any child in any earlier time. And the last 20 years are surely the finest of them all. The improvement in genuine artistic quality of illustration is obvious. But even the stories themselves have improved in the verbal texture of their telling.

No longer do they all treat the child as if he were an invalid kept out of the world. The whole range, from Grimm [and this huge collection of almost 900 pages has its own magnificent range] to the latest story of the house that got lost in the city, of the bus nobody loved, of the adventures of that newest of all troubadours, Donald Duck, expresses the persisting folk element.

Yours for a Grimm Christmas!

Life in Alaska Is Adventurous

"WE LIVE IN ALASKA," by Constance Helmericks. [Little, Brown, $3.]

She always had said she wanted to be an explorer; so it wasn't so strange that Constance Helmericks married Bud and spent a honeymoon year in rugged living in Alaska. Nor is it strange that in spite of the rigors of a canoe trip down the Yukon, of battle with mosquito hordes, of lean days when only Bud's gun and rod could provide any food, that Mrs. Helmericks is still living in Alaska and planning further adventures.

After their graduation from the University of Arizona the youngsters went to Anchorage, Alaska, to live temporarily with a sourdough uncle. Then came a defense job for Bud in Seward. Then the Yukon trip. Now Bud is in the Alaska defense command and Helen is planning their post-war trip into the Mackenzie river country in the arctic circle.

Ever Fascinating Are Tales from Anderson and Grimm

By Marcia Winn.

SOMETIMES, especially at Christmas, it is pretty discouraging to be an adult. You must always remember with nostalgia those Christmases that never can be recaptured, those Christmases when you received your first copy of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" or "Hans Brinker and the Silver Skates" or "The Swiss Family Robinson" and spent breathless hours curled up on the stairs, always the most comfortable place to read, wandering down that wonderful road of discovery.

You must remember, too, how each Christmas you reread, and each time as happily as the first, Dickens' "Christmas Carol," and a little book no one ever mentions nowadays, "The Birds' Christmas Carol," a lovely story about a crippled little girl born on Christmas day, and Thackeray's wonderful Christmas fantasy, "The Rose and the Ring," and every Christmas eve, tingling with excitement, "'Twas the Night Before Christmas."

It would be nice to read them all for the first time this Christmas day. It would be nice, too, to read for the first time Vercors' "Silence of the Sea," or Bemelmans' "Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep," or Vincent Starrett's superb collection of spy stories, all of which were published this year.

None of this is possible, but this constant reader can reread, and in each reading find new beauty and truth and savor, two lovely editions of fairy tales which came out in 1944—Jean Hersholt's translation of 25 of the tales of that gentle Dane, Hans Christian Andersen [Heritage Press, $3], and the marvelous complete edition of Grimm's fairy tales [Pantheon Books, $7.50], which came out last month. For child or adult either makes a gift with a life time of nourishment.

"If the story was beautiful," once wrote a Zanzibar teller of tales, "the beauty belongs to us all; if it was bad, the fault is mine only, who told it."

The beauty of Grimm and Andersen is that belonging to us all. The stories of the brothers Grimm were those handed down from generation to generation and collected by the two men. The stories of Andersen are less stern. They are melting with tender wisdom, and came out of his own mind. Grimm is realism, wry humor, just retribution; the ending is always certain and the course to it undeviating—the wicked pay for their malefactions, the good triumph. Andersen is the imaginative dreams of the good realized; it is simply and beautifully phrased and filled with the beauty and intrinsic truth of such little things as the curl of a leaf.

Who would not gladly reread—or profit by reading for the first time—the story of "Thumbelina," the child so tiny a polished walnut shell served as her cradle? Or "The Little Mermaid," that gentle nymph who fell in love with a human and sacrificed her tongue that she might have legs and be near him? Or "The Snow Queen," in which the devil made a mirror which distorted all that was good and beautiful and which, when broken, sent splinters of glass into the hearts of humans that turned them into lumps of ice—to be melted by an innocent child? Or those two Christmas stories, "The Little Fir Tree" and "The Little Match Girl?" All these are Andersen.

The Grimm collection contains eight times as many stories—210 in all. Here [to name a few familiars] is the story of little Snow White, the child as white as snow, as red as blood, and as black as the wood of the window frame, told far more beautifully than in its 991 other versions. And Rumpelstiltskin, and Cinderella, and the king's son who sought the golden bird, and the goose girl [in reality a princess] who was aided by the three drops of blood spilled on a white handkerchief by her mother, the dying queen; and the princess [in adversity, of course] with the three dresses in nutshells, one of moonbeams, one of sunlight, one of stardust; and "One-Eyes, Two-Eyes, and Three-Eyes"; and Thumbling, the tailor's son no bigger than a thumb; and on and on and on.

After all, there is some consolation in being an adult. Too often the "progressive" educators today ban fairy tales to children. They call them escape. They are, and so are dreams and flowers that look like fairies and castles in the sand and condiments that make soybeans taste like ambrosia, and let us be exceedingly thankful for them all.

List Books of Special Jewish Interest Here

A list of books of special Jewish interest has been prepared by the Chicago Area chapter of the Jewish Book Council of America, in coöperation with the Chicago Public library, for use in connection with Jewish Book week.

These books are classified under the group titles, "General Information, "The Jew in History," "The Jew in America," "The Jew in Palestine," "The Jew and His Neighbor," "Jews Who Made History," "Judaism — Religion and Philosophy," "Jewish Literature—from the Bible to Our Day," "Poetry, Drama, Music," "The Jew in Fiction," and "For Children and Young People."

The week's observance begins today and closes next Sunday. Literary program are scheduled.

Among the institutions taking part are the Central, Albany Park, and Douglas Park branches of the Chicago Public library; Anshe Emet synagogue, the Jewish People's institute, the Covenant club, the College of Jewish Studies, and the Hebrew Theological college.

A lithograph from Honore Daumier's collection, "Married Life (Pantheon Books, Inc.)": "You make me tired, dearest wife! . . Here for an hour you've been telling me it's snowing; I'm damn aware it is . . and just to think I've an umbrella . . at home."

Biography of Grant Wood Is in a Chummy, Tasteless Vein

"ARTIST IN IOWA: THE LIFE OF GRANT WOOD," by Darrell Garwood. [Norton, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle.

If it is useful to know of an artist that he had a bathroom with "peach colored shower curtain and towels," that he hung a side door of his house on the outside, when it had always been on the inside of the wall, then this book may be accepted as a modestly accurate account of the intimate life of Grant Wood. It is a succession of anecdotes, gathered from those who knew Wood, and strung together with little skill and less imagination. At times the book reads as if it had been conceived merely as a collection of stories and reminiscences of Grant Wood, with little thought of fashioning a readable or wise full-life account.

It is irritating to have some one who was not a close friend of the painter refer to him regularly by his first name. But then the whole book is in this chummy vein. Men many years older than Grant Wood are always called by their first names. Since they were complete strangers to the writer of this book, and since he was not writing the book from the point of view of Wood, it seems a brash and tasteless usage.

If the life of an artist is written, presumably the only justification would be that it contributed to an understanding of his art. Merely to recite personal events, the amount he paid for a house, the grocery bill he owed, the exact details of the money settlement of his divorce, is to tell the most ordinary of stories, the things that might happen to any man. And yet the author makes no effort to relate Wood's life to his painting, or even to consider the paintings as works of art at all. They are just like the grocery bill—objective incidents in his life.

There are isolated critical remarks, but they are of the banality one would expect from the general tone of the prose—"It was, in fact, nothing but stark realism." This is as awkward and crude a piece of writing as I have seen in a long time [and I must admit reading some very bad books]; the painting "American Gothic" is being described: "Its colors were weak, like southern Iowa is during a drouth."

The details of Grant Wood's early life in Iowa are interesting. Not even dull writing can conceal that. But no insight is shown into the real nature of Wood's life, of his peculiar and private problems, both as man and artist, or of his curious and often secretive personality. There are remarks such as, "His smile has been described as Buddha-like," but that is little enough revelation, having been said of multitudes from Mona Lisa to Greta Garbo. When the writer does try to move beyond the casual recital of casual incidents, the prose dithers into "the plum trees, spendthrift and overeager. . . ."

Grant Wood.

One does get from the book a view of Cedar Rapids, Ia., as a town which was remarkably friendly to Wood as artist. When Paul Hanson was working for a tiny salary, he gave half to Wood. The mortician, Dave Turner, bought 40 of Grant's paintings when he was utterly unknown, and gave him a studio as well.

KENNETH C. KAUFMAN'S SELECTIONS OF 20 BEST BOOKS

By Kenneth C. Kaufman

Professor of Modern Languages, University of Oklahoma.

If I could have only 20 out of all the books published in the last year this would be the list. I take it books are both a way of getting at life, and, when life becomes intolerable, a manner of getting away from it for a while, and then coming back, refreshed, and with a new perspective. So here are both kinds. It seems odd to justify a choice of books.

The good reader should be as omniverous as the good feeder; he should find a place for broiled steaks, Hungarian goulash, fried chicken, mince pie, and yes, even gelatine with whipped cream on it. And yet, when you come to think about it, books aren't quite the same thing as people.

In the matter of falling in love, for instance, nobody can explain, to anybody else's satisfaction, why it is the blond with freckles rather than the redhead with the crooked smile. But there is always something much more tangible about a book, some reason that can be put into words. So here are my choices, with the best reasons I can think up.

NON-FICTION.

TEN YEARS IN JAPAN, by Joseph C. Grew. [Simon & Schuster.] The reverse side of our ten years of blundering.

THE TIME FOR DECISION, by Sumner Welles. [Harper.] A guide to check the peace proceedings by, whenever they begin.

AMERICA UNLIMITED, by Eric Johnston. [Doubleday Doran.] The title is prophetic and I like to believe that America has only the limitations we choose to give her.

TIME FOR EACH OTHER, by Margaret Lee Runbeck. [Appleton-Century.] A brave and happy book about what war does to people, and the only one I have read which has touched me deeply.

YOU'RE ONLY HUMAN ONCE, by Grace Moore. [Doubleday Doran.] It is full of live and interesting people, with more than a little spice of the devil.

BRAVE MEN, by Ernie Pyle. [Holt.] To my notion the best reporting on the war.

TARAWA, by Robert Sherrod. [Duell, Sloan & Pearce.] An unforgettable view of the war on the other side.

LEE'S LIEUTENANTS, by Douglas Southall Freeman. [Scribner.] With "R. E. Lee" and the first two volumes, the greatest Civil war monument ever likely to be erected.

FIRST WITH THE MOST FORREST, by Robert Selph Henry. [Bobbs-Merrill.] One of the greatest of them all comes into his own.

THE WORLD OF WASHINGTON IRVING, by Van Wyck Brooks. [Dutton.] This evocation of the kind of people we were may help us understand the kind of people we are.

FICTION.

VICTORIA GRANDOLET, by Henry Bellamann. [Simon & Schuster.] Mainly for its beauty and terror.

A BELL FOR ADANO, by John Hersey. [Knopf]. There is something stronger than frontiers.

STRANGE FRUIT, by Lillian Smith. [Reynal & Hitchcock.] Nobody seems to have noticed that this is really a Greek tragedy with an unnatural crime to set it off and an inexorable Nemesis to bring it to its bitter conclusion.

BEDFORD VILLAGE, by Hervey Allen. [Farrar & Rinehart.] A lusty pioneer yarn is always good.

JOSEPH THE PROVIDER, by Thomas Mann. [Knopf.] A wonderful evocation of a wonderful age long ago.

THE RAZOR'S EDGE, by W. Somerset Maugham. [Doubleday Doran.] It is a good thing to think about things on the other side some times.

YANKEE STRANGER, by Elswyth Thane. [Duell, Sloan & Pearce.] Romance, unabashed, and justified by its sweetness.

PASTORAL, by Nevil Shute. [Morrow.] The most transparently tender love story of this war I have read.

YOUNG'UN, by Herbert Best. [Macmillan.] A grand yarn of days when Americans didn't ask any odds of life.

THE GREEN YEARS, by A. J. Cronin. [Little Brown.] Which plumbs the unfathomable depths of an adolescent soul.

A Puzzling Book About Mrs. Milton

"WIFE TO MR. MILTON," by Robert Graves. [Creative Age Press, $3.75.]

Reviewed by Robert Penn Warren.

This is the story, told in the first person, of Marie Powell, the high spirited, warm hearted, good-natured and intelligent girl—if we are to judge from the portrait here—who became the wife of John Milton. It is an unhappy story: The young girl, who loses her true love, is turned over to a bigot twice her age and for 10 years endures a loveless marriage and the added sorrows of the Civil war and the ruin of her own family, sustained only by the recollection of the lost lover who at the time of his as yet unreported death, far away in Ireland, is mystically united with her in her dream. Mixed with these events, which are well and sometimes movingly told, are long patches of the history of the time and of the doings of John Milton, often very dully told, and a good deal of the color of the speech and customs of Marie Powell's world.

This is a puzzling book. It is puzzling because one cannot be sure of the basic motivation of the author. If it is intended simply as the story of a young girl unhappily married to an older man of unprepossessing character, that story [which is in the first place a rather thin one] is almost swamped in the details concerning the times and the poet, pamphleteer, and scholar John Milton. But if more is intended, we must try to make sense of the contrast between the noble lines of the poet and the less than noble conduct of the husband.

From the indictment of the husband few crimes and failings, except those of a grand order, are omitted. Milton is vain, tyrannical, cowardly, penurious, sentimental, superstitious, overbearing, brutal with servants, unloving and unsympathetic with his children, revengeful, cold, prurient, inconsistent, and tho professing high principles, apt to make his principles wait upon his convenience.

The whole picture is presented with something of the muckraker's leer. Is this all we are to make of it? We are left with the impression of a snivelling hypocrite and not of a greatly gifted and imperfect human being tragically caught between his aspirations and his frailties. Perhaps the trouble is that Marie Powell could not tell that particular story. Tho Mr. Graves might have told it.

One more comment may be in order: Tho Mr. Graves is a scrupulous historical novelist who writes a learned story, there is perhaps something unhistorical in his easy equating, in his preface, of the Cromwellian government, which Milton supported, with the "undisguised fascism" of our own unhappy century.

Halifax Is Granted Frustration Degree

The latest recipient of the Boswell institute's degree of Frustrationis doctor is the earl of Halifax, Great Britain's ambassador to the United States. While visiting in Chicago last week the earl received his diploma from Col. Dr. Rousseau Van Voorhies, the institute's perpetual president.

The investiture was another link between the Boswell Club of Chicago and the Club of London, both groups of Johnsonians. The Club, of which Halifax is a member, is a direct continuance of the group founded by Sam Johnson and his distinguished contemporaries of the 18th century.

The London club is said to be the most exclusive dining club in the world. Limited to 40 members, as was Johnson's original group, its roster is made up almost entirely of titled men and church dignitaries. A few of them, such as George M. Trevelyan, Sir Arthur Eddington, Desmond MacCarthy, T. S. Eliot, and Sir Max Beerbohm, are English writers.

Durable Art Submerged in Stresses of War Time

By Edward Barry.

It is almost a truism among estheticians that some time must pass before an important new experience can be transmuted into durable art.

Not until there has been opportunity for contemplation, not until the new experience has become a part of the artist's basic mental and emotional resources, can it be embodied in the novel, the poem, the picture or the piece of music which will communicate it in anything like its full intensity to other persons.

The present war, which has brought momentous and shattering experiences to more men and women than any other happening in history, has been the subject of many millions of words of good reporting. Yet its basic story—that of its impact on the minds and hearts of people—remains largely untold.

Lost at present in the war's flame and sorrow are the new Remarques and Barbusses and Zweigs and Hemingways who will some day lay the story before us.

Even at the turn of the year, when the impulse to look ahead into the future is strongest, the temptation to speculate as to when the greatest and most penetrating examples of war born literature will appear must be resisted. Probably the bulk of what Hemingway would call the true books will be long in coming. They were after the last war.

Christmas Tree Is Sought by Spaniel

"GOOD FOR SCUFFLES!" by Janet Beattie. [Howell, Soskin, $1.50.]

Any small dog-lover will be overjoyed to find this book under the Christmas tree. It's especially appropriate for the occasion because it tells how Scuffles, a sturdy little cocker spaniel, ventures out on Christmas eve to find a tree for his young master, Davy. The story is attractively told and illustrated.

CAN YOU SOLVE THIS PROBLEM FOR US?

Why Can't We Give Away 1500 Copies of This Valuable 512-Page Book?

Copyright 1944: Unicorn Press

Yes, we are willing to give away this valuable book to the first 1,500 readers who send in a dime to cover the cost of mailing it.

Sounds easy, doesn't it? You'd think we would be SWAMPED with applications, considering that about 1,186,000 people read this newspaper every Sunday . . . Well, we actually made the offer in this very newspaper only a few short weeks ago—and WE WEREN'T!

WHY?

DO YOU remember the story of the man who stood on a street corner trying to sell five-dollar gold pieces at a nickel each—and nobody would buy! That's how we felt when we counted the requests that came in as the result of our first announcement. We just couldn't believe our eyes. Over 15,000,000 volumes of this world-famous encyclopedia have been SOLD to American families, who have been using them with pleasure and pride for a generation. Must we charge a big price for a book before people will take the trouble to send for it? Cannot we GIVE IT AWAY?

We know this offer should interest you. We know that if readers took the few minutes required to read this announcement in full, we would give away not fifteen hundred, but fifteen THOUSAND books.

Judge for yourself. Here is the offer.

OUR INVITATION TO READERS

We are now on press with the new Fall 1944 Edition of the Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Encyclopedia in 27 beautiful volumes. We want you to become the owner of a set. To enable you to become acquainted with the books before you decide to buy, we invite you to send for Volume 1, which is yours FREE, with our compliments. We ask you merely to send 10c to cover the cost of mailing the book to you as—evidence of your good faith, more than anything else.

That is our offer in a nutshell. We cannot write it more simply than that. There are no hidden tricks or catches. You send in 10c, and in return you get a book worth $3.00 or more, on well-based opinion. At the same time we reserve the balance of a set in your name. No, you are not obliged to buy the remaining volumes. If you don't want them after examining your free book, you merely drop us a line cancelling your reservation and that is all. You keep the free volume anyway.

Why, then, aren't we flooded with requests? Maybe you can tell us. We'd certainly appreciate knowing the answer.

Here is what we have been thinking about what may have gone on in the reader's mind. None of it, however, satisfies us as being the right answer.

IS THIS THE TROUBLE?

Are you reluctant to send in 10c to cover the cost of mailing the book to you? That doesn't seem possible. The book is surely worth 10c, even if you decide against completing the set. But is that your reason? Then we withdraw the requirement. You can have the book without paying 10c. Just send in the coupon.

Do you think it possible that the remaining volumes of the set are not worth the small price we ask for them? Why worry about that now? You can decide that when you receive your free first volume. Look it over then and make up your mind. If you decide then that you don't want the rest of the set, just tell us so and that will end the matter finally and completely.

Are you averse to sending away for anything by mail? Well, this is certainly one time you ought to break that rule. Because you aren't GAMBLING anything by sending in. You aren't buying merchandise sight unseen. You aren't involving yourself in a lot of red tape in returning unwanted merchandise. You merely send in the coupon. You get your free book. You decide then whether you want the rest of the set. You have the opportunity then to get a really fine encyclopedia at a ridiculously low price.

MORE OBJECTIONS

Perhaps you now own an encyclopedia, and can see no reason for purchasing another. That may be good sense, depending on circumstances.

But have you ever considered whether your present encyclopedia fits your needs? We intend to send you, with your free Volume I, a booklet entitled "Which Encyclopedia Shall I Buy?" In it, a recognized expert on encyclopedias surveys the field, and we compare the four most popular encyclopedias, feature by feature. Some of the facts given will amaze you. They are facts you ought to know, fascinating in themselves, and an education in encyclopedia buying. You'll want this booklet even if you have no present intention at all of getting an encyclopedia.

Perhaps you have some other objection to accepting our offer. We suggest you think it over, and send off the coupon anyway. Certainly you have everything to gain, and nothing whatsoever to lose. Maybe the gold-piece is only plated, but we still insist it's gold—and all we want is to give it to you free.

First be sure to read the panel at the left, which tells you something about the encyclopedia, and about our unique book-a-week plan. Then print your name and address clearly on the coupon, indicate on it whether you want Regular or De Luxe Edition, and mail it off TODAY to UNICORN PRESS, 80 Willoughby St., Brooklyn 1, New York.

Some of the Amazing FACTS About the FUNK & WAGNALLS New Standard ENCYCLOPEDIA and the Unique Book-A-Week Plan . . .

THE new Fall 1944 Edition contains over 52,000 subjects, covered in separate articles. Compare this with any other encyclopedia in the world. You will find that it is at least 30% more than encyclopedias costing you up to six times as much as ours

Each volume (comprising about 500 double-columned pages) contains over a quarter of a million words—over 7,000,000 words in all—which will give you some idea of the completeness of coverage of each subject.

Each volume is as up-to-date as human ingenuity can make it. In this edition the subjects have been revised to cover events of last Summer, and each volume, as it goes to press, is brought finally up-to-the-minute. Our unique book-a-week delivery plan, bringing you the volumes almost as they come off the presses, makes it the most up-to-date of encyclopedias. Better still—later volumes, delivered to you during this Winter and Spring, will contain events which have not yet occurred!

EASY READING, AUTHORITATIVE, HANDY

Editor-in-Chief of the original edition was Frank H. Vizetelly, the beloved "Viz" of radio fame, and editor of the unexcelled Funk & Wagnalls New Standard (unabridged) Dictionary. Surrounded by a host of authorities in many fields, he brought the immense work into being.

But the books are easy to read! Your children in grammar and high school can read them, use them with profit. Free of technical detail, abstruse wording, and dry-as-dust-research-specialist attitude—and free also of concise, over-abbreviated, fact-omitting brevity—this grand encyclopedia will be your rainy-evening companion for many years to come.

And, in spite of its truly enormous contents, each volume can be held in one hand! Gone is the old-fashioned, bulky, cumbersome format—big, heavy books that easily drop and as easily break. Here is a new, streamlined, usable set that is attractive, interesting, and handy for daily reference.

Nor does the almost incredibly low price we have set on the remaining volumes indicate the quality of materials and labor that went into the printing and binding of the set. We have used a high-grade book paper, cover board, and binding cloth. The printing is crisp and clear-cut, and the work of binding has been done by one of the largest and best-known firms in the field. These are first quality books, as of course you will soon see for yourself.

UNIQUE, BOOK-A-WEEK PLAN

Our plan, which has been tested and approved by many thousands of appreciative purchasers, gives you the books almost as quickly as they come off the press.

The first few volumes are now on press. Volume I is delivered to you immediately. Two weeks later, unless you cancel your reservation after examining Volume I, the next two volumes are mailed to you. Two weeks after that the following two volumes are sent you, and so on. You thus receive your volumes, freshly off press, at the rate of a volume a week until you have received all 27 volumes of the complete set.

You do not pay for any books in advance. We enclose a bill with each two volumes, which you pay within five days after receiving the books. Considering the amazingly low price of the set, and the fact that you pay for it at the rate of only a book a week, our own pay-as-you-go plan therefore puts no strain at all on any pocketbook.

How much are the volumes? Here's the surprise. You pay only 89c per volume, plus 11c mailing cost. The complete set thus costs you only a small fraction of what other high grade encyclopedias would cost you—and we want only the opportunity to prove to you that ours is unexcelled for your use.

DE LUXE EDITION IF YOU PREFER

For those who desire an especially attractive binding for their bookshelves, we have prepared a de luxe edition that is specially handsome. The de luxe set is bound in dark blue, leather-grained material, stamped in red and gilt, with page-tops harmoniously stained, and with head and tailbands for added strength at the backbone. Endpapers and frontispieces are excellent reproductions in full color and ductone of woodcuts by Hans Alexander Mueller, world-renowned artist in that medium, the frontispieces being a collection of wood-cut portraits of American Presidents.

Remember that the contents of both Regular and De Luxe Editions are exactly the same—only the binding is different. Volume I in BOTH Editions, for instance, contains thirty-two full page maps in full color showing every state and nation in the world. Although you may have free Volume I in your choice of editions, the balance of the volumes in De Luxe Edition will cost you somewhat more ($1.39 per volume, plus 11c mailing cost) since they cost more to make.

Don't delay in sending for your free Volume I. There is still only a limited stock of these that we can give away, and we will supply these to those who apply first. Mail the coupon today to Unicorn Press, 80 Willoughby St., Brooklyn 1, New York.

UNICORN PRESS, Authorized Publishers,
80 Willoughby Street, Brooklyn 1, New York

I enclose 10c in coin or stamps, for which please send me Volume I of the new Fall 1944 Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Encyclopedia in the edition checked below.

☐ REGULAR ☐ DE LUXE

Please also reserve the balance of a set for me in the same edition.

If I decide to cancel the reservation after examining Volume I, I will write you saying so, and there will be no further obligation; otherwise you may send me two more volumes every two weeks, and I will pay within 5 days after receiving them, at the rate of 89c per volume plus 11c mailing cost for Regular Edition (or $1.39 per volume plus same mailing cost for De Luxe Edition)—and that is all!

Volume I is mine to keep in any event.

'Porgy and Bess' Returns Tomorrow for One Week

Many from the Original Cast Still in Opera

By Claudia Cassidy.

With almost every other theater in town pinned firmly down by long run shows, the Civic Opera house has such a parade of attractions you can scarcely blame the puzzled man at the ballet the other night who sat half way thru "Fancy Free" and then asked if he was seeing "Porgy and Bess." But the ballet shakes the resin off its shoes tonight, and Catfish Row takes over tomorrow night, tho even the complete balletomane who scorns all other entertainment might find it wise to linger long enough to watch Avon Long's sleek hophead way with Sportin' Life's "It Ain't Necessarily So." Ballet would be proud to claim that stylized rhythm.

Alexander Smallens.

"Porgy and Bess" is hardly news any more, except in that it remains good news. Back in 1925 DuBose Heyward wrote the novel "Porgy," and two years later he and his wife Dorothy turned it into the brilliant play still high in the list of Theater Guild triumphs. In 1935, just two years before his shockingly untimely death, George Gershwin set it to music, with lyrics by his brother Ira and Mr. Heyward. Some people acclaimed it the great American opera, others were less ecstatic. But every one admitted that the saga of Catfish Row had some unforgettable music and that it was brilliantly staged by Rouben Mamoulian. Financially it was less of a triumph, but Cheryl Crawford's revival could write off much of the original production cost, and it has toured the country repeatedly, triumphantly and doubly in the black.

Much of the cast remains unchanged, tho Anne Brown and Todd Duncan have gone into concert, relinquishing the title roles to Etta Moten and William Franklin, and Ruby Elzy, whose high sweet voice first sang "Summertime," is dead. But Edward Matthews, Georgette Harvey, Warren Coleman, the Eva Jessye choir, and many more have clung to "Porgy and Bess" as a career, and while Robert Ross is now the stage director, Alexander Smallens has remained faithful as conductor because he loves the score.

A pound of flesh ruined Shylock, but 20 times that much did wonders for Staff Sgt. Edmond O'Brien. Without it he might have remained true to type as a romantic lead in "Winged Victory," but with it he captured Irving, the taxicab driver from Brooklyn, just about the best role in the army air forces show, and if you don't know by this time that the show opens at the Civic Opera house Dec. 12, it will be a great shock to the army air forces from Gen. Arnold down, and to me.

SOLDIER SHOW

Elisabeth Fraser and Corp. John Andes, of the army air forces show, "Winged Victory," opening an engagement of five weeks at the Civic Opera house Tuesday evening, Dec. 12.

Perhaps you remember the O'Brien from thinner days in the movies or when he was a good Marc Antony in Orson Welles' modern dress "Julius Caesar" and a not quite so good Mercutio in the wafer thin Shakespeare offered by Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh as "Romeo and Juliet." Mr. Olivier is a reformed Shakespearean character nowadays, a director of London's Old Vic, along with Ralph Richardson, Sybil Thorndike, and Nicholas Hannen, scoring an acting hit of his own as Richard III. Sgt. O'Brien hasn't gone that far in the character direction, but he has no fault to find with stage life in the A. A. F. "Irving's an earthy, nice, variety guy," he says, already talking like Irving. "Moss Hart certainly wrote him true to life. I enjoy the part more than any other I have ever played."

You might think from this that the O'Briens grew in Brooklyn. Not so. It was New York's Harlem, where this one claims to be the seventh child of a seventh son. The family lived across the street from Houdini, who wore silk shirts and taught the neighborhood kids magic. As a result the Great Neirbo [spell it backwards] was a hit at schools and settlement houses. Spelled either way, O'Brien was stagestruck so he left college and got a job at a Chock Full O'Nut stand on 50th and Broadway, where at least he could look at actors.

Finally he got work at the Westport playhouse, where he had to help carry a bathtub across the stage. But the bathtub held Violet Heming, who was playing "Lady Godiva" with variations, and no one paid any attention to O'Brien. Next he got a small part in "Daughters of Atreus," and then in Welles' "Julius Caesar." Any magician could get a job with Welles, but O'Brien was a useful actor, too. "I played so many dope fiends on Orson's radio program," he says, "they nicknamed me Marijuana."

Elmer Kenyon, courier for Helen Hayes in "Harriet," which displaces "Oklahoma!" at the Erlanger Jan. 8, loses no time telling me that the fact Miss Hayes has an idea for a modern comedy doesn't mean she is sick of the times and costumes of Harriet Beecher Stowe. In fact, he says she loves the part and will keep right on loving it until the tour ends in June, 1945. It was not my intention to give you the idea that Miss Hayes must shake off boredom every time she steps on stage, but what do you bet that of a Saturday night when for the seventh time that week she struggles out of Mrs. Stowe's voluminous wardrobe, she thinks, maybe, just once but wistfully, of a little Hattie Carnegie or Valentina number with a zipper?

Her show, by the way, is being asked for at the boxoffices of the country as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and even "My Aunt Hattie." And according to Mr. Kenyon, "In Toronto they [the customers] were interested in the fact that the original of Uncle Tom is buried in Dresden, Ont., where he died at the age of 94! For the autobiography of his very interesting actual life, Mrs. Stowe wrote the introduction."

Is there such a thing as gratitude? I ask you and I reply. No, there is not. After all my trouble about "The Voice of the Turtle," in comes this postcard, signed "Reader": "In regard to people wanting to know what the title 'The Voice of the Turtle' has to do with the play. Do you understand the turtle to be a mud turtle or a turtle dove? And does either one have a voice? I don't think you answered the question at all in your column. Why don't you look up the answer?"

Now listen, Reader, I don't have the space to quote the whole Song of Solomon, tho it would be a vast improvement on the prose that fills this column. John Van Druten has gone back to New York or maybe Hollywood, cravenly refusing to write a blanket reply on a title he must have picked up just to plague people. On my word of honor it's a turtle dove, quoting Solomon again, to wit: "O, my dove, that art in the clefts of the rock, in the secret places of the stairs, let me see thy countenance, let me hear thy voice." If you want to take it up with Solomon, try a good medium. Mr. Van Druten and I have sealed our lips with silence.

THE HIDDEN TOWN

By FREDERICK R. BECHDOLT

(Copyright: 1944: By F. R. Bechdolt.)

INSTALMENT XV.

SO HARVEY rode on by, within a few yards of the spot where Nell was hiding when she heard the soft thud of the roan's hoofs; and he was nearly half way thru the wood when the big horse shied so violently that it nearly unseated him. It was bucking like an unbroken colt before he recovered a lost stirrup and for several minutes after that he was too busy riding to look about him. It wasn't until he had pulled the animal's head up that he saw Eddie's body. He had never cherished a good opinion of Eddie Morton, but he had never taken the lawyer seriously until he heard Pete's story. Ever since he had left the old Vaquero at the forks of the road he had been filled with a violent longing to confront this worthless son of the man who had defended Nell's father against the old murder charge. Now the sight of that dead form left him sick with misapprehension.

He leaped from the saddle and dropped on his knees beside the body. He remained there long enough to turn it over. The wound between the shoulders told its own story. And that story tied up with Ursula—or with her man Andreas. But the identity of Eddie's murderer wasn't disturbing him. The appalling fact which confronted him was the presence of the dead man in this spot, and the faint imprint of wheels in the pine needles, leading on toward the lower canyon. He knew that these tracks had been left by the car which Pete had seen with Nell at the wheel, when she had picked up Eddie Morton.

He was back in the saddle a moment later, urging the roan into the thickening smoke clouds. The fumes were so dense that everything was growing black before him. The hot breath of the flames was searing his face. The roan was a well broken horse, but it was thoroly terrified now. If it hadn't wheeled when it did and dashed back up the road, the rider would have been completely overcome within the next few minutes. As it was, he barely held his seat. They were near the upper end of the grove and they were on the hillside above the road before he was able to rein up to a walk. He realized that whatever had happened in these woods was the sequel to something which had taken place below the line of flames. Then he remembered the suddenness with which that red light had mounted skyward while he and Pete Escobar were talking less than half an hour ago. And he knew that even in these dry hills only one thing could set a fire to going with such speed. An exploding tank of gasoline. The sedan must have gone over the bank.

It was as near to despair as he came during that wild evening. He was about to see death sweeping upon him in a very short time, but the knowledge of its nearness was to be as nothing compared to the probability that Nell had died down there in the canyon bed.

The roan was making little cat hops, throwing its head and fighting the bit. They were pretty well up the hillside, near the edge of the trees, and the chaparral above them was blazing furiously. The smoke was drifting away from them. The animal wheeled. The red light of the flames was behind them now. Harvey was facing downhill and he was in the act of reining the horse around when he saw Nell.

She was standing behind a large pine, peering through the trees toward the spot where Eddie Morton's body lay; she was so intent that she did not hear the roan trampling the short brush until it was almost upon her.

Harvey swung from the saddle. She had not taken time to look around. She was running from him. He dropped the reins and the wind veered at that moment. He had a brief glimpse of her, a tiny figure fleeing through the trees, then she was hidden in a cloud of black smoke. He called her name. There was no sound except the rushing noise of the flames in the chamisal above them. He called again and he heard her answer. He must have overrun her, for her voice came from behind him. He turned and he was groping blindly toward the spot whence the sound had come when she appeared before him.

She was in his arms. He felt the softness of her body and the grip of her small hands upon his shoulders. He heard himself saying:

"It's all right now, kid."

Her head was resting on his chest, she drew it back and looked up into his eyes. She said:

"I need you so!"

He held her closer, he stroked her hair. It was unbelievable that he had her safe, that he could feel her in the crook of his arm. And when he answered her his voice was heavy with self-accusation.

"I never should have left you alone. I never will again."

Then he remembered how soon he must break that promise—and that he didn't even know to what far corner of the earth the journey was going to take him, or to what dangers. And he read it in her eyes that the irrevocable fact of the coming parting had occurred.

The cloud of smoke had drifted away. They were seeing each other plainly for the first time since he had found her. They were silent for a few moments, but their understanding was more complete than any words could have made it. He bent his head and their lips met.

"It won't be like it was today when you go the next time," she told him quietly.

And he gave himself a silent pledge that it would not—that he would make sure of this, no matter what he might have to go through with before his leave was up.

"No," he repeated the words after her. "It won't be like it was today. I can't take you with me, but we belong to each other now. And I'm not going to leave you in danger either. I will settle this business with old Yardley myself, if it's necessary. But I don't think it will be—not with what we know about him."

"You've found out something?" she cried.

"He drove Eddie Morton out to the place where you picked him up," Harvey said, "and waited to see that he carried out the plan. We haven't time to talk it over. We've got to clear out of this before that fire gets into the treetops." He saw the change that came into her face then. "Dear heart, don't be afraid. We'll make this all right." He drew her to him and he kissed her lips. He said:

"I didn't tell you that I love you, did I? Well, that has to wait, too. I've got to catch up my horse. He's all I have to carry you home."

She clung to him. She brought her lips close to his ear. She wanted to tell him of Andreas and her danger, she wanted to beg him not to leave her. But she knew that time was precious, so she whispered, "I love you," and she let him go then. It was the hardest thing she had ever done, for the roan had strayed far up the hill and it was nearly out of sight. As he started after it, he heard her call "I'm not afraid."

He looked back, she raised her hand and waved him on. It was a brave gesture and the picture of her remained with him, a tiny figure among the thick trunks of the pines with the light of the flames shining upon her and the red reflection of the smoke cloud above her fair head.

The roan had halted near the edge of the timber and it was arching its neck, it was swinging its head from side to side, blowing loudly. A tall rank of flames was marching up the bank of a gully into a thicket of chamisal a hundred feet or so above it. Harvey slowed down and began easing toward its side. He was reaching for the dangling reins. His fingers were about to close upon them, when the fire leaped up into the tops of the dry bushes.

That brush was all of 10 feet high and the flames had the rise of the bank with them. At the same moment the updraft from the lower canyon got sudden strength through some quirk of the wind. The thing which followed took place so suddenly that it was over before Harvey's fingers closed.

It was the same thing that happens when a ground fire becomes a crown fire: a hissing rush that swelled to a roar; a shriek that soared skyward on a red column which spewed showers of sparks and blazing brands in all directions. The back draft sucked in toward the spot; a brief tornado of overheated air.

It struck Harvey from behind. It flung him upon his face and left him lying stunned.

He did not know how long he had been here. He only knew that he was in black darkness, that he was fighting to get back to the light, and that the struggle seemed to be going on for hours. It was in reality a matter of two or three minutes before he got to his feet. The torrent of flames had ebbed for lack of feed. The horse was gone. He staggered down the hill toward the spot where he had left Nell. He found two strands of tarred rope; they were dangling from the twigs of a toyon bush. And that was all.

The big horse shied so violently that it nearly unseated him.

Nell was watching Harvey while he climbed the hill toward the roan horse. Her eyes were still upon him when he stretched out his arm to seize the dangling reins, but she did not see the thing which happened to him.

Then she was seized with that unreal paralysis of fear which seems to stop the heart and stiffen every limb, for she was sure that Andreas had found her. She was trying to scream and her voice would not obey her. She was striving to turn her head and it would not move. It was the same terrible sensation of arrested motion which one goes through in a nightmare, the feeling of time's passing while one tries vainly to act or speak. The scream left her lips at last. It was drowned in the shriek of the flames on the hillside. She turned around. It was not Andreas whom she saw. It was old Ursula.

The boughs of the pine trees up the hill were bending to the backdraught of the fire. Ursula's ragged skirt was whipping about her great thighs. Her brawny arms shot out. Her calloused hands clamped down on Nell's throat.

She was all Indian. She hadn't any of Eddie Morton's sophistication, but she was sharp and she had more facts to go on than he had possessed. The golden visions which had come to her when Harvey told her Nell's name weren't as large as Eddie's had been, but they were more attainable. Ursula had been searching the woods in a frenzy of fear, and now that she had stumbled on her quarry she was still frightened by the realization of how near she had been to sending the girl to her death.

She said, "You do not mak' any noise now or I choke you until you die."

The roan horse snorted loudly and the sound of galloping hoofs came through the smoke clouds. A tree at the lower end of the grove shrieked as the flames soared toward its crown. The smoke turned a deeper red and the pine needles were dyed crimson. Andreas was running along the hillside when he caught sight of the women. He darted down the slope and Ursula raised one hand. She put her finger to her lips. Andreas stared at the two of them.

"You saw him?" Ursula murmured. He nodded.

"It was down the road. His horse was bucking. The dead man scared it. I heard it again just now."

Andreas pointed up the hill.

"We do not talk," Ursula bade him. "We take her back to the car and we drive to Escondido."

"But why——" Andreas began. She silenced him with a fierce gesture. She said:

"See now."

She drew her big fist back and she struck, all in one smooth, unbroken movement. The blow went straight to Nell's slender jaw, the fair hair stirred to its shock. Ursula nodded at her man. She said:

"You carry her, and do not hurt her, Andreas. Put her in the car and wait for me. I go ahead." She was running on before him, and he was bending to lift the inert body. She halted abruptly and faced around.

"He will stay here and hunt for her," she said. "You must not start the car until I come to you, or he will hear it."

She darted off and she was vanishing among the pines at the upper side of the clearing long before Andreas reached the car with his burden. She went on up the road until she reached a spot where the hills drew close on either side. The fire had crept along both ridges beyond this point, and it was spreading downward as it came. A thicket of young pines grew on both sides of the road here. It spanned most of the distance between the ridges. She dropped on her knees, and she was busy for a few moments, scraping pitch soaked needles into a little heap. Then she struck a match and the pile exploded into flames.

It took her some time to finish the work. She was panting like a spent dog and her face was masked with perspiration when she lighted the last pile of needles. From either side of the roadway an unbroken line of flames already stretched half way up the hill. She ran back to the car.

Nell had recovered her senses. She was sitting beside Andreas and he had thrown one arm around her, pinioning her arms to her body. She was struggling silently to free herself when Ursula sprang into the seat.

"Let her go, Andreas." She seized the girl and shook her violently. "Be still, you!"

Andreas pressed the starter and the racketing of the old motor rose above the noises of the fire.

"You must drive fast," Ursula cried. "And do not kill the engine. Three minutes from now nobody gets out of this place."

She had done a good job of arson. When the battered old car clattered up the grade to the spot where she had been working, the smoke was so dense, the flames were so high, that it looked for a few momemts as if they were not going to get thru.

Ursula was right when she said that Harvey would stay in the wood and hunt for Nell, and if it had not been for the two strands of tarred rope he would not have learned what was going on at the upper end of the clearing until it was too late. Andreas had picked them up before he started in pursuit of Nell, and he had dropped them again when he carried her away. To Harvey they were mute evidence that some one had come here since he left, and that meant either Ursula or her man.

So he was hurrying up the road and he was almost in sight of the clearing when he ran across the roan horse. The animal was badly frightened, and Harvey was still trying to catch it when he heard the clatter of the motor. He managed to seize the reins a moment later. He swung into the saddle and he reached the lower edge of the clearing just as the car was leaving the other end.

He was barely able to distinguish the three forms in the driver's seat before it was out of sight. But he saw that two of those passengers were women, and they were struggling with each other. He shouted as he clapped his heels to the roan's flanks. The racketing of the old jalopie was still audible beyond the barrier of flames which halted it a few seconds later. The fire was still near the upper edge of the thicket. The wind was opposing it, for the main conflagration beyond the lower end of the clearing was rising to the tree tops now, creating a mighty draught of its own.

In itself, this minor fire was no threat. It would burn out as soon as it reached the upper end of the clearing. But the other down there in the woods where Eddie Morton's body lay was already becoming a crown fire, and it was only a matter of a few minutes now before the clearing would be as hot as the interior of a blast furnace. Harvey dismounted and the roan started pulling back on the reins.

Every so often those audiences who like B class pictures are given a scene where a western rider, caught in some perilous stress, talks to his horse. And it is a fact that the soundness of these melodramatic bits depends only on the lines which the actor speaks, for there isn't a cowboy or a vaquero worth his salt who hasn't indulged in those little monologs at one time or another. Harvey eased back alongside the roan. He patted its shoulder. He said:

"Stick with me, Old Kid. We're in a jackpot, but we're going to get out of it."

What Has Gone Before

Nell Huntoon writes to Edward Morton Jr. to review a murder charge against her dead father. Eddie is in financial difficulties and decides if he can incriminate Yardley, a banker known as the Alcalde, it will mean ready money. Yardley has a fear the past will catch up with him. Anthrax is prevalent in the hills. Yardley forces Ursula to get him wool from a dead sheep. At a service station Nell meets Beulah Smith; Harvey Little, son of the man her father was accused of killing, and Anastasia Rodriguez. The service station man is killed by a hit-and-run driver. Anastasia picks up something from the road. Anastasia demands $500 from Eddie for the metal hub cap from his car. Nell is prevented from drinking the poisoned spring water by Harvey. Nell and Beulah see a prospector, with two burros, whom Beulah had grubstaked 20 years ago. After killing the Mexican with Yardley's hammer Eddie meets Nell. Eddie ties the body to one of the burros with a rope taken from Harvey's car. From his window Yardley sees Eddie and the burro pass by. Arming himself, he follows, watches Eddie stow the body in the trunk of Harvey's car. He demands the hub cap and car keys and orders Eddie to bring the hammer to him. At daybreak, after reopening the trunk and placing the keys in Harvey's car, Yardley notifies the sheriff. Pete Escobar, up in the hills, sees Yardley's strange actions. Pete Escobar warns Harvey and tells him there is one man who can send Yardley to the gas chamber. Harvey takes Pete's horse and heads into the hills to find the man. Yardley overhears Nell telling Eddie of the Alcalde's attempt to poison her. Yardley realizes Eddie knows too much and arranges with Ursula and Andreas for the murder of Eddie after Eddie has disposed of Nell, but plans misquery.

Free TO NEW MEMBERS —Every FATHER BROWN Mystery G.K.Chesterton Ever Wrote—

50 STORIES COMPLETE IN ONE VOLUME!

The Best-Loved DETECTIVE of Them All!
NOW YOURS IN—

The Father Brown Omnibus

HAVE you ever met Father Brown? If so, there's nothing more we can say to tell you what a wonderful sleuth he is. But if you haven't yet been introduced to this innocent-looking, rotund figure in black, you're in for one of the grandest reading adventures of your life. He's razor-keen, genial, delightfully whimsical. He's a really swell individual!

A "Sheep" the Wolves Are Afraid Of!

You'll be enthralled watching Father Brown pit his ingenuity against some of the canniest culprits ever caught between the covers of a book—(or, in fact, five books, since this volume is actually five books put into one)! You'll be all the more fascinated because this mild-mannered little man seems to be so out of place in the wolfish, sordid world of crime; so pathetically "helpless" as he plunges into a maelstrom of vice. But don't waste your sympathy! He can track down "the perfect crime" more relentlessly than your most hard-boiled sleuth — and while he's doing it, he throws in plenty of heart-warming chuckles to boot!

Follow Father Brown's soft footsteps as he pokes his nose (and umbrella) into a world of intriguing people—noblemen and knaves, gamblers and ghosts, actors and admirals. Meet a poet who likes opium, a coin collector with a crooked nose, and a dog that helps the mild-mannered detective solve a murder. See if you can keep up with his deductions as he comes to deadly grips with an assortment of miscreants, mountebanks and murderers who will have your hair on end. Hold your breath as he gets in and out of tight spots—including his own coffin!

We would very much like to welcome you as a new member of The Detective Book Club. And as a new-member gift we will send you, FREE, a copy of THE FATHER BROWN OMNIBUS. It contains every Father Brown detective story that G. K. Chesterton ever wrote.

Here's What You Get

THE FATHER BROWN OMNIBUS —five volumes in one containing 1,000 pages—is brand new, just published. It is selling everywhere right now for $3.00. But we want to GIVE you a copy ABSOLUTELY FREE—to show you the kind of A-1, cream-of-the-crop mysteries you can get every month from the Detective Book Club.

Each month this Club offers to its members an attractive triple volume containing THREE modern detective books—for the usual price of only ONE! And EACH of the three is a complete, full-length novel.

How This Club Brings You The Best Mysteries

Do you realize that about 300 new detective books are published every year? You can't read them all. It's hard to find the best. But if a mystery is by an author like Erle Stanley Gardner, Frances and Richard Lockridge, Dorothy B. Hughes, William Irish, Frances Crane, Carter Dickson, or Anthony Abbot, it's sure to be good! All of these and many other famous writers have had their books selected by The Detective Book Club. Many are members of the Club themselves!

Why You're Sure to Enjoy "Father Brown"

ELLERY QUEEN—"Father Brown is one of the few characters in all fiction who—through his humanity, sagacity, personal charm and credible genius—is likely to survive the fickle years."

AGATHA CHRISTIE—"Father Brown has always been one of my favorite sleuths."

Boston Symphony to Play Here Twice This Week on the Aisle

by Claudia Cassidy

LIBBY HOLMAN'S concert at the Civic theater tonight, with Josh White, the Negro guitarist, won't be a formal concert, but a session of early American and other blues, sung in a setting meant to simulate the back stoop of an old Negro shack, with a woman seated on a low stool, silhouetted against the light, while at her feet a man strums a guitar. "This is real Americana," says Miss Holman, who may or may not persuade you to agree with her. "I can't endure Tin Pan Alley melodies, and I don't think I'm suited for opera or so-called classical numbers. But these songs I do feel are in my voice. They have an entirely different approach—they are pure native. Just songs that grew while the people who sang them toiled, and grieved, and laughed. They have a range of two octaves, with queer intervals and keys that keep changing at all sorts of odd times. You can't really put them over unless you relax. That's why I sing most of them sitting down."

British Criticism of Noel Coward.

All the hullabaloo about Noel Coward's "Middle East Diary" is not entirely confined to the United States, by way of Brooklyn. Considerably more than a month ago Ivor Brown was reviewing it in a London newspaper and a clipping came to me, marked, "Rather too cruel, don't you think?" Mr. Brown wasn't annoyed for the same reasons that have set Americans in a rage, but he was plenty annoyed. He said that Mr. Coward, no doubt, had done a lot of hard work on his trip, adding, "But his record also suggests that there are a number of the Best People having Quite a Good War amid the elegance and extravagance of Cairo, whither the gin-and-brouhaha of the smart cocktail party seems to have removed from our dusty, shabby, and enduring London." He continues, "Coward remains a puzzle. He sees so much—and so little. He has traveled far more than most men of his age, and yet, when he writes, it always has to be of the same little world. Dump him anywhere, on any island of the 17 seas, and he would certainly at once run into somebody known as Tim or Tiny, Boodle or Bims, and be dining with an Excellency or an Admiral 20 minutes later. If there were natives on the island he would hardly notice. God put them there, no doubt, to serve dinners to Excellencies." And, again, "If Cairo stinks, as Coward suggests, why not say so, instead of faintly complaining about a partial lack of taste? One has the feeling that Coward simply cannot bring himself to slap a Notable, even gently, on the wrist."

The Little Flower was more blunt, but I wouldn't say more devastating. Still, this is the same Noel Coward who has a theater flair almost unique in his time, the man who wrote "Cavalcade" as well as "Design for Living," and whose saga of a destroyer had no illusions about the grimness of war. Maybe, like a lot of people, he writes too much too often, and then wishes he hadn't.

More Clippings from London.

Anyway, don't expect the English and the American to understand each other completely, even in basic English. Here is the same Ivor Brown trying to make Londoners understand what our stage does to epigrams. He says, "It markets a verbal article which, I gather, is called the nifty." I forgive Mr. Brown at once, because he writes of "Hamlet" that "the words were to be spoken for sound and sense, not gabbled for speed or muttered as tho the text had got in by mistake and needed snubbing." That's putting the "seketree" business in its place.

Still other London excerpts from letters and clippings indicate a success for Robert Helpmann's new ballet, "Miracle in the Gorbals," with music by Arthur Bliss and Helpmann a Christlike figure in realistic Glasgow slums, and theater triumphs for Olivier's "Richard III," and John Gielgud's "Hamlet," and his revival of "The Circle," with Yvonne Arnaud and Leslie Banks. I wish I had space to tell you all about the Sadler's Wells revival of the full "Swan Lake," which cost £6,000 and sounds lovely, with a midnight blue garden opening off a ballroom, with muslin skirts over blues, lavenders, and pinks, white plumes, silver jewels, mazurka dancers in hoopskirts of Camargo length and decorations of scarlet and emerald, while Odile wore a black tutu with huge designs in gold.

This same letter discusses Tudor's "Judgment of Paris," saying it is treated there as comedy, not satire, and so loses its pathos. It goes on, "But still Tudor keeps to the same theme that has dominated all his success, that almost Proustian atmosphere of misunderstandings, shattered ideals, and hopeless nostalgia. I wonder, when he gets all this out of his system, if we shall get ballets on different subjects, or if it will prove to be all that is in his system?" That's provocative challenge, Mr. Tudor, tho please understand I don't mind in the least if you never change.

But all this will make Americans a bit jealous. Our classic theater is at a standstill and ballet is dipping back into revival. The Ballet Russe has acquired Ruth Page's "Frankie and Johnny," Ballet International bought "Hitch Your Wagon to a Star," and Ballet Theater may take Massine's charming "Fantasie Poetique," danced here last summer. All this is all right, but how about more classic ballet and good revivals of the major symphonic ballets? Ballet cannot afford to slip into the trivial class, just to entertain the casual customer. The balletomane isn't satisfied without classic dancing in the grand style.

Fausto Cleva and Puccini.

But how about an opera story in a column almost at the bottom of the page? It hinges on Chicago's pleasure in Fausto Cleva's conducting of Verdi and Puccini and goes back to Italy quite a lot of years ago. Cleva, just 17, had told every one he was a dignified 20 at the opera house in Milan, where he suddenly had to conduct "Tosca" when Marinuzzi was ill. Puccini was in the house. Next day Puccini telephoned, saying, "Come to see me at once." Cleva went, trembling. Puccini opened a page of the score, at the duet of Tosca and Scarpia, and demanded, "Why did you conduct that passage ritenuto when it is clearly marked a tempo?" Cleva admitted his sin, saying he had "felt it that way," and promised never to do it again. Puccini chuckled and said, "Ricordi wouldn't reprint that page in the score just to correct one mistake. You keep right on conducting it ritenuto."

First Concert Friday; Other Next Sunday

Being off the main touring circuit of the great major orchestras of the eastern seaboard, Chicago will have its first opportunity in five years to welcome the Boston Symphony orchestra under its famous conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, when that organization appears here in two concerts. The first will be at Orchestra hall on Friday at 8:15; the second will be in the History and Enjoyment of Music series at the Civic Opera house next Sunday afternoon at 3:30.

Under Mr. Koussevitzky's direction the Boston Symphony has attained a unique position in the world of symphonic music for the perfection and quality of its playing, and for the amount of music by contemporary composers it has sponsored. Mr. Koussevitzky recently celebrated the completion of his 20th year as conductor of the Boston Symphony and also observed another anniversary this summer, his 70th birthday.

Koussevitzky's ministrations in the cause of contemporary music have made musical history. He not only has played for the first time the works of such composers as Debussy, Ravel, Stravinsky, Prokofieff, and such modern Americans as Aaron Copland, Walter Piston, William Schuman, and George Gershwin, but used his private fortune to found a publishing firm so that the music of these composers might have wider circulation, and in recent years formed the Koussevitzky Foundation, in memory of his wife, Nathalie Koussevitzky, which commissions new compositions from promising young composers. His work as an educator in connection with the summer concerts of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood in the Berkshires also has been notable.

On the Friday program Mr. Koussevitzky will lead his orchestra in two symphonies, the "Eroica" of Beethoven and the Fifth of Shostakovich. Next Sunday's program will be more popular in character, with Tschaikowsky's Fifth symphony as its main number, and including Berlioz' "Carnival Romain" overture, Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" suite.

The Ukranian Women's Chorus of Chicago will give a concert in Kimball hall tonight at 8. The soloists will be Alexander Kulpak, bass; Lillian Opychany, soprano, and Helen Mazurick, mezzo-soprano.

• • •

Libby Holman, once a star of revues and night clubs as a "torch singer," will make her concert debut at the Civic theater tonight at 8:30 in a program of early American "blues," assisted by Josh White on the guitar. Tho her program states that "the enjoyment of blues, like other folk music, centers around performance, rather than in composition or title," the names of some of her selections are of interest: "Good Morning Blues," "On Top of Ole Smokey," "Why Don't You Do Right?", "Back Water Blues," "In the Evenin'," "The Riddle Song," "Ration Song," "Evil Hearted Me," "Baby, Baby," and "House of the Rising Sun." Josh White is said to be one of the greatest Negro guitarists of the day and taught many of the songs to Miss Holman.

CONDUCTOR

Serge Koussevitzky, distinguished conductor of the Boston orchestra, which appears in concert at Orchestra hall Friday night, and at the Civic Opera house next Sunday afternoon.

'Late George Apley' Is a Delightful Comedy Hit

Leo Carroll Turns in Top Performance

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK—[Special].—Altho I have great respect for the tributary theater—the community playhouses and the part time acting groups—it always has been my contention that the Broadway theater be left to professionals.

No better example of what I mean can be had than a pair of new shows, "The Late George Apley" and "Rhapsody." The former is a satisfying, delightful hit; the latter is a monumental hunk of junk.

Altho several well known folk are involved in "Rhapsody"—Fritz Kreisler, for instance, has contributed some of his best and most familiar tunes—there is an inescapable air of amateurishness about it, and this I must put down to Mrs. Lorraine Manville Dresselhuys, socialite sister of Tommy Manville, who is co-producer and chief angel of the show.

The cost of "Rhapsody" is reported in various quarters as running anywhere from $200,000 to $320,000. Scenically it is swell; its costumes are grand, and its principals include such experts in their fields as Annamary Dickey, Rosemarie Brancato, Patricia Bowman, and George Zoritch. But as a piece of theater it fails because of one of the dullest, most disconnected books that ever stretched between songs.

Since the Kreisler music has more than a touch of Viennese in it—a good number has been made out of the Caprice Viennois, for instance—it has been the whim of the authors, Leonard Louis Levinson, Arnold Sundgaard, and A. N. Nagler, to set the action in the reign of Maria Teresa. The Emperor Francis I. is supposed to be a comedian, and so is Casanova, but they are hopelessly unfunny. The Metropolitan Opera's Miss Dickey has beauty and style as well as a voice in the role of the empress.

The best of "Rhapsody" is the dancing staged by David Lichine. His numbers are fresh and lively and, being not too terribly arty, are the best that have appeared this season. Patricia Bowman is an uncommonly expert ballerina even if she never did get around to seeing a numerologist about adopting a Russian name, and a new lad named Jerry Ross scores with a splendid solo number. Lichine was far less happy in staging the book.

On the expert side of this morning's ledger we have such names as Max Gordon, John P. Marquand, George S. Kaufman, and Leo G. Carroll, each one of whom has proved time and again that he knows his job.

Producer Gordon has been known to pick a flop, but not often, and "The Late George Apley" is in the wow division. Marquand, who first wrote the story as a prize winning novel, has worked with Kaufman on making it into a play, and the combination is as felicitous as scotch with soda. Kaufman, both as co-adapter and as director, could have made "Apley" seem more like a Kaufman play than a Marquand work, but he has had the grace and the intelligence not to do so. On the stage "Apley" has all the quiet bite, all the gently murderous humor the book had, and it stands by itself as a play.

Already this season there have been many admirable acting performances: Mady Christians in "I Remember Mama," Frank Fay in "Harvey," Ethel Barrymore in "Embezzled Heaven" among them, and now, with Leo G. Carroll as Mr. Apley, we have perhaps the best of them.

Carroll, a Britisher who first arrived here in Noel Coward's "The Vortex," always has presented impeccable stage portraits, but not until now has he had a leading role of consequence. My first vivid memory of him is as the butler, Trump, in "The Green Bay Tree." More recently he was the detective in "Angel Street."

Speaking of the "Angel Street" performance, in which he was a comforting, amiable sleuth, Carroll once told me it was difficult for him to convey amiability across the footlights because he had "a face like a flag on a still day."

This dour face is just right for the head of the house of Apley, a family of Boston Brahmins who have never recognized the existence of anything beyond Beacon st. The time is now 1912 and George, living in a tiny, snobbish world of meetings of the Boston waifs and the bird watchers and such, is momentarily taken aback when his son and daughter get a little experimental.

The daughter, for instance, falls in love with a visiting Harvard lecturer who comes from Greenwich Village and reads Freud. When George reads Freud he exclaims to his wife that it appears that "sex very largely governs the lives of the people—in other parts of the country."

The son falls in love with the daughter of a high class junk dealer from Worcester, of all places. For a moment George Apley veers toward being human, but recovers the family aplomb almost in time. The daughter does manage to marry her outlander, but the son is shipped to Europe just in time, exactly as was George Apley the time he fell in love with a cop's daughter.

In an epilog of the comedy one sees George's son, wearing a black sleeve band in mourning for his now departed parent, in George's club, well on the way to being as big a snob as his father had been.

Carroll's performance is, as I say, no less than superb. It is dry, tightly contained, wonderfully, cynically humorous. It is backed by players of great ability, like Percy Waram as an in-law who manages to remain human in Beacon st., Janet Beecher as Mrs. Apley, and Reynolds Evans as another stuffed shirt. Stewart Chaney's sets and costumes are just right.

In "The Late George Apley" we have the best comedy of manners in several seasons.

BRO. RITZ

Harry Ritz is one of the three reasons the Latin Quarter is doing a record breaking business these nights. Frankie Masters' band helps, too.

Drama Notes

It must give Robert Warwick a chuckle to be rediscovered, as he was the other night when Lee Shubert saw "Ten Little Indians" at the Harris and signed its best actor to a three year contract. Mr. Warwick has been an actor for a long time and he made the transition from matinée idol to character favorite with the skill of an expert. Almost an opera singer—at least he studied for opera in Paris, then changed his mind—Mr. Warwick once shared a stage dressing room with John Barrymore and Thomas Meighan. California born, he was a stage favorite long before he went to Hollywood, appearing with Mary Mannering, Mrs. Leslie Carter, Virginia Harned, Grace George, and Ina Claire. However, he has been in many films, from "A Tale of Two Cities" to the current "Kismet," in which he appeared with Ronald Colman, who once appeared with him in the stage play, "Dauntless Three."

Robert Warwick.

"Oklahoma!" will be 500 performances old at the Erlanger Tuesday night. In terms of its own scoring it is 55 down with five to play. Meaning it will have run off 60 weeks when the Theater Guild tears it from our midst Jan. 6.

• • •

You may not see any outside lights at the Civic theater the week of Dec. 18, but inside will be quite another story. The cast of "The Glass Menagerie" will be in rehearsal, and Jo Mielziner, just released from camouflage work, will be here to light and adjust his scenery. Altho the show opens Christmas night, previews will start on Friday, the 22d, because the Tennessee Williams play will be having its first performance anywhere. The cast includes Eddie Dowling, who hopes to develop the engagement into repertory; Laurette Taylor, Julie Haydon, and Robert Stevenson. The director is Margo Jones, a girl from Dallas, who is said to have talked to John D. Rockefeller half an hour and emerged with $2,000,000 backing for a professional Dallas theater that ought to do Texas proud. She has a 10 year plan which hopes to develop authors, actors, directors, and designers.

• • •

Altho Sydney Baker, former first trumpet of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, is no longer in the "Winged Victory" orchestra, the army air forces show has clung to some of the better known singers in its choir. Organized by Lt. Leonard de Paur, formerly choral director of the Hall Johnson group, the choir rehearses two hours a day. Among its better known singers are Corp. Eugene Conley, former leading tenor of the San Carlo opera; Sgt. Emanuel Rosenberg, formerly with the Lynn Murray and Morton Gould choral groups; Corp. John Lawlor, who has a post-war contract with the Metropolitan opera; Corp. Don Richards of the stage; Sgt. Del Arden, heard in "Showboat"; Sgt. George Griffin, Radio City music hall soloist, and half a dozen more.

Music News

Four winners of the scholarship awards by the Chicago Artists association will be presented in recital at Kimball hall on Tuesday at 8:15. The recitalists will be the four young artists given highest ratings by the judges out of 80 contestants: Jean Nichols, soprano; Franklin A. Burke, dramatic reader; Richard Feinberg, pianist, and Fred Hoeppner, cellist.

Louis Crowder, chairman of the piano department of Northwestern university school of music, will give his first piano recital here in Kimball hall tomorrow night at 8:20. He will play Mozart's Fantasia in C minor, seven sonatas by Scarlatti, Brahms' Variations on a theme by Schumann, Opus 9, Chopin's Sonata in B minor, and Albeniz' "El Puerto" and "El Albaicin."

The Trapp Family Singers, consisting of the Baroness von Trapp, her seven daughters and the family priest, Father Franz Wasner, who serves as conductor of the group, will appear in the Chicago metropolitan area three times during the coming week. This afternoon at 3:30, at Orchestra hall, the singers will give one of their intimate concerts in Tyrolean costumes, singing a variety of concerted music and playing on such archaic instruments as the recorder and the virginal. This afternoon's concert will be under the auspices of St. Ignatius alumni. Tomorrow night the Trapps will appear on the Winnetka Music club course at New Trier High school in a Christmas program, and next Sunday afternoon they again will appear at 3:30 in Orchestra hall under the George A. Kuyper management in a Christmas party program replete with Christmas tree and an all-Christmas musical program.

Mary Lou Huneryager, a 14 year old soprano, will make her debut in recital at Kimball hall Friday, Dec. 15, at 8:15.

• • •

Nancy Silsbee, a young Ohio pianist, will make her debut here in recital at the Civic theater this afternoon at 3:30. Her program lists Bach's Partita No. 6, in E minor, Schubert's Sonata in A major, Debussy's "La Terasse des Audiences du Clair du Lune" and "Feux d'Artifice," Ravel's "Alborada del Gracioso," and a Sonata by the American composer, Charles Griffes.

• • •

Christmas would not be Christmas without "Hansel and Gretel." Accordingly Miss Helen Howe, director of music of the Chicago board of education, will sponsor two performances of the Humperdinck opera at the Civic Opera house on the afternoons of Sunday and Monday, Dec. 24 and 25, at 3. Edwin McArthur, who last appeared here as conductor of the Chicago Opera's "Die Walküre," will be the musical director. The role of Hansel will be sung by Maria Matyas, who already has 100 performances of the role to her credit. The Gretel will be Eunice Steen Lamont, and a mother and daughter will sing the roles of the Witch and the Dew Fairy—Dorothee Manski, and her 21 year old daughter, Inge, who is a member of the Chicago Opera company. Algerd Brazis will be the father, Ilma Bayle the mother, and Mary Kampo the Sandman. The ballet of the angels will be directed by Carla Bradley, and the chorus of gingerbread children is being trained by Zerline Muhlmann Metzger. Seats in the lower price brackets for the first and second balconies will be held for elementary school students until Dec. 9, after which they will be included in the general ticket sale.

Maria Matyas.

The Russian-American chorus of Chicago, under the direction of Nicolai Popov, will present a program called "Galetes Russe" at the People's auditorium, 2457 W. Chicago av., this afternoon at 4:30. The event is a benefit for the Russian War Relief clothes drive sponsored by Mayor Kelly.

Notes of Music and Musicians

By Albert Goldberg

Désiré Defauw will continue his Beethoven cycle with the Chicago Symphony orchestra by again playing two symphonies and an overture of that composer on the Thursday-Friday program. The event will be the second of the season's all-Beethoven concerts and will consist of the "Coriolanus" overture and the Fourth symphony before the intermission, with the "Eroica," the Third symphony, completing the program.

Rudolph Ganz, who also conducts the youth concerts of the New York Philharmonic and the San Francisco Symphony orchestras, will direct the first of the two Young People's programs for which he is scheduled this season with the Chicago Symphony on Wednesday at 3:30. His soloist will be Jean Stern, a 13 year old pianist, who will play a movement from Mozart's Concerto in C minor. Orchestral works will consist of the overture to Weber's "Oberon," Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker" suite, and Chabrier's "Espana," with "Everywhere, Everywhere, Christmas Tonight" as the audience participation number.

Hans Lange will conduct the Saturday night "Pop" concert, the program listing Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" overture, Tschaikowsky's Fifth symphony, Smetana's "The Moldau" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnol."

On Monday night the orchestra will go to Milwaukee to play a concert under Mr. Defauw's direction. The soloist will be the young Philadelphia pianist, Eugene Istomin, who will play Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 3, in D minor. Orchestral numbers will be Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture and Fourth symphony.

The Universal Opera company will present Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor" at the Eighth Street theater tonight at 8. June Browne will sing the title role, with other parts assigned to Enrico Clausi, Algerd Brazis, Michael J. Lester, Donald Gramm, and Roberta Holmer. Giovanni Berrafato will conduct.

• • •

The Chicagoland Choral club, Helen Leefelt, director, will give a benefit concert for the music room of Vaughan General hospital in the Hotel Continental ballroom this afternoon at 3:30. A chorus of 125 will participate, and the soloists will be Allen Stanley, baritone, and Corp. Julian Leviton, pianist.

• • •

Witold Malcuzynski, Polish pianist, will play his second Chicago recital as the second number of the Musical Arts Piano series in Orchestra hall on Tuesday at 8:15. Mr. Malcuzynski was the last pupil of Paderewski and in 1937 was the winner of the international Chopin Concourse held in Warsaw. He concertized thruout Europe and escaped from Warsaw only a few hours ahead of the Nazis. His program lists Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue, Liszt's Sonata in B minor, two mazurkas by Szymanowski, two etudes by Scriabine, and a group of Chopin—the G minor Ballade, two etudes, a waltz, and the Scherzo in C sharp minor.

• • •

Jan Peerce, tenor, and Doris Doree, soprano, will give a joint recital on the Sinai Temple Forum at Hyde Park High school, 6200 Stony Island av., tomorrow night at 8:15.

• • •

Dorothy Jordan, Negro soprano, with Robert Macdonald at the piano, will give a recital at Kimball hall this afternoon at 4. A varied program lists the aria "Ritorna vincitor" from "Aida," a group of lieder by Schubert and Schumann, and other songs by old English, Russian, French, and contemporary American composers.

Joe E. Lewis Opens at the Chez Paree on Thursday

Solid Show Will Support Court Jester

By Will Davidson.

Joe E. Lewis doesn't care much for money, except that it quiets your nerves, but nevertheless he has sold his solos again to Fritzel and Jacobson, and will be back at the Chez Paree Thursday.

Gloria Foster. [Bloom Photo.]

The inestimable Mr. Lewis [altho Joe claims he hasn't been in Estimable since he left the place as a barefoot boy] will, as he so forthrightly announces to his audiences now and then, be working under a severe handicap—"I have no talent." But whatever it is that Joe has is good enough for Chez Paree regulars. He is known as Pack 'Em In Lewis, the Fairbanks Court Jester.

Just to make sure that they have some way of getting Joe off the floor part of the time, the Messers Fritzel and Jacobson have booked a very solid supporting show. There is Rose Marie, another Chez favorite since she made her grownup debut there some time ago; there are Pierre d'Angelo and Vanya, a very smart and unusual dance team whose crisp routines were featured not long ago at the Mayfair room. Carol King, the toe dancer, and Olive Bernard's Adorables in new routines, along with Gay Claridge's always pleasant music complete the list.

On Wednesday night the Blackstone will present Kitty Carlisle, who has usually done her local chores at the Chez. Attractive Lillian Cornell, who has been doing such a standout job in the Mayfair room, will move to the Drake's Camellia house that same evening.

• • •

Saturday night is the big Trianon anniversary celebration when Billy Bishop's band will co-star with Sammy Kaye in a one night musical extravaganza honoring the 22d birthday of the big south side ballroom. Saturday's celebration recalls the fabulous night of the Trianon's opening, when Paul Whiteman's orchestra played and a list of notables made the charity "Bal Fantastique" an event to remember. Kaye goes to the Aragon Sunday to co-star with Eddie Oliver.

Looking on into the future, the Blackhawk's Capulet has finally given me some real news to write about. It is double news. Most important, of course, is the fact that Chuck Foster's elegant band is being held over thru the holiday season. Chuck has done wonders with his organization and is playing a lot of fine music for dancers and for the shows. In Jimmy Confer he has a crooning find, and in his sister Gloria he has one of the really superb vocalists in the night club field.

Gloria is a very wise young woman, and a very charming one. When she first appeared here as a vocalist with Chuck she had looks and the makings of a very good voice, but she was inexperienced and that lack of training let her be overshadowed by the dynamic Dottie Dotson. Gloria worked and learned, and finally went out on her own for a while.

Somewhere along the line she found herself, and a very extraordinary self it was. She now is a mature singer, with a dramatic flair and a superb voice. Still she turns down movie offers, because she realizes that beautiful singers are a dime a dozen in Hollywood, and she wants even more experience before making the big move. Smart gal.

The other Blackhawk news item is the arrival on the 13th of a comic tumbling and acrobatic act, the Four Creedons—three men and a girl. They replace popular Kurtis Marionettes. Maurice and Maryea, the Blackhawk's beautiful dance team, stay on, as well they should.

The Rio Cabana again promises Frances Faye as a headliner, and this time it hopes the fates don't interfere. Frances was scheduled to have opened with the current show which stars Sammy Walsh and George Tapps, but a back injury prevented her appearance. Now she is determined to make good on her contract, and will come in on the 15th with Jackie Miles as co-star.

Charlie Agnew came back to Chicago some days ago and found a hearty welcome in the Pan American room of the La Salle hotel. It had been two or three years since he had played in town, nearly 10 since he had played a hotel date. But he fitted his smart music into the Pan Am's low ceilinged confines admirably and came off with enough laurels to assure him a satisfying long engagement.

Charlie plays good straight music, without diverting too much attention to fancy embroidery. In his shows he comes up with one of those musical cocktails, in which various members of the band play songs of the military branches in unison, and then he displays his own versatility with some vibraharp playing that is expert. He uses the classic "Rose Room" as his vehicle.

Charlie also displays the versatility of his drummer, Lucky Light. Light is no mean drummer, but he outdoes himself by turning in a surprisingly expert boogie woogie piano performance.

The Agnew vocalist, Jeanne Carroll, is featured in the show singing "He's Funny That Way," and "Swing on a Star." Miss Carroll has a huskily attractive voice and a pleasant way of presentations.

The floor show features new routines by Winnie Hoveler's girls—a saucy and acrobatic Can-Can, and a trimmed down, effective version of a magnificent gaucho number they did in a larger room some years ago. The Hovelers are proving a strong attraction for the room.

John Paul, the humorous magician, has been brought over from the hotel's Nineties lounge and supplies some pleasantries for the show.

A revue as talent packed as that Ritz brothers fun fest at the Latin Quarter must be good—but not good enough to make it worth while bucking the management's monumental indifference about opening night press table arrangements. End of review.

Boswelling the Bistros:

When Talia opens at the Bismarck hotel Dec. 22 she'll have Art Kassel's music and Arthur Nelson's puppets as company. . . . Lawrence Welk, who returns to the Trianon on Christmas night, has added Trumpeters Jules Herman, once with Griff Williams, and Bill Tinkler. . . . Benny Strong now is playing another catchy tune by Chicago's musical medic, Dr. Benjamin Goldberg—"You're All the World to Me." . . . Nick Porozoff is out of the army and back in the agency business. . . . Fred Joyce is back with United Artists, heading the midwest publicity staff. . . . Jimmy [Pump Room] Tattler isn't afraid to ask his boss, Ambassador Manager Jim Hart, to step out into the alley—so long as it's a bowling alley, where Jimmy, a 200 bowler, can give Jim some fine pointers.

MAESTRO

Les Crosley is the quiet, musicianly gentleman who provides such impeccable music for patrons and entertainers in the Drake Hotel's Camellia house. [Sketch by Will Davidson.]

Ballet Schedule

Training Fits Students for Public Office

By The Rev. John Evans.

The objectives of the training program for public service, inaugurated this fall at Loyola university, were outlined in an interview recently by its director, Dr. Tibor Payzs, chairman of the university's department of government.

"The aim of the program," Dr. Payzs said, "is to draw an undergraduate's attention to public service as a career and making him realize that adequate training is necessary for certain government positions. While retaining accepted aims of a liberal education, the program as designed at Loyola will give a substantial education either in public administration or foreign service depending on the student's choice."

Dr. Payzs explained that a student must take the prescribed courses for an A. B. degree—English, philosophy, languages—but he is exactly advised as to the major course in government, the minor in economics, and instead of electives to specialize in sociology, history, and psychology.

"By Loyola's arrangement for internships," Dr. Payzs continued, "the public service training program can furnish practical experience with federal agencies in the metropolitan area for students in junior and senior years. Civic agencies also welcome this arrangement as the best way of securing competent public servants."

Loyola is considering also offering a two year program leading to a certificate in public administration and management and to a certificate in public personnel administration to meet the needs of war veterans and government employes, Dr. Payzs added.

A war contract settlement training program at Loyola's school of commerce, 28 N. Franklin st., is announced by Dean Henry T. Chamberlain. It is sponsored by the war and navy departments and smaller war plants corporations. Beginning Dec. 11, a three day course in war contract termination will be given weekly from Monday thru Wednesday [except during the weeks of Christmas and New Year] and continued so long as the demand exists. The course will be directed by E. L. Kohler, accountant.

There has been founded at the University of Chicago a new chapter of Alpha Beta Chi, the only fraternity on the midway of an international nature. Its president is Ricardo Alegria, who founded the mother chapter in 1942 at the University of Puerto Rico to foster cultural and intellectual interests among members from different countries.

Membership is not limited to any country or hemisphere except that more than 25 per cent of the total Alpha Beta Chi membership. There are now two chapters in Latin America and Mr. Alegria plans forming one next year at the University of Mexico. Headquarters of the local chapter are at International house and the faculty advisor is Prof. Salomon Trevino of the romance language department.

"Faces in the Fog" is an "honest picture with a good idea, compact structure without padding, fine direction, and excellent acting. Thumbs up."

"Double Indemnity," starring Fred MacMurray and Barbara Stanwyck and based on the novel by James M. Cain, is "powerful adult fare—strong meat—one of the best films to come out of Hollywood in this or any other year."

• • •

"1812" is a Russian war film. "The moral, of course, is that history repeats itself. While photography and production as a whole do not compare with the best American standards, the battle scenes are impressive and the acting is distinguished."

• • •

"Arsenic and Old Lace," with Cary Grant and Priscilla Lane . . . "One of the funniest plays yet staged, has held its own in Hollywood. . . . Frank Capra has caught the macabre comedy in exact mood, pacing the picture with the hilarious understatement that gave the play its shock of irresistible charm."

• • •

"None but the Lonely Heart." Filmed from the novel by Richard Llewellyn. "It is a strange role for Cary Grant, and tho you may have reservations of his temperamental fitness for the part, as an acting job it's well up the ladder. Miss Barrymore is magnificently unsentimental as Ma Mott."

• • •

"Laura." "Murder, always a subject of perennial interest, takes on increased fascination when presented with the literacy displayed in 'Laura.' . . . It's all packaged in a civilized and witty script, and the direction is keen and alert and misses no bets." Gene Tierney starred.

• • •

"The Princess and the Pirate." "It's zany, daffy, goofy, and worth leaving home for—at least for an evening." Bob Hope plays the ham actor known as Sylvester the Great and Virginia Mayo is the pretty princess traveling incog.

Purported New Symphony Presented Here Twice

What's in a name? Several eastern orchestras in the past two seasons have programmed what purported to be the latest symphony of the Russian master, Nicholas Miaskowsky, listed as his 21st. Interested in reports of the work's success, Hans Lange decided to perform the work on the Chicago Symphony orchestra program he will conduct on Dec. 12. Consequently the music was ordered from the publisher, but upon arrival it was discovered to be no novelty at all, but the Symphonie Fantasie in F sharp minor, which was commissioned by the Chicago Symphony orchestra for its Golden Jubilee celebration and played twice that season under Frederick Stock's direction.

Philadelphia Schools Test Counselors

[Dr. Slade, who is an educator, has just completed an investigation of the public school systems in a number of American cities. His findings are contained in a series of articles of which this is the second.]

By Clarke Slade.

Nearly everywhere these days public schools have teachers designated as "counselors" in the junior and senior high schools, the aim being to help students solve educational, vocational, and personal problems. Their training ranges from none to many summers spent in study. Schools are divided as to what the best means are. Some hold that the guidance of pupils is as old as teaching itself and is a component of it, requiring no magic, mystical skill, and that it can be carried on by classroom or homeroom teachers under direction.

A number of the large cities do it this way, notably Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and Minneapolis. In other school systems it is considered a field for experts only; but the inference usually is that the only experts are those teachers who have taken courses in guidance and counseling in graduate schools of education. Baltimore, for instance, places one or two counselors in even the smallest junior high schools and six in the largest; as specialists they work independently of the teaching staff. Providence, R. I., with one of the oldest programs of counseling, has one counselor to each 250 students. In both points of view much of the guidance is regarding vocational and educational decisions.

There are two approaches to counseling, the "authoritative, directive" approach and a "permissive, nondirective" one. Stripped of fancy lingo, the first implies the counselor's ability and authority to interpret problems and supply the right answer. This makes students dependent, say child psychiatrists. The second implies the counselor's skill in setting up a discussion so that it becomes a mirror in which a student sees his own problem in a detached way; then can supply his own answer from his own insight, and he can act with a minimum of outside help. This, say child psychiatrists, makes students independent. Despite schools' protestations to the contrary, most of them follow the "authoritative." It is traditional to education; "teacher knows best."

Two years ago Philadelphia's school board, with a refreshing disregard of other cities' counseling and guidance program, engaged a professional social worker to reorganize counseling and attendance policies and head a division of pupil personnel. Here was a man who knew children too, but from outside the classroom instead of inside. Still retaining the usual guidance in high schools, he set up a permissive, nondirective counseling in elementary schools, where many people dealing with children think emphasis should be. It is this deviation which makes Philadelphia's counseling of possible significance.

From its teachers were selected 80-odd known to be interested in children as persons instead of as academic sponges, and they were assigned to schools as rapidly as principals would accept them. Their preparation was marked for its thoroness, simplicity, and common sense. They were trained in seminars and round table discussions; the best child psychiatrists in the country talked to them; leaders in training social workers lectured; they read, they discussed, they

Arts Club Sees Choreographer Create a Ballet

By Thalia.

The ballet has sewed glittering sequins on our lives the last ten days. Antony Tudor, choreographer of some of its many spectacular offerings, lectured before the members of the Arts club on Tuesday morning and made that usually restrained audience do metaphorically just what he did, take off his coat and get down to the business and the fun of creating a ballet. He introduced to his audience two of the ballerinas, black haired Alicia Alonzo, the young Cuban dancer, and the tiny pale blonde Albia Kavan, one of Chicago's own. While they waited in their practice costumes of long pink tights, and short black skin-tight jumpers, Mr. Tudor informally straddled a chair and told his audience how ballet is created.

A ballet program is built in exactly the way a good play is built, he said. The opening should make the audience inquisitive about what will happen next. The second part should give the emotional climax of the evening. If it is a program of four ballets, the third should correspond to the scherzo in a symphony, be trivial and gay, and the end should be either very amusing or very romantic, to send the audience off very happy.

How a ballet is created he illustrated by telling us about the new ballet he will produce in New York in the spring. The music is being written by William Schuman, whom, he said, he considered one of the three most important young composers in America. He said, "I just give him atmosphere, not a story, and having got the music, I will start on the ballet. Eventually I have 10 key movements of one character and 10 of another. Then the ballet takes shape."

At that point Mr. Tudor took off his coat and went to work to show the audience how key movements would be developed into a pattern. He had the charming help of his ebony and golden haired assistants, also of two members of the audience to whom he whispered directions and who demonstrated, for the audience to guess, some of the instinctive reactions which, Mr. Tudor says, can be used in ballet.

The audience left in that haze of romantic excitement that is the inevitable result of intimate contact with the ballet. Many of them stayed as members of an unusually large number of chic pre-symphony luncheon parties, among them the one that Mrs. Alfred Shaw, president of the Arts club, gave in honor of Mr. Tudor and the ballerinas.

On the opening night of the ballet at the Civic Opera house one of the most ardent balletomanes in the audience was Louis Bromfield, who was lecturing the next day before a fashionable audience at the Arts club under the auspices of the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Decorators. He came a day in advance to dine with old friends and welcome the ballet. At dinner he met unexpectedly an old friend of the days when they both lived in France, Mrs. Samuel Barlow. Mrs. Barlow's composer husband wrote the music for the first opera ever performed in a French national theater, "Mon Ami Pierrot," with libretto by Sacha Guitry. Mrs. Barlow has come to Chicago to organize a committee to sponsor the movement for national compulsory military training. She is the sister of Catherine Drinker Bowen, whose fine life of the two Oliver Wendell Holmeses, "Yankee from Olympus," will probably be among the Christmas gifts of more bookloving men than any other of the year's biographies. Mrs. Barlow was the first Mrs. William Bullitt when "Bill Bullitt" shocked staid Philadelphia society by writing the first satire on it in "It's Not Done," before he gave up the thesaurus for diplomacy.

Mrs. Barlow missed the ballet because she had to write a radio script, but the balletomanes got there just in time to see young

[Have you some household help that lightens labor or conserves on materials? Is there some comfort you could enjoy? We'll be glad to pass on your ideas or requests to our readers. Address Louise Bargelt, The Chicago Tribune.]

Mrs. Bob G., Des Moines, Iowa—Our cellar game room was uncomfortably noisy, as all sounds seemed to be reflected and none absorbed. We laid old carpeting on the floor and hung some old draperies on the walls. After the war we'll line walls with insulating sheets, but for the duration we've done a fairly good job of sound-conditioning the room!

Mrs. Henry W., Chicago—To remove grease which has been allowed to harden on the enameled surface of a range I use a damp cloth and plain baking powder. Kerosene can be used to soften a grease deposit which has been baked on until it is very hard.

Mrs. Ed. T., Chicago—Here are two good rules to follow if you are inexperienced in the removal of stains from household articles. Use any "remover" sparingly, as many brief applications are better than one, and use a light, brushing motion.

Mrs. George A., Traverse City, Mich.—If you are your own handy man this year, and want to make your windows weather tight, don't put putty on the window sash until it has been cleaned, well primed with paint, and the paint is dry. Otherwise, chances are, the putty will loosen.

Sara Bannister Is Married to Raymond Girven

The marriage of Miss Sara Jane Bannister, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Martin Bannister of Oak Park, to Raymond Francis Girven, nephew of Miss Maude Allers and Eugene Allers, of the same suburb, took place recently in the Church of St. Lucy in Oak Park. Mrs. Girven attended St. Mary-of-the-Woods college, Terre Haute, Ind., and the University of Illinois. Her bridegroom received his degree from Northwestern university. They are at home in Oak Park.

Fresh from the Hills . . . . . By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm . . . . . French Cabin Boy

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHE must not let her heart break until she reached her own rooms, Jeanne kept saying to herself as she ran thru the long halls of the great old French castle. Her grandmother, the old countess, would hear her if she cried aloud. Then she would tell her friends and they would tell the king and queen and eventually the whole court would be whispering that Chaveaux had refused to marry Jeanne before he sailed to America. And more than that, they would laugh at the absurdity of a young and beautiful girl wishing to leave the loveliest castle in all of France and accompany her betrothed on his daring exploration trip to that savage country, America. Why, every one knew America was only a desolate land of red giants and wild beasts.

Jeanne thought of the tender promises Chaveaux had made. He loved her far too dearly, he had said, to subject her to the hardships of the long dangerous trip. As soon as he returned, she would become his bride. Then, in later years, when America had castles like the one in which she had been born, and cities like their beloved Paris, they would make a journey to that far country.

All of this was scant comfort to heartsick Jeanne. Across her own satin-swathed bed she sobbed out her grief and disappointment. Then she tore off the crumpled silk dress with its elaborate laces and gay ribbon bows and stood in her slim chemise. The tall headdress with its ribbons and curls was wrenched from her head and she shook her dark hair back from her broad forehead. No more silks, no more perfumed gowns, no more frivolous hair dressing, she vowed, until her lover's return. She would be plain as the lowliest page boy in her grandmother's service. A page boy! Suddenly she ceased weeping and moved toward the long mirror. Thus was born the idea that was to create the best loved legend of the Ozark Mountains here in Arkansas.

No expense, so the legend runs, was spared in outfitting the ship which would carry Chaveaux and his men to America. After all Chaveaux was related to the king and the expedition was being made in his majesty's name. The king acknowledged this great bravery by turning the last few hours before sailing into a magnificent feast in honor of the departing hero. At the side of Chaveaux sat Jeanne, his betrothed, her flashing jewels no brighter than her smiles and her sparkling eyes.

"Mlle. Jeanne seems undisturbed by her lover's departure on this dangerous mission," whispered one titled guest to another.

"Ah! 'Tis youth's unconcern," replied her companion. "She is so young, so beautiful. If Chaveaux is lost, many others would take his place most gladly."

At daybreak, Chaveaux and his band sailed for America. The seas were rough and the valiant leader of the expedition was kept to his cabin by unexpected seasickness. Even in his illness, Chaveaux noted that the tiny room was clean and neat, that a cushion was under his head and clean sheets on his narrow bed. As he grew better, he saw the young cabin boy bringing wine and soup and cleaning the cabin with tireless energy. Gratefully, he acknowledged the youth's kindness and asked his name.

"Jean, sir," replied the boy.

"Jean! 'Tis a name I honor. But I fear the captain should not have hired you for this long dangerous trip. You are so young, and so small. Just a lad. I shall call you Petit Jean!"

So Petit Jean, the cabin boy, became the pride and inspiration of the ship's rough crew. He had a little niche off the galley for his own, but no one ever knew him to sleep. When the wind died down, leaving the ship becalmed until nerves were raw and tempers on edge, in storms that tore at the sails as though they would whip them to shreds and snap every timber, Petit Jean was ready, by day and by night, to bring food and wine to weary men.

At last, the ship reached America and at the mouth of the Mississippi, entered the region claimed by France, and sailed up the broad river. Several days later they reached the mouth of another river, broad and deep, that flowed from the west and north. In exultation, Chaveaux gave orders to sail up this new, unexplored river. Here was new land that some day might be his own. Slowly they made their way up the river, each mile taking them deeper into a country steeped in natural beauty.

Soft, warm breezes flowed over them by day and at night silver moonlight fell about them like a velvet cloak. On each side of the river green wooded hillsides that kissed the sky rimmed a broad fertile valley. In the high grasses of this valley great shaggy buffalo and bison roamed in vast herds. Wild horses were there, too, with long flowing manes and tails and quick nimble feet, horses that bore a strong resemblance to those ridden by Spanish noblemen when they visited France, but tougher and more alert. There, too, were the men about which they had heard . . . men with red skins and feathered head dresses who stood quietly on the banks of the river to watch their passing.

At last the ship reached a point more beautiful than any they had seen. Orders to drop anchor were given and the ship came to a halt at the base of a great mountain that rose sheer as a wall beside the broad river. From the deck they could see the broad summit of the mountain, and a forward point jutting like a nose over the river. Here they would make camp to kill some of the wild animals and stock the ship with meat and fresh water for the return journey.

Friendly red men came up on silent moccasined feet to bid the strangers welcome when they came ashore. With signs, they showed the white men the steep waterfall high on the side of the mountain and the great rock hall where a hundred warriors could sit in council or perform their ceremonial dances beneath an arched ceiling higher than the head of the tallest brave. Camp was soon established. Then through the weeks that followed, no one was happier than Petit Jean, the cabin boy. Soft voiced squaws who loved his youthful gaiety taught him how to grind corn, snare tender young rabbits, and make soft restful beds of pine boughs. Each day, Petit Jean grew more skilful in providing food and comfort for Chaveaux and his men and they lingered on, content in this strange new land. But at last cold weather was near at hand and the return voyage could be delayed no longer. At sunset, one October night, they took their places in the ship. At dawn they would sail for France.

At midnight, in that tiny niche off the galley, Petit Jean became ill. The youth cried for help, and when help came, he asked that Chaveaux be brought to his bedside. When Chaveaux came, the dark stain had been washed from the face of Petit Jean, the lips were red and smiling, even in pain. Chaveaux dropped to his knees as he recognized his bethrothed, the beautiful girl, Jeanne.

"Forgive me, my darling," whispered the sick girl. "I couldn't let you come without me. Now you must return alone. For the few hours God will give me, let us return to the mountain top."

Tenderly, the sick girl was carried to the summit of the mountain. There, on the jutting nose of that high peak, surrounded by the glory of purple and gold flowers and the majesty of tall singing pines, she remained thru the day with her calloused little hand held tight in the hand of her beloved. When the sun grew low, tipping the mountain top with gold and filling the valley with purple shadows, she died.

On your trip to the Ozarks, you can see the spot where the French girl of this legend allegedly lies buried. It is at the summit of the largest peak in Arkansas, 15 miles south of Morrilton. You will find the going easy, for a hard road winds about the mountain to the very top. Then, for miles, you can drive along the broad mountain summit, seeing below you the great Arkansas river and the fertile valley that fed American pioneers just as it fed the Indians and Chaveaux and his band. You even can see the waterfall on the mountainside. And after clambering over terraces of rocks, you can find the arched cave where the Indians met in council. Perhaps you may even find an arrowhead or if you are as lucky as I was yesterday you may find the other half of the Indian hammer I discovered. You will not find any Indians, but a charming woman who volunteered to be my guide turned out to be the grandaughter of an Indian woman.

You will also find hospitality on the mountain top, for a state park, with picturesque lodge and cabins for many guests, was built on the summit by a veterans' camp, back in the WPA days. You can go boating on Lake Bailey, set like a gem on the mountain top, swim in a handsome modern swimming pool, ride horseback over wooded trails dappled with sunlight, or sit for hours looking at the valley. If you like friendly folk, you can chat with beautiful girls in shorts and monogrammed blouses who stop on their way to or from the swimming pool to stand on a jutting rock and let you take their pictures, with the sunset making halos of their golden hair. These girls were born in the mountain top homes that you'll find there on the summit, and you'll enjoy hearing them scold because every one expects Arkansas girls to be barefoot and to wear Mother Hubbards and sunbonnets.

Most of these girls are named Jeanne or Jean for the legend of the French girl is still near and dear to the hearts of every one in the region. In fact, from time beyond the memory of the oldest settler, this mountain has borne the name of the 'cabin boy' who died on its summit so long ago. It is Petit Jean Mountain.

Chicagoans Watch Ballet Being Created

Johnny Kriza of Berwyn as the bluebird in flight and to hear thunderous applause for home town boy makes good. Sheer glee greeted Chicago's first sight of "Fancy Free," the new modern ballet with a score by Leonard Bernstein, so cleverly written that one is not conscious of the music as music, but only of the perfect marriage between it and the dance. It perfectly fulfilled Mr. Tudor's dictum of a ballet to set the nerves afire and the heart aflutter.

Mr. Tudor's "Lilac Garden" changed the mood to a misty, romantic one, and "Graduation Ball," a burst of adolescent high jinks, sent us back stage to put Louis Bromfield's enthusiasm into handshakes with little Janet Reed and Harold Lang the irrepressible young principals. So enchanted was Mr. Bromfield with the ballet that he stayed over the next night and went again.

The day was a very full one for him, for when he arrived for his lecture at 11 a. m. he had already given two speeches before a soil conservation group and a farm group. His farmhouse in Lucas, O., with its near-by barn was one of the places he described to a fascinated audience. When he came back to America to live he said he was determined to have a farmhouse built to suit the needs of his highly individualistic family, and since he felt that every new thing should keep the line of continuity with the past he preserved as much of Ohio's past as possible in the house and the barn. The trouble with modern French and much other "moderne" furniture, he remarked, was that it is just new and has no connection with the past, while modern Swedish was successful because it never lost its traditional line.

The barn on the Bromfield farm has painted on its huge door a landscape which includes every animal on the farm, a link with the pioneer past when all Ohio barns had such "hex" paintings to ward off witches. Before the barn is a huge pile of corn, because of the ancient legend that witches have a mathematical compulsion and have to count every grain of corn before entering the barn. That mathematical compulsion was the original basis of the custom of hanging a rusty horseshoe over a barn door, Mr. Bromfield said. Witches would have to retrace every step the horse had taken, if the horseshoe was old enough, and that could be counted on to keep them busy most of the night.

He described in detail the low, rambling house. Thru windows set almost to the floor the beautiful valley can be seen from every room. In the French manner, every room on the ground floor opens onto the terrace or the garden. From the lovely little chateau at Senlis just outside Paris, where the Bromfields lived for 16 years, the furniture was brought over and installed in the big living room in the farmhouse. A famous museum curator, Mr. Bromfield said, said sarcastically when he first looked at the room, "I'm glad to see you've kept the simple Ohio farmhouse atmosphere."

He then told of two fabulous houses he had stayed in as a guest, one in England, one in India, the original of the maharajah's palace in "The Rains Came." The most beautiful house in England, he said, is, or used to be before the war, the earl of Pembroke's house at Wilton. In it, he said, is the architectural and decorative history of England. Beginning with the age of Henry VIII., different sections or wings of the house are period masterpieces. The facade was designed by Holbein. There is a famous Van Dyke room, built for the eight great Van Dyke pictures which hang in it. In one huge canvas all of the dead children of the family live forever as cherubs. There is in one of the halls the "Portrait of Mr. W. H.," to whom Shakespeare is supposed to have written a sonnet. The latest wing is Victorian. The most wonderful part of the great historic house, however, Mr. Bromfield said, is that any one could feel at home in it, and one does feel that families have been happy in it for four or five centuries.

He then described the Indian palace of the maharajah of Baroda. It is, he said, one of the largest buildings he had ever seen, with balconies four floors high built around seven courtyards, each fabulously beautiful, with exotic birds and flowers circling the lovely white marble fountains. One always hears the sound of falling water.

One great hall, where the Durbar is held, is made entirely of sandlewood, with no color whatever in it, but when it is in use it is the perfect setting for the brilliant jewel-like colors and materials of the ceremonial dress.

Nets at the windows keep the monkeys out of the rooms, but sparrows and swarming bees are always clustered in the huge crystal chandeliers of the lovely second floor French rooms, which the maharani furnished to suit her own taste.

A good share of Chicago's own most creative homemakers were in the capacity audience as they were when T. H. Robsjohn-Gibbings, author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chippendale," closed the series on Wednesday morning with a witty talk on modern backgrounds. The profits from their enthusiasm are used for the generous war work done by the Illinois Institute of Decorators.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, November 30, 1896.

Dear Julia: This is always a busy time of year and it seems to me I have more social affairs on hand than usual. I have promised to give some fancy articles to a bazar to be held at "The Maples," the residence of Mrs. John B. Kirk, on Ridge av., Evanston, for the benefit of Northwestern University settlement. My lovely friend, Mrs. Daniel H. Burnham, wife of our famous architect, is at the head of the art department, and several other ladies I know are interested in it—Mrs. E. H. Lacey, Mrs. George S. Lord, and Mrs. F. M. Bristol, wife of a prominent Methodist divine. I'm taking our young grandson, Esmond, with me on Friday evening, for he worships football heroes and the Northwestern university team are to be guests of honor that night. Capt. Van Doozer is to be presented with a souvenir sofa pillow, appropriately decorated.

Mrs. Moses J. Wentworth.

Receptions are taking up much time, too. One of the largest and most pleasant of these was given this week by Mrs. Moses J. Wentworth of 465 Elm st. in honor of Mrs. Clarence W. Bowen [Roxana Wentworth of New York], her husband's cousin. Mrs. Bowen is a great heiress, being the daughter of "Long John" Wentworth, once mayor of Chicago, and we were all eager to see her. I enjoyed meeting many old friends, for the guests were descendants of pioneers for the most part. One of the loveliest of these young matrons, assisting the hostess, was Mrs. Howard Van Doren Shaw, whose husband is a cousin of Mrs. Moses Wentworth. Mrs. Shaw is quite literary and I often wonder if she won't write a novel some time. Then there was Miss Willing, daughter of Henry J. Willing and granddaughter of Judge Mark Skinner, the judge being a contemporary of "Long John." Miss Frances Isham was another of the young ladies who helped pour tea in the dining room. I noticed that Biggs, our great caterer, was in charge of the refreshments, which means that they were perfect. And Johnny Hand, Chicago's famous music master, furnished the musical program. I think Mrs. Wentworth wanted to have everything in the old Chicago tradition.

December 2.

I was interrupted as I was writing this, and now will finish and send it off. I attended today the annual meeting of the Visiting Nurses' association at its rooms on the ninth floor of the Masonic temple. Mrs. James L. Houghteling was elected president and Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, treasurer. It is a splendid organization, doing much good among the poor when they are sick, and I am proud to belong to it, especially as the members are among the Chicago women I most admire. On the board of directors are such women as Mrs. Arthur Aldis, Mrs. T. W. Grover, Mrs. George S. Payson, Mrs. E. C. Dudley, and Mrs. P. D. Armour Jr. It is good to see these younger women taking up the tasks of those who have had to lay them down. Mrs. Lyon is of my generation, but the others are much younger. Her daughter, Mrs. William P. Conger, has been treasurer and is giving up the office this year. She reported that the treasury is in a bad way, hardly enough to pay current expenses. There is talk of having a large entertainment to raise money. We must not let this wonderful work suffer. Dr. Favill and Dr. DeLee were present and both spoke in highest terms of the Visiting Nurses' association, which has been in existence for 11 years. Miss Emily Wakem, head nurse, as she is called, gave an interesting report, telling of the 26,000 visits made by the nurses.

I was interested today to hear of the approaching marriage of Miss Julia Scott, daughter of Mrs. Matthew Scott of Bloomington, Ill., the bridegroom being Carl Vrooman. Matthew Scott left a large fortune to his wife and two daughters and the young ladies had every advantage that money can give. Julia is quite literary in her taste, I believe.

Now I must close, with much love,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES.

The work of the Visiting Nurses' association has grown with the years. During 1943 over 335,000 visits were made by the nurses and over 46,000 patients cared for. Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, the present president, is a daughter of Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, who was treasurer in 1896. The Carl Vroomans still live in Bloomington. Both are authors of several books. Mr. Vrooman was assistant secretary of agriculture, 1914-1919.

Country Sayings.

We have received many excellent old sayings, a number of which are so good it will be difficult to award the prize. But if you haven't yet sent in your entry, you still have time. If your letter is postmarked before midnight Dec. 5, it will be considered. We can't use trite and familiar proverbs, but want shrewd observations on life by pioneers.

Another Campaign Song.

Mrs. Frances Birt, Muncie, Ind., sends a verse of a song her father-in-law used to sing, recalled from his childhood. Dating from 1849, it "boosted" Zachary Taylor and his running mate, Millard Fillmore.

The boys have all come back
And say they are going to vote for Zack;
They say they'll vote for Fillmore, too,
For he's a Whig both tried and true;
So run up the flag for Old Zack Taylor,
And to the masthead we will nail her.

Chippendale— IT HATH A WAY Most Charming

By entertaining the eye at mealtime you serve the appetite as well. For in dull settings food loses much of its savour.

Let us rejoice then for such felicity as we see in this Chippendale dining room. Adaptable, agreeable, entertaining Chippendale! If your feelings toward breakfast need a bit of gilding they can get it here.

If vivacity will enhance your luncheon, here it is. And the room decks the dinner scene in enough pomp and circumstance to make it the social climax of the day.

Here the beautiful mahogany pieces are set within chalk white walls scrolled over with a Chinese Chippendale design of vibrant cerulean blue. Panels of this blue border the windows, replacing hangings, while the glass is overhung by shimmering white gauze on which the Chippendale design has been embroidered in blue.

A long Chippendale sideboard with cabriole legs, a set of really magnificent Chippendale chairs, a china cabinet, a dinner table and a handsome wine cooler are in the room.

Against its south wall are a pair of exquisite Adam console tables with inlaid marble tops, from the J. Pierpont Morgan collection. On each is an antique girandole. Above each is a mirror in a rococo plaster frame.

Resplendent above the sideboard is an important portrait of Georgiana Spencer, by Van der Banck. A second decorative treasure nearly covers the eastern wall, a six-panel Coromandel screen. On its burnt sienna field appear pink bibiscus, pale waterfowl, and brown tree branches.

A wealth of beautiful minutiae await opportunities which only years can give to register their lovely identities upon the eye of the beholder.

Round Table Women Plan Yuletide Teas

By Irene Steyskal.

Less of the superficial glitter and more of the quiet glow that has its source in faith and hope and strength of spirit is to be noted in the preparations the town is making for the celebration of a fourth Christmas with America at war.

Perhaps the very darkness of the shadows serves to enhance the light from the Christian's star of Bethlehem and the Jew's candles of Hanukkah, the seven-day festival of lights which ends this year just one week before Christmas. The common symbolism of the star and the candles of the Menorah—man's eternal aspiration for freedom and peace in brotherhood—is recalled by the Women of Goodwill in announcing a series of holiday teas beginning this week. Women of Goodwill is the name given the women's division of the Chicago Round Table of Christians and Jews.

The many smaller gatherings this year replace the customary large December tea at the suggestion of the division chairman, Mrs. George R. Wilson, and already 24 members have volunteered to open their homes for the goodwill meetings. The first is Mrs. Arthur Compton, 5638 Woodlawn av., whose tea is set for Tuesday. On the following day a second party will be held at Mrs. Edward W. Rosenheim's home at 49 E. Oak st.

Other hostesses who have set definite dates are Mrs. U. G. Dailey, 4758 S. Parkway, who will give her tea Saturday; Mrs. Robert Wilson, 75 E. Harris av., La Grange, and Mrs. Nathan Glickman, 2300 Lincoln Park West, both of whom will have parties Wednesday, Dec. 13; Miss Agnes B. Vogler, 3520 N. Lake Shore dr., who will open her home on the following afternoon; Mrs. Theodore Crawley, whose tea on Dec. 17 will be at the Phyllis Wheatley home, 5128 S. Michigan av.; Mrs. Roy G. Ross, 5525 S. Blackstone av., planning to entertain a group on Dec. 19, Mrs. Max Biesenthal, 5142 Ellis av., whose party is set for Dec. 21.

Serving as general chairman to coordinate the meetings is Mrs. David Wodlinger. Mrs. Wodlinger is arranging to send speakers to each of the homes to give explanatory talks on Christmas and Hanukkah and on the work of the round table toward bringing about inter-faith and inter-race understanding and cooperation. Among the speakers will be Mrs. Bernard Brown, Mrs. A. B. Counselbaum, Mrs. Crawley, Mrs. Margaret Pope Hovey, Mrs. Roy G. Ross, Mrs. E. J. Smith, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Wodlinger, Mrs. Robert Wilson, Mrs. James M. Yard, and Miss Thecla Doniat.

When at 11 o'clock Thursday morning the women of the Episcopal diocese enter Arthur Dixon chapel in the Chicago temple at 77 W. Washington st. for a meeting of their auxiliary, they will see a Christmas tree shimmering with tinsel and ornaments, and heaped at its foot 1,000 gayly wrapped packages. The gifts are from women of the church for children, the aged, and infirm in 30 public and private institutions and hospitals and will be distributed by the deaconesses and clergy of the Episcopal city missions staff. Collection of the gifts was the work of the auxiliary's social relations committee, of which Mrs. Carl H. Zeiss is chairman.

At the meeting to sing carols for the women will be the new choir of Randall house, the Episcopal foster home for Negro boys at 3103 W. Washington blvd.

Next Sunday evening will see a large gathering of members and friends at the Big Sisters' annual Christmas supper party in the Crystal ballroom of the Edgewater Beach hotel. An organization of Catholic women, the Big Sisters work in the field of girl guidance and family welfare.

There is promise of a pretty picture in a ceremony which the newly organized Junior Aids are planning. After the guests are seated, the ballroom will be darkened and the girls will pass from table to table, lighting red candles. As the candle-lighting proceeds, "Silent Night, Holy Night" will be sung by a member of the group gifted with a particularly lovely voice.

The committee for the party is headed by Mrs. Richard J. Nash Jr. and Mrs. Charles E. Caestecker. Auxiliary committees have Mrs. Leo P. Finn, Mrs. James J. O'Sullivan, Mrs. Frank A. Moody, and Miss Mildred Partridge as chairmen, and serving as vice chairmen are Mrs. Peter Cole, Mrs. Nicholas La Vezzorio, Mrs. James Martin, Mrs. Charles P. Megan, Mrs. Joseph P. McKeown, Mrs. Oscar J. Nelson, and Mrs. S. G. Woody. Supper will be at 6 o'clock, prefaced by a 5 o'clock cocktail hour.

The Protestant Woman's Service club, a member group of the First district, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, will be given the opportunity tomorrow to tell the district about its Christmas plans for the 30 youngsters to whom it plays fairy godmother.

Orphans or from broken homes, the children are placed in the care of foster parents but supported by the club. Close touch is maintained with the foster homes, and at Christmas time the benefactresses entertain the youngsters and their foster mothers at a large Santa Claus party replete with turkey dinner, gifts, and entertainment. Entrusted to the club president, Mrs. Charles M. Austin, is the privilege of telling the district club women the story of Christmas plans at tomorrow's assembly, which will be at 1 o'clock in federation headquarters, 30 W. Washington st. The First district president is Mrs. David C. Siagle.

In planning the December meeting of the Municipal Art league Mrs. Maude Merritt, the vice president, has tuned the program to the holiday spirit. Gathering at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning in the Art institute, league members will be entertained by Johnny Covelli, 8 year old pianist, and Bobby Ellis, a junior actor in radio. Mrs. Merritt has arranged also for Avis Lee to exhibit her wood carvings in miniature of celebrities. Esther Muenstermann, contralto, will sing Christmas songs.

In rooms festive with holiday decorations, Mrs. Henry Barrett Chamberlin and her official family will receive members of the Chicago Woman's club and their friends Saturday evening at a Christmas open house. The club's suite is in the Fine Arts building. Mrs. J. J. Bensabott heads the special activities committee arranging the annual party.

At the regular meeting Wednesday afternoon in Curtiss hall Francis Line will give his "Circle of Fire" program, a lecture and color movies of the Pacific war zone, for the club. Wednesday is new members' day. Department chairmen are adding several special talks, all in the field of rehabilitation of war veterans, to the morning program. Dr. Alfred Solomon, clinical director of the Veterans rehabilitation center at 2449 W. Washington blvd., is to speak on new techniques developed for aiding the physically handicapped, and Mrs. Otto Theiss will talk on rehabilitation thru art media. Mrs. Walter F. Heineman of the board of education will tell the club about post-war educational plans for veterans, and Dr. Hart Ellis Fisher will discuss rehabilitation, vocational training, and job placement.

LIVING IN FLORIDA

Mrs. Thomas J. Rucker, the former June E. Stones, is living at Capt. Rucker's army air forces post in Homestead, Fla., following their recent marriage in Coral Gables, Fla. The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Stones of S. Damen av., studied at the University of Chicago. Capt. Rucker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rucker of St. Louis, Mo., was graduated from Columbia university. (Carlos Photo.)

Jewish Club Leaders to Confer Here Today

Leaders of American Jewish organizations of Chicago have been invited by the American Ort federation to a conference at 10 o'clock this morning at the Morrison hotel, called for the purpose of studying Ort's work in rehabilitation and resettling war refugees in the post-war period. Dr. Natalio Berman, member of the Chilean parliament and honorary president of the Ort federation in Santiago, Chili, will be principal speaker. Under Mr. Berman's direction the federation opened a modern school in Santiago offering courses in mechanics and electro-techniques. Morris L. Polin, chairman of Chicago council, will preside at the conference sessions.

Army Captain Writes About John Storrs

By Eleanor Jewett.

Elisabeth Haseltine, well known Chicago sculptor and the wife of Frederic Hibbard, another famous Chicago sculptor, has just received a letter from France from their son, Capt. Robert Hibbard, which tells us more about a third sculptor, John Storrs, who when he lived in Chicago ranked high also among the sculptors of whom Chicago is proud.

Capt. Hibbard, who, by the way, was on the Tribune staff before he went into the army, writes: "I had been on a trip and at noon had been invited to share a meal with the officers at one of the headquarters of the outfit. While we were eating a man in civilian clothes sat down beside me and after a few moments spoke to me in English. He asked where I was from and when I told him his eyes lighted up. He said he had lived in the Woodlawn district and had divided his years [before the war] between France and Chicago. I told him that my father was a sculptor and he clapped his hands to his head. He introduced himself as Mr. Storrs and said he had done the sculpture on the Chicago Board of Trade building.

"We discussed the various Chicago sculptors and I gave him what little news I had of the Chicago art group. Storrs said he was caught by the German occupation with his wife and daughter; that he had spent six months in a concentration camp, another six months recovering from the experience, and the remainder of the occupation just waiting for the allies to liberate France. He said his daughter had gone off with an American combat unit to help them on their way and that he had not heard from her for some time, but that he assumed she was in Paris at some military headquarters.

"I told him I would forward home the news of finding him, so that some of the boys at the Cliff Dwellers, or the Art institute, who knew him would know that he is well and in good spirits, as the saying goes."

John Storrs is remembered by a great many people, artists and laymen. His exhibitions at the Roullier galleries were among the most stimulating and exciting of their various seasons. Mr. Storrs is a distinguished sculptor working in both the modern and classical tradition, and possessed of an ability and talent so great and assured as to entitle him to a hearing wherever the best of contemporary sculpture is discussed.

This is exactly the right Sunday to consider the question of Christmas cards. The Chicago Art institute has two delightful sets of suitable reproductions, one in color and one in black and white, that make attractive cards. The American Artists' Group, 106 7th avenue, New York, has again, as in the last several seasons, published a series of effective cards by well known artists. The victory V has been used in at least two of the cards with great success. Horace Pippen offers a victory vase, delightful in color, and Tina has an impressive banner of flags of the united nations swept forward in V formation in the beak of a dove flying straight from the Christmas star.

The old and lovely Christmas song, "I Saw Three Ships Come Sailing In," has a new interpretation on the card by Heaslip, who presents an aviator stranded on some cold arctic shore with the cheering vision of three mighty planes roaring toward him out of the distant clouds. Betty Lord has a Walt Disneyish camel with a bell-strung bridle, trotting gayly over the sleeping world under a starry sky, with three child riders on its back.

Dale Nichols offers a Currier & Ives "Home for Christmas," one of the delights of the collection. Raymond Breinin has an effective group of Goya monks mounted and walking on paths whose meeting makes a cross and at whose edge trees grow in green profusion. Eugene Higgins has a beautiful "Flight Into Egypt," a lovely card. Charles Sheeler and Alexander Brook offer stunning still lifes; Sheeler, as one might expect, the cooler in color and more mathematical in design—Brook rich and warm in color and intensely human.

If one were looking for a more lasting kind of Christmas remembrance it might be in place to suggest membership in such an organization as the Chicago Society of Etchers, whose honorary members receive an original etching each year [at a membership fee of $5], or the Society of Medalists, 115 East 40th st., New York, which issues two medals a year by notable sculptors for its members. The fee in this society is $8. Still another organization of artists which is doing beautiful work is the Woodcut society, care of the Torch Press, Cedar Rapids, Ia., which gives its members two signed prints each year.

The print given to new members this year is unusually attractive. It is a wood engraving of a little black Pekingese puppy in a garden by Dorothy P. Lathrop, who is famous for her illustrations for children's books. This "Kou Hsiung" by Dorothy Lathrop would be a fascinating Christmas gift. The membership fee is $10 for the Woodcut society and one gets more than one's money's worth in the two splendid prints given members each year. "Kou Hsiung" is the 25th gift print of the society.

The December exhibition in the Fine Arts galleries, 318 N. Michigan av., is a showing of work by artist members of the American Jewish Arts club. Among the well known artists represented are Louis Weiner, N. P. Steinberg, Todros Geller, William S. Schwartz, Edward Millman, A. Raymond Katz, Aaron Bohrod, Samuel Greenberg, William Earl Singer, and Louise Dunn Yochim.

Kohler, Wis., Club Women Set a Record

When a woman's club increases its membership by more than 200 per cent in one season, the effect is that of an electric shock on other organizations, and leaders sit up and take notice. This is the record of the Woman's club in the village of Kohler, Wis., which started out with 110 this fall and now has 365 members.

Mrs. Herbert V. Kohler. [Tribune photo.]

Even more remarkable do these figures appear in the light of other aspects of the story. Kohler is a town of 2,500 persons, and there are larger ones not greatly distant that range up to 20 times its population. Yet, in its seven league boot stride, the Kohler club has outdistanced all others in Sheboygan county and now stands in the forefront with the 10 largest in Wisconsin.

Doubtless there have been the contributing factors of community pride and coöperative action that have had their part in the sudden emergence of the Woman's club of Kohler as a vital group in the village and in the county. But for thousands of club women in the Chicago area who, when she was Miss Ruth De Young, knew her as woman's editor of THE TRIBUNE and organizer and chairman of four memorable TRIBUNE sponsored Woman congresses, the fact that Mrs. Herbert V. Kohler is president of the Kohler club will be an adequate explanation of the group's phenomenal success.

Mrs. Kohler entered the picture last year, taking over the program chairmanship to help at a time when Miss Marie Kohler, the founder-president, was in ill health. After her sister-in-law's death last October, Mrs. Kohler was elected to serve as president this season. Seeing the group's potentialities for community service, Mrs. Kohler went to work with characteristic energy. An initial move was to send out a questionnaire to determine primary interests and who among the members were willing to work on committees. Secondly, it was decided that the club would be satisfied with none but headliners for its principal speakers, and that, as part of its public service, it would open its outstanding programs to interested persons outside the membership.

When Channing Pollock spoke recently, Waelderhaus, the meeting place, was packed to the doors, and Lena Madesin Phillips drew an audience of equal numbers. On the night that Sigrid Schultz, the TRIBUNE'S famous foreign correspondent, lectured, the meeting was moved to the town's more capacious recreation hall, but even its 1,500 seats were inadequate for the occasion. The club had guests from the entire county in to hear June Baker of the "V-G-N homemakers' radio program. Osa Johnson is to lecture in Kohler Wednesday. Another former Tribune associate of Mrs. Kohler's who is anticipating with pleasure a visit to the club in April is Arch Ward, sports editor.

Being the only women's organization in the town, the club has assumed responsibility for several projects which ordinarily are directed by special groups in larger communities. It is sponsor of the Girl Scouts, to name one. To take the place of a Parent-Teacher association, Mrs. Kohler last year organized school and home forums, and these are to be held again in January.

No account of the club would be complete without a word about its meeting place. Charming Waelderhaus is a replica on an enlarged scale of the original home of the Kohler family in Austria. An Austrian architect was brought here especially to do the work when it was built.

You will have your choice of skins especially selected from our New York collection and it is possible to obtain additional skins should you require them. This incomparably beautiful collection comes from the most famous of the sable sections of Russia: Barguzin, Kamchatka, Yakutsky. It includes many of the extremely rare, small silky skins which are so much desired.

Single skins range from 195.00 to 1750.00 for a few of the very rarest. Stoles from 2500.00. Jackets from 6000.00. Coats from 15,000.00. All custom made to your order in the Fur Salon.

All subject to 20% Federal Excise Tax.

Heads of Two Patriotic Clubs to Visit Here

National heads of two patriotic societies will be welcomed as special guests at local gatherings this month. Mrs. Julius Young Talmadge of Washington, D. C., president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will be here for a meeting of Chicago chapter of the D. A. R. at 1:30 o'clock the afternoon of Dec. 14, and Illinois branch of the Society Daughters of Colonial Wars will entertain with a Christmas musical tea at 3 o'clock Friday for Mrs. Frederick A. Sapp, president of the national D. C. W.

Mrs. Julius Young Talmadge.

Mrs. Charles Romaine Curtiss of Joliet, state head of the latter organization, has invited other national officers, as well as state presidents of other patriotic groups to the musical, which is to be given in Curtiss hall of the Fine Arts building. The program will be shared by Mrs. Lois Davidson Lutz, pianist, and Mrs. E. C. Bassett and Mrs. R. D. Richards, singers.

The Chicago chapter meeting, scheduled at the Stevens hotel, is under the direction of Mrs. Herbert J. Maass, chapter regent, and Mrs. Franklin M. Miller, program chairman. Officers of the Illinois D. A. R. will assist the chapter's official corps in receiving the guests.

In addition to holding office with the D. C. W., Mrs. Sapp serves as registrar and membership chairman of the Illinois D. A. R., and she will review D. A. R. projects and accomplishments at the society's third state chairmen's luncheon at noon Friday in the Wedgwood room of Marshall Field & Co. Other speakers at this meeting will include Mrs. J. DeForest Richards, state regent, who will discuss "National By-Laws in Relation to Chapters"; Mrs. Thomas R. Hemmens, vice state regent, who will tell of chapter work with Children of the American Revolution, and the committee chairmen, Mrs. Burton Wheeler and Miss Florence Deneen.

Mrs. Frederick A. Sapp.

When Illinois chapter of the Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America holds its annual Christmas luncheon at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday in the Pine room of the Chicago College club, the program will be highlighted with a Christmas story, "Cherished and Shared of Old," related by Ruth Swander Brownlee. Mrs. James Henry Jackson will preside.

At 12:30 o'clock Thursday, members of Pilgrim Colony of the National Society of New England Women will gather at the Blackstone hotel for their annual Christmas luncheon. There will be an address by Mrs. Charles H. Clark, founder-president of the Conference of Club Presidents and Program Chairmen, and a Christmas narrative, "On the Hill Top at Christmas," will be told by Mrs. Minnie Moreland Dow.

ENGAGED.

Miss Radiance Jacqueline David's engagement to Pvt. Milton Borack of the army is announced by her mother, Mrs. James S. Harris, and Lt. Harris of the navy, of the Sovereign hotel. Miss David, whose father was the late Louis David, attended the University of Wisconsin. Her fiance, son of Mrs. Fannie Borack of Humboldt blvd., studied at De Paul university and now is stationed at Camp Butler, N. C.

British Old People's Home Board to Meet

Board members of the British Old People's home will meet at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday, Dec. 12, in the committee room of the First National Bank building. Mrs. George Cooke-Adams will preside.

G. I. Marital Adjustment Is Meeting Topic

How wives may assist in bridging smoothly the years and miles of separation between G. I. Joes and their families necessitated during this war time will be one of the several topics on which attention will be focused at an all-day institute on "Post-War Marriage Adjustments," to be conducted Tuesday by the Association for Family Living. All interested persons are invited to attend the assembly, which will be held at the Standard club.

Mrs. Evelyn Millis Duvall. (Acme Photo.)

The program will be opened at 9 a. m. by Mrs. Evelyn Millis Duvall, association director, who will outline general problems foreseen in the marital adjustment of returning soldiers. The luncheon hour will bring as speakers Dr. Therese Benedek of the Institute for Psychoanalysis, whose topic will be "Signs and Symptoms of Marital Difficulties Ahead," and Dr. Reuben Hill, head of the sociology department at the University of South Dakota, who will discuss "Love and Marriage in War Time and After."

• • •

"Which War Marriage Will Succeed" will be Ernest W. Burgess' subject when he addresses the morning gathering, and appearing on the same program will be Will O'Neil, Chicago newspaper man, whose talk will be titled "The Wife G. I. Joe Wants to Come Back To."

An afternoon panel on "Community Plans for Post-war Marriage" will have for discussants Jesse Jacobs of the Veterans' Information center; A. W. Loos of the Department of Ministry to Service Men; Alexander Ropchan, executive secretary with the health division of the Council of Social Agencies, and Arthur Hillman of the federal security agency.

Kappa Kappa Gamma to Hear Book Talk Friday

When members and guests of the Chicago Intercollegiate association of Kappa Kappa Gamma gather for luncheon at 12:30 o'clock Friday in the English room at Marshall Field & Co., they will hear Mrs. Donn R. Court review A. J. Cronin's recently published book, "The Green Years." Mrs. Robert H. Watson of 1930 W. 101st pl. is in charge of reservations.

Fashions and Fancy

By Judith Cass

Fashions in fancy Christmas decorations are displayed by the Woman's Exchange of Chicago, in whose N. Michigan av. shop are to be found dozens of attractive trees, candles, boxes, ornaments, and the like. They all look as if they could be made at home by a person equipped with scissors, paper, glue, imagination, and good taste. One of the exchange's most stunning centerpieces was borne off triumphantly from the shop's Christmas sale by a tall woman gowned in a purple suit and green knit blouse, against which the vivid red decoration was a blinding sight. The centerpiece was the size of a child's drum, which it resembled. The outside was bound in red paper and edged in ruching at the top and bottom. The top was covered with shiny green paper, on which was mounted a miniature Christmas tree laden with gold and green balls; a tiny Santa Claus with about four of his reindeer, and a number of miniature Christmas presents, some not more than an inch square, wrapped in the gayest of stripes and tied with the prettiest of ribbons. Some decorations that would be far simpler to make were the stylized cone shaped Christmas trees made of white paper and decorated haphazardly with gold, silver, and colored stars, candy canes, animals, balls, and other designs. Also in the "simple" class are effective candle bases made of small round boxes, perhaps three inches high and three inches across, which are painted silver and then decorated with a tasseled rope swag in painted green or red. Other candle bases are flat ones covered with silver paper and backed by Christmas trees or angles cut out of the silver.

Santa Claus.

The art of complementing a "good basic suit" with striking accessories to add up to something out of the ordinary in the way of costumes unconsciously was illustrated by several feminine guests at a recent luncheon of the Chicago branch of the English-Speaking union. Mrs. John W. Clarke, who recently returned to Chicago after a residence of several years near Washington, D. C., came to the luncheon in a gray dressmaker suit so finely ruled in white that it seemed from a distance to be a monotone shade. A handsome diamond circlet was pinned over one pocket, and the saucy little gray hat tilted over her forehead was crested in peacock-toned feathers. Another version of the beloved feather bonnet was Miss June Lockett's—a little toque of gracefully curled gray ostrich plumes which contributed a wholly feminine touch to a man tailored suit of chalk striped gray wool. Mrs. Russell Hobbs, another gray suit devotee, added spice to hers with a smart chapeau in a luscious raspberry shade, swathed in raspberry veiling.

Mrs. John W. Clarke. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Seated in the center at the long speakers' table at a luncheon meeting of the Chicago chapter of Friends of the Land recently in the Palmer House was Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, wearing a distinguished black frock with a double strand of pearls gleaming at the vee neckline, and an attractive small hat of bottle green breast feathers. Not far from her was Miss Elizabeth Howland, dressed in brown, her short white curls swept smartly back and up. Large gold buttons flashed down the bodice of the dress and a little brown hat tip-tilted down over her forehead. Also at the speakers' table was Mrs. Charles R. Walgreen, in a colorful dress of persimmon wool and an unusual necklace of turquoises. Her hat was of pheasant breast feathers. Other interested luncheon guests were Mrs. E. V. L. Brown, in a pretty hat of rose velvet trimmed with several roses, and her son, Bradford Brown, who was using crutches, having lost one leg as the result of an accident several months ago.

Jewish Women's Council to Hold Forum Wednesday

Mrs. Frank Reicin, legislative chairman for the national affairs group of Chicago section of the National Council of Jewish Women, will discuss the problem of cartels in the post-war era at a forum meeting of the council at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday. Mrs. Charles Levin, educational director of the forum, will preside.

The council's career group, meeting at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the home of the Misses Regina and Blanche Milenbach, 6725 Ridgeland av., will hear Rabbi Aaron Kamerling review Dr. Solomon Lipzin's book, "Germany's Stepchildren." There will be a tea and social hour afterward, and the president, Miss Reta Korr, has called a brief preliminary business session.

Palm Beach Anticipating Gala Season

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA. This resort is now occupied mainly with getting settled; digging in for what is confidently expected to be the biggest and brightest season in 10 years. This opinion is shared by the Chamber of Commerce, the Real Estate board, the gentlest cynic, and the most cheerful pessimist, so there seems no escape.

Finding a needle in a haystack is a mere bagatelle compared to finding a house or apartment at this late date. The seasoned Palm Beach colonist either owns his own vine and fig tree or reserves a house, suite, or apartment a year in advance.

Real estate activity during the last year has maintained a dizzy pace—more than 100 transfers in residences alone. The trend is distinctly toward the smaller type of house, the 20 to 40 room jobs being in the white elephant category at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross J. Beatty of Chicago, who sold their Ocean blvd. house, have bought and remodeled Mal Maison, in Stotesbury Park. Stotesbury Park, a handsome residence section, was once the lake side portion of El Mirasol, the Stotesbury estate. Mal Maison was the jewel box of a house occupied by James H. R. Cromwell, Mrs. Stotesbury's son.

Blueprints for post-war building include numerous new hotels and apartments, as well as domiciles. One plan for a million-and-a-half dollar hotel on the ocean front has been announced definitely.

The Bath and Tennis club opened its season officially on Friday. Many from the Chicago colony attended the numerous luncheon parties given on the opening day. The Sun and Surf club and the Sea Spray Beach club also opened Friday.

The Society of Four Arts has an imposing list of exhibitions, musicales, and lectures scheduled for the coming season. The first art showing will be one of water colors next Friday, with Arthur Bradley Campbell, a great favorite with Chicagoans, in charge. Dances for officers at near-by bases have been given all summer at the Four Arts with local girls acting as hostesses. These dances will continue every two weeks during the winter season.

Every day witnesses the arrival of Chicagoans. Mrs. Frank Osgood Butler has been here for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nathaniel Gifford of Elgin have opened their Sea Breeze av. villa. Col. and Mrs. Robert H. Morse of Lake Forest, who are at their Dunbar road villa, will be joined by Robert H. Morse Jr. and Charles H. Morse. Col. Morse's daughter, Mrs. Morse McCall, stayed at her County rd. villa nearly all summer, spending only six weeks in Lake Forest. Mrs. George Rasmussen Jr. is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Watt Jr., on Jungle rd., while Lt. Rasmussen is overseas.

Sumner Welles, former undersecretary of state, and Mrs. Welles are expected this week-end at their Bellaria residence. It was here that Mr. Welles wrote much of his book "Time for Decision."

Mrs. James W. Carnahan of Chicago has been busy with decorators since arriving last week at her lovely home on Everglades Island. She will be joined soon by Mr. Carnahan.

Since Florida seceded from the Union in the matter of Thanksgiving, Palm Beach celebrated last Thursday. Some colonists observed both national and state holidays on the theory that neither turkey nor cocktails are rationed.

Philadelphia Schools Test Counselors

sought advice from older, more experienced teachers who knew a distraught child from a bad one. And all the time they talked with children and parents, reporting their mistakes and successes to the head of the division and his equally capable assistant, also a social worker. In short, the counseling teachers, as they were called, were trained exactly as a master craftsman trains an alert, promising apprentice: by handling actual cases under close supervision instead of relying completely on book theory, but not expected or allowed to attempt the impossible. They knew that, fundamentally, no matter how inept they might be at first, a sympathetic heart, a ready ear, and a mum tongue would remedy more children's difficulties than a basketful of shiny new degrees.

After an initial resentment the teachers and principals accepted their help because it paid off in school efficiency. The counseling teachers worked with the mean bully, the shy and withdrawn child, the boy every one picks on, the bright, restless child, the one who vomits at the sight of a reading book, the sissy, and the show-off; they helped each child individually "to set up his problem as it feels to him, personally, and to work on it in his own way; to bring him something new, such as information he does not have and help him consider how he may be able to use it; and to recognize and accept elements in the situation which will not yield to his pressure and to which he will need to adjust insofar as he is able."

There is plenty of honest difference of opinion about the Philadelphia plan; but it is of interest to other cities because it is a forthright, capable attempt to combine the findings of education, psychiatry, and social work into a way of handling children that brings in what others besides teachers know. And this, of course, makes the average schoolmarm hopping mad. She doesn't like to admit that any one else knows anything about children. Schools that are willing to ask authorities outside the teaching profession what they also know about children would seem likely to learn more than those which are closed to any idea not originating within the teaching ranks. There are wide implications in the Philadelphia plan. It might even make schooling an effective experience.

Old Pueblo Is Sunny Mecca to Celebrities

TUCSON, ARIZ.

The late William Allen White used to characterize the Old Pueblo as one of America's most civilized communities. Certainly it is a constant mecca for artists and writers and others who have dedicated themselves to the extension and deepening of American culture.

Obviously Tucson is not at any one time host to as many renowned cultural figures as is Chicago. But the sunshine city has more such figures per capita, and they are more accessible.

Last week Jessica Dragonette was in town as guest of her brother, a well known local bank official. Miss Dragonette will appear in a war bond concert out at the university auditorium. Vicki Baum and Erskine Caldwell will also be presented on the same occasion. The latter author, with his wife, a University of Arizona graduate, lives in a colorful Mexican ranch style home out in the Catalina foothills.

Dale Nichols is a familiar figure out at Wild Horse ranch, where he recently assisted Host Howard Miller in gay decorative mural arrangements. Nichols, originally a Chicagoan, is famed for the red barns he paints for magazine covers. Miss Anne Swainson, Chicago department store designer, is a new arrival at Wild Horse, as is Miss Josephine Leles of Chicago.

Deer hunting was on the calendar at Kenyon ranch last week. Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Pearson of Chicago went off on a long trek with two fellow nimrods, Al Donau and Ray Hanks of Tucson. Al formerly was head wrangler for Kenyon's boss, Bill Allen.

The Santa Rita continues to be a popular resort hotel, with a full complement of middle westerners scheduled to arrive for winter vacations this year.

Known to many of Arizona's winter visitors as one of the former owners and directors of the Hacienda Del Sol, previously a girls' boarding school, Doris Coate Oesting has taken over Rancho Santa Cruz this year. Miss Oesting's ranch is near the famous Tumacacori mission, a few miles north of the border. The Santa Cruz ranch property is on the site of the old Rancho Baca-Float, a land grant ceded by the king of Spain in 1692.

Simple ranch living, hearty cuisine, and a chance to "dream the dreams you haven't had time for these busy years" are featured by the ranch's hostess. Anent the latter, she speaks with authority, having just surrendered a key post with the foreign economic administration wherein she was in charge of important aspects of Latin-American trade.

With the entire globe now the arena of action of interest to Americans, you can depend on the Chicago Tribune's news gathering facilities to bring you accurate reports of every significant happening.

Ancient Yet Modern—That's New Orleans

By Mildred Peterson.

NEW ORLEANS, La., [Special].—This famous old city, which is crowded today as never before in its colorful history, has the atmosphere of old France, Spain, and Italy with all the modern embellishments. New Orleans is different in many respects from all other American cities. It is an ancient city, as well as a modern one—a city of charming contrasts. Visitors call it "America's Most Interesting City" because there is so much to see and do here that cannot be seen or done elsewhere.

An overnight trip from Chicago brings you here, but hotel reservations are at a premium. Signs are on every registration desk notifying the visitor that the maximum stay is five days—and they mean it!

If you are fortunate enough to get to New Orleans, Canal st., built over the old canal, will be one of the first thorofares you will encounter. It is about seven miles long, with the busy harbor port at one end, Lake Pontchartrain at the other end, and the famous monumental cemeteries midway between.

Every visitor to New Orleans wants to spend some time on the "downtown" side of Canal st., the Vieux Carre, meaning "Old Square," which is more popularly known as the French quarter. Gone are the swashbuckling pirates, the Lafitte brothers and Dominique You, but the same irresistible magnetic force which drew these carefree adventurers to Nouvelle Orleans many years ago today beckons to the visitor.

The straight narrow streets, called banquettes, many of which were paved with ballast [stone blocks from Belgium]; the quaint architecture of the buildings; exquisite iron-trellised balconies; graceful fan windows; lovely patios or courtyards; myriad-shaped roofs and chimneys and cluttered antique shops all retain the scenes and settings for the romances, tragedies, and incidents connected with the birth of civilization in the entire Mississippi valley. The homes in this section were built flush to the sidewalks so that those on one side of the street would benefit from the shade of those on the other.

Here is to be found Jackson square, scene of many historical events, over which seven flags have flown. Here also are Cabildo, scene of the transfer of this territory at various times, which now houses the splendid Louisiana State museum; St. Louis cathedral, built in 1794 and one of the most famous churches in North America; Presbytere, used as a house for ecclesiastical purposes and now part of the museum; Pontalba apartments, believed to be the oldest apartment building in the country; the French market dating back to 1791; Mme. John's Legacy, built about 1728 and considered the oldest building in the Mississippi valley; Ursuline convent, built in 1734 in which lived the first Catholic sisters to establish themselves in the United States; Old Absinthe House, built about 1752, a rendezvous and bar for bon-vivants from then until now, where Albert Barail still serves absinthe, and where Gen. Andrew Jackson and Lafitte are believed to have planned the Battle of New Orleans; and Casa Hové, a particularly beautiful old house built in 1797, which has been praised by architects as being one of the most perfect examples of building during the Spanish days.

Brilliant Colors in Stone Forests on Painted Desert

Phoenix, Ariz.—There is one great national forest which requires no fire protection and where one could never start a bonfire with trees. It's the forest of stone, or the Petrified Forest National Monument of Arizona.

This great area of mummified giants covers 90,302 acres and is on the rim of the Painted Desert, where petrified trees gleam in the brilliant colors of the rainbow. In the monument there are six principal districts of vivid coloration and these are known as the Blue Stone forest, the First, Second, and Third forests, the Black forest, and the Painted Desert forest. All have a distinct individuality.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 club	1 spade	2 clubs	4 spades
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of clubs.

We have many times observed that it went counter to the instincts of most players to play the ace from the ace, queen. They believe the combination was made for the purpose of exercising the finesse, and failure to do so is somewhat in the nature of a sacrilege to these players.

Similarly on the defense, it is next door to impossible to persuade a player ever to lead into an ace, queen. Early in life, he is told to lead thru strength, but never up to it. Slogans are a poor substitute for common sense. If there is only one suit available in which you find you can take tricks, that is the suit to attack, regardless of all adages, superstitions, or political affiliations.

Today's hand provides a striking illustration of this principle. Against a four spade contract, North led the six of clubs, which South won with the queen. West followed with the nine. Since the three of clubs is missing, there is a strong suspicion that North holds it.

It is true that West might be false carding; the chances are, however, that North held five clubs because it is apparent that he had very little else to justify his raise. One club trick and two heart tricks will not defeat the contract.

Unless the defense can win a trick in diamonds, all is lost. But this is the important consideration, the trick in diamonds must be built up in a hurry before the strong heart holding in dummy is developed on which West may discard a losing diamond. South, therefore, quite properly returned the jack of diamonds trusting North to have the king. If he didn't have it, all hope was gone and furthermore it would be time for North to pay a visit to his pro to brush up on the nature of his free raises.

Declarer won the trick, extracted trumps, and led the nine of hearts. This lost to the queen and the diamond ace was now driven out. The defense taking two hearts, a diamond, and a club. Note that if, at trick two, South had continued with a club it would have been too late to have built up the diamond trick. Declarer would have ruffed and established two good heart tricks in dummy before the diamond suit could have been cleared by the opposition.

Gift Making Builds Manual Skill in Child

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

(Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

"A home in which the children as well as the grownups plan and save for Christmas, and also make gifts, has something in it of the true spirit of Christmas. Also this 'doing' provides happy, even inspired, occupation for the weeks before the great day . . ." This and other things we have said about giving at this season of the year.

At this time of the year our desire is to shower our children with gifts. We want to give them the things they long for or which we know they will enjoy. But if we let it go at that, we are depriving them of the joy of giving, an experience they can have even when very young.

Also we are depriving them of another experience: that of going without something they want for themselves in order to spend their money for some one they love.

This kind of saving is a form of self-control, with incentive, that is fine and valuable character training. I scarcely need to add that it is most effective if we don't get "stuffy" or moral about it to our children. Its spontaneity is what makes it "take," not its dutifulness.

The other thought I want to bring to you is the part in a child's education, even in his character, that is played by the creation of things with his hands. I believe every child should be encouraged to use his hands in some useful or artistically creative pursuit.

There is a kind of development, and a sort of satisfaction too, that accompanies the skilful use of one's hands. It is a rounding thing. We use our minds; we use our whole bodies often, as in work or dancing or sports; we use our emotions; but to complete a rounded development of the whole personality I think children should be taught the deft use of their hands—about the home or grounds, in a craft, such as carpentry, knitting, or sewing; a trade or hobby, or in an art, such as painting, drawing, sculpturing, or the playing of some musical instrument.

If this is an aspect of your child's development that has been skipped so far, the making of Christmas gifts or Christmas cards can serve as a taking-off place. The incentive of giving and the lift that comes with the joyousness of the season will furnish the inspiration and the momentum to carry the manual work thru to completion. And next year will find your children really branching out with skilful hands. For, in the interim, with this much of a start and if you give them encouragement, they will have gone on to the making of other things, gradually gaining in dexterity with practice.

You may wonder, if you are somewhat new at these doings yourself, of what your encouragement should consist. Well, it will consist of a sincere show of interest in what is attempted, the providing of the materials needed to create or work with, and possibly the exercise of your own manual skills in the art or craft that appeals to you—even if you are a novice at it yourself. That last fact doesn't matter, for learning together creates a bond.

Perhaps one practical hint would not be out of place here. When your children decide to make gifts for Christmas, or if you are instigating such a project for them, lend a guiding hand so that they do not attempt anything too ambitious or too intricate or one that promises to be too long drawn out. For there is nothing so discouraging to a little child, or a young person either, as to start something which, as it progresses, becomes tedious or seems to be doomed for failure.

Fashions

By Angela

Dance dresses assume prime importance in the holiday wardrobes at this season. Nets, taffeta, jerseys in the delicate pastel tones and white, vie with black, and striped, or plaid taffetas. Bouffant dresses have full, billowing skirts, and the black crepes are sheathlike delights.

A charming party dress is this one of pink net over rustling taffeta. Two deep flounces appear to give the skirt even greater fullness.

[For further information call Angela, Superior 0200. Mail requests should be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope.]

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

The kind of perfume a man chooses for a woman, we have discovered, is invariably indicative of the image he has of her. The perfume selection is as a mirror, reflecting his mental picture of Her.

Which is probably why men almost always choose perfumes that are a bit on the exotic side. Women who don't like their husband's tastes in perfume really oughtn't say so. They're being flattered. When a man chooses a perfume that's sophisticated and haunting and even a little bit daring, it's because he thinks the woman to whom he gives it is a pretty provocative person. Actually, she may be a mousy creature who'd much prefer a light floral fragrance—and might even be better suited by one—but if he thinks she's an enchantress it should be all right with her! Greater flattery probably could not be bestowed.

A perfume we'd call flattering—in this subtle sense and certainly in other more tangible ones—isn't new, but it's worn so very well with its devoted public, masculine and feminine, that we can safely recommend it to the men shoppers who want a scent that's got the suggestion of sorcery. It's rich and warm and lasting, and it's utterly sophisticated but not vulgar. It's the kind of a perfume you remember, and that somehow helps fix the memory of a woman in your mind.

The women we know who use it are never even tempted to try something different. It has elegance, the note in a perfume that makes even well worn clothes feel like costly new garments on their wearer; it has lift, too. A breath of this on wrist or hankie helps a woman feel that the world is a pretty good place after all, and that she has a special niche in it.

• • •

A less important reason for choosing this is the lovely bottle in which it comes. It's classic and luxurious, as satisfying to the eye as its lush contents are to the senses!

[For information telephone Eleanor Nangle, Superior 0200, or write her care of the Chicago Sunday Tribune. Please inclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for written reply.]

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.

This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It is so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please in every way.

Lady of the House

In December Aunt Ella always does her "looking backward"; making a sort of mental survey of what the year, and the years, have brought—usually while she's fixing something special for the holidays. Sometimes it makes her sad, sometimes she gets a laugh, and sometimes she even makes a resolution or two of her own.

So it came about that while she was shredding the red cabbage [Joe Pete's special], she mentioned the time when she was a very small girl which has stuck in her memory, as such incidents will.

It was a fiercely cold winter day; the window was thickly covered with frost. Feeling sort of pent up, she took a warm poker and thawed a little round spot on one of the small panes. Putting one bright blue eye to the peephole she spied a team of oxen plodding up the road to the little town. As the heavy bobsled drew opposite she noticed the driver on the hard plank seat was a woman, muffled against the cold and contentedly puffing on a clay pipe.

Last week on a city boulevard Aunt Ella saw a smartly dressed young woman, quite possibly the great-granddaughter of the one riding behind the plodding oxen so long ago, walk briskly along while puffing on a new streamlined pipe.

Aunt Ella has grown mellowed and tolerant with the years, so she merely shrugs her still shapely shoulders and says since women have already taken from men their exclusive rights to their sports, their jobs, their pants, their drinks, their cigarets, why not their pipes?

By now the cabbage has been quickly blanched and drained and a few tablespoonfuls of her special spiced vinegar added. Some fat has been heating with two chopped shalots, to which the cabbage is added to steam for about 10 minutes. Meanwhile two tart apples are cubed, sugar, salt, and a bit of pepper added, and the whole steamed until tender. Just before serving, Aunt Ella stirs in a spoonful or two of currant marmalade. If you have anything better to serve with roast goose or pork, she wants to know. So does Joe Pete.

The Empty House.

The roof was bad, the house was old
But this we never did behold
For its windows shone, its lawn was trim
And we loved the soul that lived within.
But now it is empty, its door shut tight;
At night there is no friendly light;
It seems to sag—it seems to say,
"Will ever again my rooms be gay?
Will ever the smoke from my chimney curl
And in the floating breeze its veil unfurl?"
It seems to know that she has left,
For the empty house looks so bereft.

C-A-T.

Today he learned to spell a word
And startled at my work I heard
Him running on swift, eager feet,
His Indian-yelling filled the street,
He burst upon me, threw his hat
Shouting, "Gee, Mom, I can spell cat!
He pushed a paper up at me,
There was the printed C-A-T;
I thought that wonders never ceased
For suddenly that simple beast
Upon a pedestal had leaped
And grateful homage from me Reaped;
No other animal will do,
Not even rare ones from the zoo,
To teach a child the way to spell,
Just C-A-T will do quite well.
MILLY WALTON.

In an old journal [time of Franco-Prussian war] there is an account of some of the principal and lesser actors in the Passion Play being called to arms. "They went forth attended by the prayers of all whom they had edified by their performance," and up to the time of the writing no report had been received of any being even wounded, altho other villages of Bavaria mourned their dead. On the House

By Louise Bargelt

When woodwork and furniture are so bruised and marred that they cannot be touched up or patched with any certainty of good results, a complete refinishing is necessary. There are many points to keep in mind about wood refinishing, small points which all have their effect on the final results and which make for success or failure. [We've prepared a free leaflet on the subject.] Paint removers must be used freely; temperature of room must be considered; sandpapering must be properly done, and the wood surface put in good shape before any finish is applied: paint, enamel, varnish, stain, shellack or wax.

[If you wish this leaflet on Wood Refinishing Pointers, please send stamped, addressed envelope to Louise Bargelt, Home Owners' Editor, The Chicago Tribune.]

Steamed Fruit Pudding Good Yule Dessert

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Steamed puddings are modern adaptations of the old fashioned bag puddings, mixtures of suet, raisins, flour, and seasonings, which were tied in bags and boiled for hours. Steaming is a neater, easier way to do the cooking, but there are families who like the traditional bag pudding at Christmas, for sentimental reasons. Sometimes the recipe used is one which has been passed along in a family for generations.

This old recipe for bag pudding may be steamed in pudding molds if you prefer.

English Bag Pudding.

½ cup sliced blanched almonds
1¼ cups raisins
1½ cups currants
½ cup chopped candied orange peel
½ cup chopped citron
½ cup chopped candied lemon peel
1 lemon [rind alone used]
3 tablespoons sugar
½ cup sherry
1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt
1¾ cups dry bread crumbs
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
½ pound chopped or ground suet
4 eggs
½ cup ale or beer

Mix almonds, raisins, currants, peel, and citron. Saturate sugar with oil from lemon rind by scraping rind over sugar with a paring knife [in the original recipe you use the lemon to crush lumps of sugar which thus take on the sharp lemon flavor]. Add sherry. Sift flour with spices, and salt. Mix with fruit and add crumbs, brown sugar, and suet. Beat eggs until light; add sugar, sherry, and ale or beer. Mix thoroly. Moisten center of a large linen napkin, grease lightly, and flour. Mold pudding into a ball and tie in the napkin. Make the knot tight, but allow a little room for expansion. Immerse in rapidly boiling water, suspending pudding so that it does not touch bottom of kettle. Keep water boiling, adding more as necessary. Boil for 5 hours. Pudding keeps well. Serve reheated and sliced, with hard sauce.

More wine may be used in place of the ale or beer. Rum or brandy or fruit juice might be used if preferred.

Steamed Cranberry Pudding.
[Serves eight.]

2 cups cranberries, cut in halves
½ cup molasses
½ cup hot water
½ cup sugar
½ cup raisins
1½ cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon soda

Combine berries with other ingredients, sifting soda with flour before mixing. Turn into greased mold, filling two-thirds full. Cover tightly and steam for about 2½ hours. Serve warm with lemon sauce.

Yankee Plum Pudding.

1 cup ground beef suet
1 cup molasses
3 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 cup raisins
1 cup nuts

Work suet with hands until creamy. Add molasses. Sift dry ingredients together and add alternately with milk. Dredge raisins and nuts with part of the flour and add. Fill greased molds two-thirds full and cover tightly. Steam for three hours, and serve hot with any pudding sauce.

To steam puddings without a steamer, place some kind of rack in a large kettle, place the pudding molds on the rack, add boiling water to the kettle. Keep it covered tightly while the water boils and the pudding steams.

If you have no pudding molds, use tin cans, tying wax paper covers tightly over the tops.

Any to-be-steamed pudding of suitable proportions may be placed in the upper part of a double boiler and cooked over hot water. The double boiler should have a tight fitting cover.

Smart Lounge Wear Makes an Ideal Gift

By Rea Seeger.

Christmas gift collections of negligees, house robes, and hostess gowns, have everything: color, romance, and glamor. They are the most exciting of the year, surpassing even the romantic showings of bridal models. Every year the showings seem to attain a new allure, for knowing designers use every effort to make these robes and gowns the very essence of feminine charm and beauty.

Lace, velvet, satin, marabou, ostrich feathers, soft, warm woolens, silks, taffetas, and all the rainbow colors, combine to make outstanding collections that will, this year, vanish in record time. Shoppers are out early, quickly taking the most glamorous models, so if you want something new, something romantic, shop early!

Thin wool as diaphanous as summer chiffon makes some of the most unusual boudoir coats and robes. Most of them are lined with satin or chiffon. Pastel colors and white lead the preference list, and the most effective trim is wide, luxurious bands of blending marabou; next are the picture book models with glinting motifs of silver or gold thread, braid embroidery, or flashing bands of sequins.

Black velvet housecoats are exquisite. They are so beautifully made that they can double easily for dinner dresses. Many are decoratively trimmed with fine lace, others with fur, and many are simply tailored to make the most of the lovely velvet itself.

Padded and quilted robes rate high in the collections. You will find dozens of gay satins in red, deep winter blue, gold, pink, pastel blue, all lined with contrasting colors. Sometimes there are glittering rhinestone buttons, but most of them depend upon the beauty of the colors and the quilted designs for decorative appeal. Striped and printed satins and soft silks make other fetching models. The pastel prints are feminine and flattering, and many of these robes have lace frills on the edges of collars, cuffs, and pocket flaps.

A good wool tailored housecoat is worth its weight in cash. Such coats are expensive but worth every penny. The classic affairs of simple, tailored lines are ideal travel and all-purpose models, and there's a grand color range: red, wine, deep blue, and pastels.

Listed with these are the stunning housecoats of fine wool, in Scotch plaid designs. These have black velvet collars and cuffs, and feature unusual background colors, such as blue, gold, white, and flame red, with the authentic Scotch plaid in red, yellow, green, and bright blue. Short brunch coats of this lilting plaid wool are made in the same style, but do not have the black velvet cuffs and collars.

Lounging pajamas still are high fashion. They come in vivid colors and contrasts, as well as in black satin and black velvet combinations with gay printed or brocaded tops. Long tasseled sash belts swing at the side. There also are padded and quilted lounging pajamas that are the last word in gay, warm appeal. And this year you'll find unusually large collections of bed jackets. Many are the regulation short variety, but the smartest and newest are the knee length models, coats that can be worn around the house with lounging slacks or thin dresses.

Sketched are five new models, from one of the smartest shops in town, all from the Christmas gift collection. For further information call Superior 0200.

Why You Need These TWO Colognes

It is as wrong to wear a spicy fragrance when in close contact with others as to wear an evening gown on the golf links. It is as inappropriate to wear a subtle fragrance out-of-doors as to wear shorts to a dance. So—in the daytime, for out-of-doors, wear the spicy fragrance of ECHO by BROSIS . . . in the evening for dinner, for dancing, wear the smooth, subtle fragrance of THEME . . . To be correct, insist on ECHO for daytime, THEME for night.

A Weekly Sponsored Column of Things Advertised and Interesting.

NEW YORK, N. Y. Dec. 3rd—There's romance in a peanut! This little legume (not really a nut, you know) traveled from South of the Border to Europe, Africa and Asia before the slave-trading "blackbirders" brought it to the United States. Ever since, it's been an integral part of the Nation's health diet. And PETER PAN Peanut Butter is the Nation's favorite brand! I've told you before of the superiority of PETER PAN . . . so rich in vitamins and proteins . . . the peanut butter that does NOT stick to the roof of your mouth because it's multiple-milled. Ask your Grocer for PETER PAN Peanut Butter . . . full of the flavor of fresh, roasted peanuts!

Nancy Sasser

The taste of meat, more than almost anything else, depends on YOU . . . for even round steak can be an epicurean treat if you treat it right! (No punning intended!) Take this recipe, for instance . . . the secret of its moist and tender flavorfulness is HEINZ Condensed Cream of Tomato Soup. Try this easy and inexpensive recipe—adding the fresh-from-the-garden flavor of satin-skinned "Aristocrat" Tomatoes, PLUS the moist, rich taste of real cream with which the soup is blended. This is just one of scores of delicious and inexpensive recipes in a FREE booklet at your Grocer's. Just ask for "57-Ways to Use HEINZ Condensed Soups"!

SAVORY SWISS STEAK

½ cup flour
2 teaspoons salt
Dash pepper
2 lbs. round steak
3 tablespoons fat
1 medium onion, sliced
½ cup chopped green pepper
1 11-oz. can Heinz Condensed Cream of Tomato Soup, diluted with an equal quantity of water.

Rub flour, salt and pepper into the steak with a saucer. Brown on both sides in fat. Circle and top the steak with onion slices and chopped green pepper. Add diluted Soup. Simmer slowly, covered, on top of stove for two hours. Serves 6.

Remember that HEINZ Condensed soups give double contents! Just add an equal quantity of water or milk to have twice as much as one can holds!

"Glamour" in a Compact!

From right now on until Christmas, you MUST look your prettiest,—for there's no gayer time of the year! And I don't know a better investment you can make than this little 49c compact case filled with ANGELUS Make-Up from the House of LOUIS PHILIPPE. It spreads over your face and throat a thrilling, new "Glamour-film" that covers freckles, tiny blemishes, little wrinkles and those tired signs of too-late hours! Choose Sun-Tan, Bronze, Tan, Flesh, or Neutral according to your complexion tones. Ask for ANGELUS Make-Up at Cosmetic Counters. If you don't find it, send name and address to Nancy Sasser, 271 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y., and I'll see that you get information as to where you can get it.

Check your silver NOW for Christmas . . . does it shine with the beautiful lustre it justly deserves? If not, then get busy with SILVO Liquid Silver Polish! Don't think this is going to be a chore,—for SILVO, being a liquid, sinks right into fine crevices or chased work, and with a light rub and a rinse, your polishing is done! SILVO is safe—won't scratch silver or stain your hands! One rub with SILVO does the job of three with ordinary silver polishes. Cost is just 25c at leading Department or Grocery Stores,—or write to Nancy Sasser, 271 Madison Avenue, New York 16, N. Y., for name of nearest dealer.

I'm not suggesting you "hoard" things . . . heaven forbid! But since cigarettes are on the short side, I can't think of anything nicer than VICEROYS to stick into Christmas stockings or to enclose in packages going campwards! Consider the EXTRA-advantages of VICEROYS . . . that unique tip that filters OUT resins, tars, and other throat irritants, and keeps tobacco crumbs IN the cigarette—that special blending of quality Turkish and domestic tobaccos! Add the full smoking enjoyment given the receiver and you'll KNOW why I recommend VICEROYS!

Too bad we can't all recover from physical ailments at a renowned Health Center like the Battle Creek Sanitarium! Next best is to use the products used and endorsed by them. LD-LAX, for instance The lactose, dextrins and bland vegetable ingredients combined in LD-LAX have been clinic-proved as helpful to sufferers from faulty elimination. Remember that LD-LAX was invented by a famous physician whose entire career was devoted to improving health through healthful eating! Let Battle Creek LD-LAX help bring back the gleam in your eye, the lift in your life! Get it at The Fair, Food Dept., or at your nearest Drug Store, or send a dime to Nancy Sasser, 271 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y., for a liberal trial sample.

Have you HELPING hands . . . hands that work for others? Be proud of them, then! Be especially proud of them if you're wise enough to keep them feeling smooth and soft, and looking lovely and white. It doesn't take much time to do this . . . just make PACQUINS Hand Cream a regular habit! After your hands are exposed to water, or to weather, try the gentle and soothing caress of PACQUINS . . . it will help restore hand-beauty that has been abused . . . help protect hands from further chapping abuse. This snow-white cream is a delight to use because it neither sticks nor spills — and a little goes a long way. Remember, though that once-a-day treatment isn't sufficent, especially if your hands are already red-rough or chapped looking . . . so use it after each washing and before going to bed at night. Ask for PACQUINS Hand Cream at Drug, Department or 10c Stores.

Say it with Mirrors . . .

"Say it with mirrors" this Christmas . . . in a way every member of the family will enjoy! Choose a handsome mirror in period frame for the living room . . . or you might make a more personal gift and have a "top" of either plate glass or shining mirror cut for Mother's dressing table . . . or surprise everybody with a check for that full length door mirror everybody's wanted for the hall! Call your Department or Furniture Store, or look in your classified telephone directory under PITTSBURGH Glass Products for your nearest dealer. Remember, that blue label—"Made from genuine PITTSBURGH Plate Glass" is your assurance of good plate glass!

"GOURMET" says . . .

Not only BUY-LINES readers . . . but national magazines are now singing the praises of Welch's MARMALADE and GRAPELADE. Here, for example, is a squib from GOURMET, the Magazine of Good Living: "A fresh orange marmalade is the new product of the Welch Grape Juice Company . . . the product has a full-bodied fruit taste, the thin bite of peel set prettily in jelly. 'Grapelade' is another Welch product not to be missed by the discerning of palate . . . What vinous fragrance! A spread that speaks so loudly for itself needs no recommendation from us!" Thus GOURMET, catering to the most discriminating food connoisseurs, backs up my opinion of these delectable fresh fruit spreads. Perfect companion-pieces for breakfast, lunch and dinner!

I'd star this little item for special Christmas gifts . . . for YARDLEY "Bond Street" Perfume is a distinguished fragrance that blends brilliant sophistication and sincere charm. The scent is really intriguing . . . leaving a memory of endearing and lingering loveliness. Spend as little as $2.50 for a holiday-boxed bottle . . . go on a gift spree with a $13.50 bottle . . sure in your choice of a quality perfume that will endow the women to whom you give it with a noble fragrance long remembered. YARDLEY "Bond Street" Perfume is a gift of exquisite taste! At finer shops everywhere!

Don't hesitate to put rayon hosiery on your Christmas Gift list—but insist on quality! I advise beautiful GORDON Run-Proof Stockings . . . so slenderizing, so subtly flattering, such beautiful shades! With the proper care, they'll wear and wear . . . for every stocking with the GORDON name is designed to give both SERVICE and BEAUTY! As featured recently in GOOD HOUSEKEEPING . .

1. Snagging on Furniture
2. Careless Laundering
3. Improper Garbering
4. Catching on Fingernails
5. Friction from worn shoe lining
6. Cutting from improper pedicure
7. Friction from worn shoe strap
8. Playful pats' claws
9. Cigarette burns or sparks

AND ASK for— GORDON!

IF you want EXTRA-long wear from your hosiery, ask for GORDON!

Simple Routine . . . for Lovelier Skin!

If you've a skin that's a happy hunting ground for blackheads and externally caused pimples,—then try the simple RESINOL routine. Wash face carefully with the distinctive lather of mild, pure RESINOL Soap every night. Dab affected parts with the famous RESINOL Ointment and leave on overnight. You'll be amazed at the help the medicated ingredients of this Ointment bring! It's so soothing, too, in cases of "fire-y" itching between the toes, chafing or occupational rash. Yes, RESINOL Ointment is THE reliable, long-famous "comforter" for the itchy burning of sundry skin irritations . . . DO keep it on hand always!
